

Water Conservation Measures Urged in Northern Westchester

By Rick Pezzullo

The Northern Westchester Joint Water Works (NWJWW) is urging residents in the municipalities it serves to implement water conservation measures while it undergoes capital improvements at its Amawalk Water Treatment Facility.

The NWJWW provides drinking water to Cortlandt, Yorktown, Somers, the Village of Buchanan and the Montrose Improvement District through the operation of two surface water treatment plants. Water is purchased from the New York City Department of Environmental Protection, treated at either the Catskill or Amawalk treatment facilities, and sold to the municipalities.

Each municipality is allotted a certain percentage of total production. During periods of a drought, a major leak, a system failure, or excessive consumption beyond the capacity of the system, he NWJWW has the authority to conserve and restrict water use based upon its needs to ensure adequate supply for domestic and firefighting needs.

The capital improvements at the Amawalk plant will reduce total production capacity by 25% and work will not be completed until late October 2021. Based on historic demands, this would not be a cause for concern. However, NWJWW has experienced an increase in demand as a direct result of COVID-19-imposed travel restrictions.

Given the plant's capacity is reduced and NWJWW is experiencing an overall increase in production, exclusive of summer demands, there are concerns NWJWW may not be able to keep up with future demand projections.

As a result, NWJWW is requesting residents conserve water, from July 12 to October 12.

The goal is to reduce demand without disrupting daily life. NWJWW officials stated the water restrictions do not apply to indoor domestic water use, such as laundry, washing dishes (by hand or dishwasher), personal hygiene needs, drinking or cooking and cleaning or sanitizing. NWJWW is requesting dishwashers only run with full loads to minimize water waste.

The mandatory water restrictions shall be implemented by following odd/even days for "outdoor usage." During the effective period, the following restrictions on water consumption shall apply.

- Persons or businesses located at even-numbered addresses may water lawns, shrubs, plants and gardens only on even-numbered days.
- Persons or businesses located at odd-numbered addresses may water lawns, shrubs, plants and gardens only on odd-numbered days.

- Persons and businesses located at addresses that are neither odd- nor even-numbered, such as numbers that end in a fraction or letter, shall follow the schedule for even numbered addresses.
- This provision shall not apply to plant nurseries and other commercial water users engaged in the business of growing, distributing or selling plants, shrubs or trees, only with respect to the use of water on their business premises for watering such plants, shrubs or trees.
- Swimming pools shall not be filled on weekends.
- The use of water hoses for street cleaning is prohibited.

The restrictions will be lifted as soon as demand projections change or operations changes.

Plans for Boys & Girls Club in Peekskill Moving Forward

By Rick Pezzullo

Plans are moving forward for a Boys & Girls Club to come to the City of Peekskill.

During a recent Peekskill Common Council work session, Alyzza Ozer, chief development officer for the Boys & Girls Club of Northern Westchester, discussed the Mount Kisco-based facility overseeing the transformation of the Kiley Youth Center on Main Street in Peekskill to a Boys & Girls Club.

"We're extraordinarily excited about the opportunity to work with all the partners in Peekskill," said Ozer, who noted initial talks about the partnership started about three years ago. "We work very hard and love what we do. We look forward to the opportunity to serve more kids."

In Mount Kisco, Ozer said the Boys & Girls Club, which has been located in the village for 82 years, serves about 500 youth, ages six months to 18 years old. Before the COVID-19 pandemic, about 750 kids took advantage of a variety of services and programs offered daily.

The Peekskill Boys & Girls Club, which is anticipated to open in spring 2023, has been jumpstarted by $2.5 million provided by the Westchester County Board of Legislators and $1.5 million allocated as part of a $10 million Downtown Revitalization Initiative (DRI) award the city received in 2019 from New York State that was solidified in May.

"I've been talking about this for a while. To see that we're at this point is very exciting. I can't stop shaking I'm so excited," said Peekskill Mayor Andre Rainey. "Youth has been a priority of mine."

"I think this is a real game changer for our residents and our children," said Councilwoman Patricia Riley. "It is a whole new day, a whole new beginning in Peekskill."

Peekskill School District Mourns Death of Student Who Drowned

By Rick Pezzullo

The Peekskill School District is mourning the death of a high school student who drowned while swimming in the Delaware River in Sullivan County.

The body of Liony Polonia Santos, 17, was recovered July 7, three days after he was pulled under by a current swimming with a friend near Cedar Rapids Canoe Outfitters in Barryville, a hamlet in the Town of Highland.

The unidentified friend was rescued July 4 by a person who was paddle boarding.

Santos was an athlete at Peekskill High School who was a key member of the varsity soccer team.

"It is with great sadness we share that today the Peekskill City School District was notified of the passing of Peekskill High School student Liony Polonia Santos," school district officials stated. "Liony was a PHS athlete and a friend to many of our students, staff and community members. Our thoughts and prayers are with his friends and family during this difficult time. We will continue to keep Liony's family in our hearts."

Reportedly, Santos is the fifth person to drown in a stretch of the Delaware River since June 26.

Funeral services are slated to be held Tuesday, July 13 from 6 to 9 p.m. at Joseph Nardone Funeral Home in Peekskill.

Peekskill Boys-Girls Club

Ozer, who mentioned 62% of the children who frequent the Boys & Girls Club of Northern Westchester are Hispanic and 72% of the overall population live at or below the poverty level, emphasized staff in Mount Kisco would be working closely with the Peekskill Youth Bureau, Peekskill School District and city officials in what programming and services are provided in Peekskill.

The Boys & Girls Club, which also serves meals, engages children in activities that cover arts and social recreation; character and leadership; health and wellness; and sports, fitness and recreation. The Peekskill Boys & Girls Club will not have a swimming pool.

Wilder Balter Properties will be renovating and expanding the Kiley Youth Center.

"This will pretty much be a new building on the inside," said Bill Balter, president of Wilder Balter Properties.

The Boys & Girls Club of Northern Westchester is currently working with the federal Housing and Urban Development (HUD) on obtaining a lease to the Kiley Youth Center.

"It has been a fun process to see where it has developed to now," Rainey said.

Annual Mohegan Lake Day Slated for Sat., July 17

Ossining Town Board Discusses Local Marijuana Regulation

By Samuel Rowland

The Ossining Town Board last week discussed New York State's Marijuana Regulation and Taxation Act (MRTA) at its first in-person meeting since the State of Emergency imposed for the COVID-19 pandemic was lifted.

At issue was whether to craft local legislation for the Town of Ossining, or at least the parts that are not incorporated into the Village of Ossining and parts of Briarcliff Manor; "opt out" of the portion of the law allowing for the establishment of recreational marijuana dispensaries; or prohibit the on-site consumption of marijuana at dispensaries within their borders.

No official at the meeting expressed a direct opposition to marijuana legalization in general. However, they were more circumspect about the details of implementation, which led to the issue being left unresolved.

Councilwoman Jackie G. Shaw expressed potential interest in opting out of dispensaries initially, to allow Ossining time to watch how implementation plays out in other municipalities and to wait for the state regulatory authority for recreational marijuana sales to form more solidly.

"I think there's some benefits to opting out now and opting in later, when everything is more finalized...[and] we've seen what other folks in Westchester have done...and we can use that knowledge to make our program better," Shaw said. "I'm still on the fence."

That option had been first brought up by Ossining Town Supervisor Dana Levenberg, who also noted that she had heard a counterargument claiming that the dispensary companies left after the first wave of opted-in towns get their dispensaries could be lower-quality companies.

Councilwoman Christie Tomm Addona noted the process of creating the Cannabis Control Board and Office of Cannabis Management, which would then create the permitting process, may already provide enough time to study the data.

"When we talked about this a month ago, some of the documents I had seen anticipated that you wouldn't start seeing the first dispensary or on-site consumption locations until the end of 2022, or 2023,"

Addona said. "But I think this is going to be a moving target as time goes on and I don't know when it was anticipated that the board [would] be formed...it seems relatively quickly, so that may move things up."

Other concerns brought up included new traffic on the roads, dispensary zoning regulations, potential tax revenue and the problem of underage marijuana use (the MRTA prohibits marijuana to those under 21). Councilman Gregory Meyer, who supports opting in on both, noted that he did not believe underage marijuana use would be significantly increased by legalization.

"You can walk into any high school in the state and buy pot," Meyer said. "No kid could walk into these dispensaries. You need ID, everything gets scanned, your photo gets taken. I think if anything it would make possession for minors more difficult."

There was also general agreement among the board that legalization would not eliminate the illegal market entirely.

"Maybe some of the money we get from a dispensary can help us to solve that or at least have...quality control," Councilwoman Elizabeth Feldman said.

Feldman, along with Councilmember Northern Wilcher, supports dispensaries but currently supports opting out of on-site consumption. Feldman also expressed interest in increasing the minimum distance between dispensaries and childcare or religious facilities beyond the MRTA's 500-ft radius.

According to the MRTA, municipal governments have until December 31, 2021 to make these prohibitions. After that point, the MRTA no longer allows municipal governments to enact such laws. Even if such a law is created before that date and repealed after that date, any local law that prohibits either activity must be subject to a permissive referendum. This means that if a petition signed by a sufficient percentage of registered local voters is submitted during the 45-day period before the law takes effect, the question of whether to repeal the law has to be a ballot measure in the next local election, or sometimes in a special election.

In Westchester County, North Salem, Eastchester, North Castle and Somers have officially opted out of both retail recreational marijuana and on-site consumption.

Health Officials Keeping Watch on Uptick in COVID-19 Infections

By Martin Wilbur

There's the inclination to try and put COVID-19 in the rearview mirror, but the coronavirus clearly is not yet ready to go.

An uptick in infections during the past two weeks both locally and statewide have officials keeping a wary eye on whether the recent mini-wave is a result of unvaccinated people getting infected along with the emergence of the Delta variant or some other factor.

County Executive George Latimer said Monday that there has been no confirmation that the Delta variant, which medical experts say is more transmissible, is in Westchester but county and state health officials are keeping close watch.

"We've seen the increase in the amount of infections and it would lead me to think that there would be some exposure, but we haven't had it confirmed by any of the folks in the medical science (field)," Latimer said.

He said his office would try and find out if there is more information related to the potential emergence of the variant locally and whether those who have been infected most recently have been unvaccinated.

Nationwide, 99.2 percent of the COVID-19 deaths in June were unvaccinated people, the Centers for Disease Control reported.

As of Monday, according to the Westchester County COVID-19 dashboard, active cases had increased to 295, up from 185 two weeks ago. The greatest number of active cases are generally in Westchester's highest population centers, led by 65 in Yonkers, 33 in New Rochelle, 21 in Mount Vernon, 15 in White Plains and 14 each in Greenburgh and Rye City. The only other municipality in double digits in active cases was Eastchester with 11, according to the dashboard.

Despite the case increase – on Sunday, Westchester had 33 positives from 2,925 tests – there are just 14 COVID-19-related hospitalizations, up from 11 two weeks ago after a brief uptick to 19, Latimer stated. During the three-day span from Friday through Sunday, there have been 101 new cases in the county, as fresh infections have seemed to settle in the low 30s on a daily basis during the most recent stretch.

Putnam County had only two infections from 253 tests on Sunday.

Additional good news is that during the past two weeks there have been no fatalities linked to the virus in Westchester. The death toll remains at 2,293.

Over the weekend, the statewide positivity rate reached 1 and 1.1 percent, the first time since May 23 and 24, infections have been as high as 1 percent.

The recent rise has also correlated to a recent sharp slowdown in vaccinations, Latimer said. On Monday, there were just 168 appointments made for the first dose of the vaccination at the County Center in White Plains, a facility that was administering about 2,200 shots a day earlier this year. Appointments are no longer needed to receive the vaccine.

Latimer said there has been no indication that the County Center will be shut as a vaccination site, with appointments booked through Wednesday. That would mean the facility would stay open at least a few more weeks for people returning for their second dose, he said.

Between the County Center, the clinics at Westchester Community College and the Health Department and the Yonkers armory, Westchester has administered nearly 444,000 since mid-January. That number does not include pharmacies and pop-up sites.

"It appears that everyone who wants a vaccination has received it," said Latimer. "So now we're dealing with that portion of society that is vaccine hesitant or vaccine resistant."

Mental Health Diversion Program

Latimer also announced Monday that the county is implementing a program to divert emergency 911 calls for those with serious mental health needs from police to behavioral health services.

The program, called 911 Diversion, seeks to identify those with mental health issues as well as those who are in crisis but who pose no threat to others to receive appropriate services rather than have law enforcement respond.

The initiative came out of one of the 52 recommendations that were made by the county's Police Reform Task Force and submitted to the state.

"The county is embarking on this as a first step in order to try and make sure that we can identify and divert callers who have serious needs as well as those in crisis who pose no danger to others," Latimer said.

When 911 calls have been received, there has been a response from police, fire or EMS services. Once the training is complete, a fourth category will be behavioral health services.

Latimer said it has been determined by the county that there would need to be eight crisis intervention teams to properly cover Westchester. He anticipates that the first three teams will be trained and in action by October.

The training is being provided through the federal Substance and Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration.

Mixed Feelings as Municipalities Return to In-Person Meetings

By Samuel Rowland

With the expiration of the COVID-19 state of emergency on June 24, local municipal officials have had to relinquish one aspect of a pandemic reality that for some is easier to give up than others.

The emergency order provided for a temporary suspension of certain provisions of the state's Open Meetings Law, officially known as Article 7 of the Public Officers Law, allowing elected officials to not only hold meetings, but also to vote, via videoconference.

Article 7 provides a set of rules for public meetings to promote transparency and public access. While the law currently allows officials to vote while attending remotely, some officials are frustrated with one aspect of it – an elected official must list the address from where he or she is participating remotely in order to prevent them from purposefully denying access to constituents.

Legal opinions, including from the Committee on Open Government, a state committee that advises on government transparency and access issues, and various municipal and state organizations, agree that lawsuits can be filed against government entities that would nullify resolutions approved at those meetings if they fail to follow the law.

"The NYS law should be amended to allow Board members to continue to participate in meetings via Zoom without opening up their homes to the public to observe their vote," Greenburgh Supervisor Paul Feiner wrote in an e-mail to other Westchester municipal officials. "Even without COVID, normal people don't open their houses to strangers."

The Committee on Open Government's 11 members meet three or four times a year to craft reports advising the state legislature on privacy and transparency matters. According to Shoshana Bewlay, the committee's executive director, in its last report released in December 2020, there was support for potentially removing the in-person access requirement. However, the committee has yet to discuss the subject in a meaningful fashion.

"I think that there is an appetite for further study," Bewlay said. "(But) I think the devil is in the details."

During the last legislative session, five bills were introduced in the state Senate and the Assembly to address the issue, but none of them reached Gov. Andrew Cuomo's desk before the session concluded on June 10.

Opinions among municipal government officials contacted by Examiner Media, however, failed to reach a consensus.

"I have been in the building where our meeting room is, since Day One, running the Zoom meetings," said North Salem Supervisor Warren Lucas. "It would be nice if we had the ability to do Zoom meetings, but I am not losing sleep over it."

Other officials though, see the return

Greenburgh Supervisor Paul Feiner is one of the elected officials who wants to see a change in law allowing for board members to meet remotely without having to give out their home address or allow residents to view the meeting from where the remote participant is stationed.

to primarily in-person meetings as an unnecessary financial burden and even a step backward for public access to government.

Village of Ossining Mayor Rika Levin noted that just having to record and livestream the voting members together in one room required the village to hire a videographer by the hour and pay for the equipment, neither of which are necessary to record and livestream Zoom meetings.

Other municipalities, such as Pound Ridge and Bedford, are paying for equipment upgrades at Town Hall to be able to allow for hybrid meetings with remote participation from constituents and guests.

"Zoom saved residents money because their consultants, architects and lawyers didn't have to spend the time traveling to Pound Ridge to present their materials to our planning, zoning and water control boards," Supervisor Kevin Hansen said.

Levin also noted that the expectations of Zoom meetings made attending meetings more accessible to busy constituents such as single parents and people with long work days or multiple jobs. Those residents did not have to spend travel time getting to and from municipal buildings, and they could enter and leave meetings at any time.

With the state legislature's next regularly scheduled session not due to start until Jan. 6, 2022, it seems that regardless of what officials think about the current Open Meetings rules, they will most likely stay in place for the rest of this year.

Until then, Rebecca Ruscito, a staff attorney at the New York Conference of Mayors, has this advice for officials concerned about the issue.

"I recommend that they participate from a library," Ruscito said.

W'chester Presses on With $3.3M Restoration of Tarrytown Lighthouse

By Martin Wilbur

Westchester County officials announced last week the planned investment of more than $3.3 million to preserve a historic landmark that is synonymous with a portion of the Hudson River shoreline.

The county-owned Tarrytown Lighthouse, part of the Kingsland Point Park shoreline, will be rehabilitated with a series of infrastructure improvements that will stabilize and restore the 128-year-old structure.

Listed on the National Register of Historic Places since 1979, the lighthouse is operated by the Village of Sleepy Hollow through an intermunicipal agreement with the county. It is the only lighthouse built within Westchester County and was built to help ships navigate the Hudson River. It was constructed about a half-mile offshore.

County Executive George Latimer said the facility has been neglected for many years and will now be restored through capital funding made available by the Board of Legislators.

"We understand the value of this lighthouse just as we understand the value of the other parks and our physical infrastructure as we as understand the value of our human infrastructure, and the commitment that is made by this, is made through the Village of Sleepy Hollow, but it's made to the people of Westchester County, that this is open for people anywhere in this county to come and enjoy and see," Latimer said.

Once the restoration is complete, the plan is to reopen the lighthouse to the public, said Peter Tartaglia, first deputy commissioner of the county's Parks Department.

He said the work first needed to be done well over a decade ago. When it does reopen, it will be as special as any of Westchester's roughly 50 parks that it operates.

"There is a belief to restore and protect what we have," Tartaglia said. "That's our mission in the department and that's what the county overall, every division, every department, every layer of government has worked to this end, and this is going to be another unbelievable example."

Work that will be part of the project includes stabilizing the structure to prevent further deterioration; repairing and painting the exterior of the lighthouse; replacement of windows and doors; repairs to the cellar and caisson area; cleaning and repointing of the foundation masonry; restoration of the interior plaster and to the wood floors; restoration of the intermediate landing between the bridge and the gangway; a new security gate on the side closest to land; and new lighting.

Board of Legislators Majority Leader MaryJane Shimsky (D-Dobbs Ferry) recalled taking her son to visit the County Executive George Latimer, surrounded by local and county officials, announced last Wednesday the planned restoration of the Tarrytown Lighthouse.

lighthouse when he was a child. By providing a facelift, families will be able to do the same generations into the future, she said.

"This lighthouse is one of the small, hidden historical jewels of Westchester County," Shimsky said. "As we press more and more Westchester County as a tourist destination and as a place to learn more about America's history, this lighthouse plays a very important role."

Latimer compared the project to the restoration of another valuable historical asset, the Miller House in North White Plains, and other projects around the county. He has also touted his administration's commitment to repairing infrastructure around the county, including the county pools, roads and bridges.

Home Care Agency Helps Seniors Live Full Lives in Familiar Surroundings

By Martin Wilbur

No matter their age, most people look forward to summer. Warmer weather, the additional hours of daylight, outdoor activities or the possibility of traveling, it's no wonder why young children aren't the only ones who enjoy this season.

However, for seniors, summer can be fraught with risks, and not just the possibility of being adversely impacted by high heat and humidity, said Glenn Lane, founder and president of Westchester Family Care, a Mamaroneck-based licensed home care agency that provides at-home care and companionship for the elderly and disabled.

The understandable desire for older people to want to get out and enjoy themselves, particularly after lives were put on hold for over a year for the pandemic, could expose them to risks.

"Especially on this side of COVID, people want to get out, they want to enjoy the good weather," Lane said. "Being able to understand what they can do, having someone with them that has this awareness, it's great to be able to get out and enjoy, but to be realistic about the issues of hydration and things like that."

Westchester Family Care, launched by Lane about five years ago and serving most of the county and parts of the Bronx, provides the services that enable seniors to remain independent and live fuller lives with the help of a team of about 150 New York State certified home health aides or caregivers. Services could include simple companionship during the day, helping the person with errands and chores or assisting with other daily living needs.

The company also provides services for those with more complex medical issues, including live-in caregivers if that's what a client requires, Lane said. About 25 percent of Westchester Family Care's clients have some form of cognitive impairment while roughly another quarter of the clientele experience mobility limitations.

Lane said seniors with mobility issues can be at greater risk because they may be fully capable cognitively but sometimes don't want to let on that they need to use a cane or a walker.

The services provided by Westchester Family Care allows seniors to stay in their own residences longer rather than forcing an upheaval to a facility, which can be met with resistance.

"We can provide them care to a level that would be comparable with assisted living, and in some cases, they prefer the companionship of our caregivers," Lane said. "The ability of our caregivers being able to keep them out in the community with their social activities in their current situation is better than starting up a new social circle."

Lane, who had previously worked in the financial services industry, started Westchester Family Care in January 2016. Several years earlier, his mother and his mother-in-law and her sister suffered from Alzheimer's, and the lack of reliable home care options was a motivating factor in him launching the business.

In most cases, clients need to guarantee 40 hours of service a week, Lane said. The caregivers are matched with a senior and provide whatever services are needed, whether that be transporting them to doctor's appointments, shopping or social activities, or preparing meals for them at home.

"The companionship element to our seniors is very important," he explained. "So the caregivers are all trained to provide what is called the activities of daily living."

There are also certain situations where families hire a caregiver despite their loved one being in an assisted living facility or even long-term care to provide that companionship, which can sometimes be lacking.

Most of Westchester Family Care's clients pay directly, but for those eligible, the firm can also coordinate a combination of private payment with Medicare and/or hospice. It also accepts payments from long-term insurance.

Mt. Pleasant School Business Administrator to Join Chappaqua

The Chappaqua School District announced last week that it has hired Mount Pleasant School District Director of Business Administration Andrew Lennon to fill the vacant post of assistant superintendent of business.

Lennon will begin his tenure in Chappaqua on Aug. 9. He replaces John Chow who held the assistant superintendent of business post for more than a decade before retiring and then resurfacing to lead the Pleasantville School District's business office.

Following a thorough interview process, Lennon displayed extensive knowledge of financial management and planning, accounting and budget development, according to a Chappaqua School District release. He also has experience in contract negotiations, audits, facilities planning, capital projects, food service management and transportation.

Lennon, who received the New School Business Official Leader of the Year Award in 2016, served as district treasurer and later assistant business administrator in the Ossining School District prior to this service in Mount Pleasant.

Before working in the public sector for school districts, Lennon served IBM as a client relations manager and senior financial analyst. He also completed an international assignment in Tokyo where he provided expertise and training to the IBM Japan finance and executive management teams to support their significant reorganization.

Lennon isn't the only new Chappaqua's administrator this summer. Last week, the Board of Education appointed Jessica Rappaport as the new assistant principal at Seven Bridges Middle School, effective this Thursday, July 15.

A broadcast journalism producer for CNN International, Rappaport turned to a career in education in 2006, teaching English at the IN-Tech Academy in the Bronx, where she designed and implemented 90-minute literacy blocks to aid struggling readers and writers, introduced and taught the school's first-ever AP English Literature course and instituted a data-driven instructional model for the eighth-grade team.

In 2010, she began teaching 11th- and 12th-grade English in the White Plains School District before becoming a house administrator in 2016, responsible for the discipline, attendance and student support service coordination for one-quarter of the building as well as helping to run the day-to-day operations of the school.

Earlier this month, David Leis also joined Chappaqua as the associate director of instructional technology and communications. The post is a newly-created position that is designed to help the district implement state-of-the-art technology, practices and systems within Chappaqua's schools and classrooms.

Mt. Kisco Masons Open Time Capsule to Commemorate 150 Years

By Martin Wilbur

The Mount Kisco Masonic Lodge took a step back into history last Friday.

Lodge brothers opened a time capsule that had been placed behind the cornerstone of the 1931 building on Carpenter Avenue, which has served as the local chapter's headquarters, or temple, and meeting space.

"The reason why we're opening it, quite frankly, is it's our 150th anniversary and we feel it's close enough and we're excited to see the contents and see a little bit of history," said Gordon Moccio, commander of the Mount Kisco lodge prior to a ceremony and dinner in commemoration of the milestone.

When the capsule was opened after dinner, there was a copy of the New York Herald Tribune, the Mount Kisco Recorder and a Bedford newspaper, one coin of each denomination from 1921 and commemorative stamps, including one with an image of Teddy Roosevelt. There was also a 1916 copy of the book, "The History of Kisco Lodge 1871-1916," written by James Chapman, who was a brother at the lodge more than 100 years ago.

There were a few unidentifiable coins, which the Masons will look to investigate by coordinating an effort with the Mount Kisco Historical Society.

William Sardone, the grand master of the Free and Accepted Masons of the State of New York, said most of the lodges in New York are in the 100-year range, with the oldest dating back 288 years, back before the American Revolution. There are about 35,000 members.

Brothers at Kisco 708 Masonic Lodge, which received its charter on June 9, 1871, and was instituted on July 12 of that year, knew that in its 150th anniversary year it was scheduled to open up the time capsule that had been hidden from view for 90 years, he said.

"One of the things Masonry is steeped in is history and we know, we have minutes that go back to all of these lodges over the years and every year is another anniversary of some kind," Sardone said.

"As you can tell, we have a tremendous amount of legers that go back, so they were planning on this probably in year 120, 130, 140, 150," he added. "This was not something that jumped on us all of a sudden. We were ready for this."

Lodge Treasurer William Serratore said the building, constructed during the depths of the Great Depression, cost $50,000, which is the equivalent of roughly $900,000 today. The village's population was about 2,000, but the lodge had more than 600 members.

Henry Clay Wallace, one of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's vice presidents, was a member of the lodge and Alexander Hamilton's great-grandson paid the local Masons a visit in 1893.

"We have been a part of this community, we love being a part of this community and we will continue to be a part of this community,"

Serratore said.

The lodge's original home in 1871 was on the top floor of a farmhouse somewhere in the village, Moccio said. Before the current building was erected, its second home was the upper floor of the Main Street building that houses Bicycle World on the ground level, he said.

Although participation in more recent times has been diminishing, there has been a membership upswing recently in New York, Sardone said. That is also true in Westchester where the Masons in 2019 successfully bid for the College of New Rochelle campus, which is proposed to be the site of senior housing and educational efforts, he said.

In upstate Utica, the Masons operate a location where they take care of area residents' health at its Mason Community Care of New York facility.

Then there are always the charitable events undertaken by local lodges that help communities in need.

"We do a lot of charity, and you know what, we can have fun, too," Sardone said. "We can have fun also."

Moccio said the 90-year-old building is showing its age and the Masons are going to have to raise funds to prevent decay, water infiltration and other problems. Despite the hurdles, Moccio said they will get the work done.

"We really owe it to the brothers who came before us," he said.

Most Putnam County Legislators Afraid to Stand Up to One of Their Own

There must be change on the Putnam County Legislature. I attended the July 6 full legislative meeting in order to speak about the importance of having a bipartisan, independent Charter Commission to review the charter. The current makeup of the commission consists only of county government employees and members of the legislature. It is inappropriate that the commission predominantly consists of the same people who will vote on it. That is what I had planned to say, but plans change.

I sat and watched Legislator Neal Sullivan be rude and condescend not only to his usual target, Legislator Nancy Montgomery, but also Legislator Sayegh, Chairwoman Addonizio, District Attorney Tendy and Sheriff Langley. This is the same legislator who recently called the esteemed Captain Tompkins of the Sheriff's Department a mere "underling."

At the meeting, Sullivan called our highest-ranking law enforcement officer "silly," "ignorant," "incapable of understanding" and clueless. During public comment, I confronted Legislator Sullivan, telling him to his face that he was condescending and inappropriate. His response was again to act condescendingly toward me. After public comment ended, Legislator Sullivan again invoked my name stating that he did not know why I had to say anything to him when he did not say anything about me.

And therein lies the difference between most of the legislators and myself; I speak up when I see a bully. Yet with all of his bullying and condescension, nobody save Legislator Montgomery, spoke out against him.

The problem with this legislature is not that it is filled with nine bad people; it's filled with a couple of bad people and many who will not stand up to them. I do thank the two Republican legislators who spoke with me privately expressing their agreement with me.

When I am elected, I will always speak up and speak out against any wrongs that I see. I will make the workers of this county feel comfortable that if they witness a legislator committing a crime they can report it, write a ticket or make an arrest without fear of retribution. There must be change on the county legislature.

White Plains Deserves Something Special Instead of a Concrete Desert

There is a blight in our wonderful city. Sears is gone. Macy's is gone. Those spectacular July 4th fireworks shows and the New Year's Eve ball drop – they've gone too. What's left is a massive, concrete desert.

So here's an idea. Why not create a vibrant green space in the area that is now the sad, customer-less Galleria mall. Let's bring the community together by building a unique park that can become a destination here in the center of Westchester.

How about a beautiful carousel, an ice-skating rink in winter, a playground, a dog park, a community garden, benches and trees? During the Christmas season there could be pop-up shops as well.

There are so many possibilities!

Battery Park in Manhattan has created something out of nothing. I've watched it grow and flourish over the decades. Brookfield Mall seems to be well-versed in creating spaces that people enjoy and ultimately, they shop there as well.

Bryant Park was transformed from a resting place for the homeless into a vibrant destination for city dwellers and tourists alike.

I don't know the logistics, but I do know there are talented city planners who could design such a destination for the people who live and work here. I feel certain that there are many wealthy citizens in White Plains who would love to contribute to the establishment of such a fine park – maybe even a place to engrave their name on a bench or a carousel.

This park can become a magnet, attracting new people to our city to shop, to dine and to find a desirable place to call home.

There's a Problem With New Castle Politics

I've noticed an alarming trend occurring in New Castle politics. We've failed to maintain a level of civility and respect that has started among our politicians and been reflected in our town. I especially saw this happen at the Town Board's June 15 meeting.

The meeting was about whether Jeremy Saland should resign his position as councilman and be appointed town supervisor or become the acting town supervisor.

The opinion Councilwoman Lisa Katz voiced had a lot of factual argument behind it, but other board members used this as an opportunity to misconstrue her reasoning with emotional pleas. Other board members kept conveying their "disappointment" that Katz wouldn't appoint him when as acting town supervisor Saland would receive the same pay, responsibilities and authority without causing unnecessary vacancies that could threaten the stability of the town.

But Ms. Katz was shut down for expressing a different view. Rather than try to please other Town Board members, she was giving town residents a more holistic understanding of the implications of an appointed versus acting supervisor.

As an incoming senior at Greeley, I see what's happening in our communities also occurring at my school. People are afraid to offer a different point of view, especially when this allows us to see a new side of a nuanced, complicated issue. This is not the kind of example we should be setting. We need to create opportunities for our community to feel comfortable discussing varying perspectives.

Tree Hedges Should Improve the Look of Yorktown and Not Be Reduced

The Garden Club of Yorktown strongly opposes the height reduction of the green hedge that borders the Cablevision property and Route 118.

Our club was founded in 1928 with the specific charter to beautify the town. Our 50-plus members work year-round on the street planters, town gardens and numerous beautification and conservation initiatives. As a club we focus on the green elements in the town and seek to improve the quality of the commercial building landscaping.

A walk along Commerce Street portrays too many examples of commercial buildings with unsightly plantings; even recently approved development. We take our civic duty to safeguard existing green space and improve the overall look of the town very seriously. To reduce the height of the existing trees to facilitate the self-prompting goals of the building renters is detrimental to the overall look of the town.

The existing level of the tree hedge should not be reduced!

Yorktown residents proudly identify the town's natural beauty, open space and parks as core benefits of living here. The 2010 Town Comprehensive Plan states that the Town should protect our natural resources and promote green building principles whenever possible. To approve the height reduction of the Cablevision trees is contrary to the town's Comprehensive Plan.

Hiding From Climate Change Doesn't Work

By Michael Gold

I went walking in a pot of thick soup as big as Westchester.

That's what the heat wave felt like.

It was 95 degrees in Pleasantville one day at the end of June, according to Accuweather. That's about 15 degrees above average.

If this is the new normal due to climate change, I don't want any part of it. Our family hid in the house.

There are far too many people who cannot enjoy that luxury.

Not even someone as highly skilled at hiding out as me cannot stay in the house forever, although I have made many valiant attempts to do so.

In the house, I try to distract myself from the suffocating heat by reading books and newspapers, playing Twister by myself and praying for clouds the size of Jupiter to cover the planet. And rain, lots of rain.

You cannot attribute one single weather event to climate change. But leading climate scientists have pointed out that climate change makes heat waves far more likely and more intense.

Climate change also makes intense rainfall more likely. A few days after the sizzling soup-like heat, we saw millions upon millions of balls of raindrops that seemed to be thrown from the sky by microscopic Major League pitchers hurling 100 mile-per-hour fastballs. Each raindrop finished with a bang on the pavement in front of our house.

I have driven on the Saw Mill Parkway in torrential rain. The water feels like it's rushing by the middle of my wheels, as the river charges out of its banks, angry and insolent, on a temper tantrum out of all proportion to its size.

The state is raising about a mile of the Saw Mill Parkway to avoid flooding, but nobody can predict what nature is going to do, especially if we keep handing it weapons to harm us.

So, we can't hide from climate change in Westchester for very long, even if we build an air-conditioned dome over the whole county, which is about as likely to happen as the New York Jets winning the Super Bowl five years in a row.

Here's what we can do:

- The easiest, cheapest thing to do is plant more trees, to absorb all that carbon we're putting into the air. Pleasantville features a number of areas near the Saw Mill Parkway that have nothing but weeds. Why not consider planting dozens of small trees in these areas? I'm not suggesting giant oaks or elms, which could eventually grow so high they might hit somebody's house in a storm. Also, Memorial Plaza could use many more trees, by the strip of land next to the railroad tracks.

- Homeowners can plant a tree on their front lawns, near the road. The village will pay for half the cost of the tree, and all the labor of planting, under its 50/50 tree planting program.
- Install a geothermal air conditioning/heating pump system in your home. You can get rid of your oil heating tank, and you won't have to worry about carbon monoxide poisoning in your house again. New York State and the federal government offer generous tax credits for installing geothermal. We installed a geothermal pump in our home last year.
- Buy 100 percent wind energy for your home. We've been using wind energy for about 10 years. It is somewhat more expensive than energy generated by fossil fuels, but you're helping to keep the climate cooler.
- Install solar panels. Like geothermal, both the U.S. and state offer tax incentives for putting a solar array on your roof. In our house, we hope to install solar in 2022, which will reduce our electric bill.

- Buy an electric car. They are becoming cheaper and more plentiful by the day. We hope to purchase one in the next two years.
- Lobby state and federal government officials to move faster on addressing climate change. The wheels on both those vehicles move slowly, it's true, but if we don't yell, we're leaving an even bigger mess for our children.

The other day I told my teenage daughter I was sorry she had to live through the terrible distortions we're making of the climate. She said, "It's fine. It's what I know."

These words were not heartbreaking, but they came pretty close.

Since we can't gather up the megatons of carbon dioxide we're generating every year, pump it all into rocket ships and send them to Mars immediately, we're all going to have to move faster and more forcefully to cut our carbon emissions.

A Spiritual View

By Cantor Lilah Sugarman

There are so many things to be grateful for in our lives, and collectively, this has been a hard year for our country and the world, a year of quarantine, illness and death. A year of growth, transition and uncertainty.

Next Saturday, July 16 at sundown to Sunday, July 17 at sundown, Jews around the world observe an annual day of mourning called Tisha B'Av.

Tisha B'Av means the 9th of the month of Av, so the name of the observance is the date it is observed on in the Jewish calendar.

Tisha B'Av commemorates tragic events that have occurred in history including the destruction of the first and second Temple in Jerusalem. Traditionally, on Tisha B'Av, people participate in mourning practices, including fasting and chanting the Book of Lamentations.

I find this observance important and meaningful every year and all the more so this year. I think it is vitally important to have a collective day of mourning annually so that together as a community we can mourn. We are able to mourn our ancestors' losses and also all our losses and challenges of the year. It reminds us to set aside a day to mourn. It reminds us to spend some time supporting each other through hard times and sadness. It encourages the idea that to move forward, we must acknowledge and process our sadness with the support of our community.

My hope is that you are able to set aside time in your daily life to notice all the beauty and to celebrate. Also, my hope is that you set aside time to acknowledge, process and mourn when things are hard for you or your community.

Foodies Delight: Mt. Kisco Gears Up for First-Ever Restaurant Week

By Martin Wilbur

If you're an area foodie and have been longing to try different culinary choices, Mount Kisco is the place to be later this month.

Mimicking the popular Hudson Valley Restaurant Week, the Mount Kisco Chamber of Commerce next Friday will be launching its own Restaurant Week, with currently more than 20 eateries throughout the village offering specials and deals to patrons.

It kicks off on July 23 and extends through Sunday, Aug. 1. It not only provides the public with a reason to explore a buffet of dining choices but it's designed to help bolster the local restaurant scene, where many owners struggled to survive the pandemic.

"It comes out of the chamber as another way to help a segment of our members, which restaurants are a portion of the membership in the chamber, and after COVID, we worked very closely with them seeing how they were doing," said chamber Co-executive Director Loretta Brooks.

Each participating restaurant's offerings will be unique to their establishment. The goal is to have the community and residents from neighboring towns learn more about Mount Kisco's restaurants and showcase the wide assortment of cuisine available in the village.

Chamber Co-executive Director Beth Vetare Civitello said many area residents are always intrigued by what there is to eat locally when looking for a night out and this is a great way to bring more choices to people as well as help the restaurateurs.

"We're always looking for ways to bring people into this great town of ours and one of the things we know has worked countywide and statewide has been the Restaurant Week," Civitello said. "So we decided that we should have one that was geared specifically to Mount Kisco, and the restaurant business is a difficult enough business and we have all these world class restaurants here."

As of last week, 21 restaurants had signed up to participate. A restaurant must be a chamber member to be involved, but if they are they are a member they are not obligated to sign up, Civitello said.

The list of restaurants include Exit 4 Food Hall; Badageoni Georgian Kitchen; Mt Kisco Seafood; Kisco River Eatery; Basilico Pizza, Pasta & Gourmet; Stone Fire; Locali Mt Kisco; Village Social; Skinny Buddha Organic Food & Fitness; Mimi's Coffee House; Sette E Venti by Gianfranco; Mario's Pizza & Pasta; Lexington Square Café; Mardino's Italian Cuisine & Steakhouse; Frannie's Goodie Shop; Captain Lawrence Barrel House; The Hub Restaurant at Holiday Inn; Ben & Jerry's Ice Cream; Mt Kisco Coach Diner; Azteca Mexican Restaurant; Mt Kisco Farm; and Captain Lawrence Barrel House.

Brooks said for many downtowns, the restaurants' success can be the lifeblood of the business district.

"We're really hoping that they do well," Brooks said. "I think it's a nice time for somebody to try a new restaurant that they might have been thinking of and this is a good excuse to give it a whirl."

Civitello said the chamber timed Restaurant Week to be during the middle of the summer when some people may be on vacation and business could be slower, as opposed to the spring or fall when foot traffic typically picks up.

Car Club Organizes Show to Raise Money for Ronald McDonald House

By Martin Wilbur

For people who love cars, there's nothing better than spending a summer weekend afternoon with fellow enthusiasts checking out all kinds of cool and classic vehicles.

It's even better when the proceeds of the show benefit a great cause.

On Sunday, Shift Masters of Westchester, a Mount Vernon car club, held a show in the parking lot of the Thornwood McDonald's featuring a combination of classic cars and later model editions. All of the proceeds generated by the show, through the $20-per-car entry fee, will go to the Ronald McDonald House of the Greater Hudson Valley in Valhalla.

Shift Masters member Jim Livecchi, who organized the event, said whenever the club holds a show, it makes sure to donate the money raised to charity, whether it's for hospitals, veterans causes or to help the hungry.

"It's just what we do," Livecchi said. "We feel we have to give back. You have to."

Club President Frank Russo said Shift Masters was originally formed around 1956 but petered out in the 1960s. As someone who loves cars, he and several other members, relaunched the club in 2012 and have been holding shows and participating in other clubs' events ever since.

Several of the cars that were part of Shift Masters of Westchester's car show Sunday afternoon at the McDonald's in Thornwood. The show raised money for Ronald McDonald House.

of the Ronald McDonald House of the Hudson Valley, said there are so many organizations like Shift Masters that look to help the Ronald McDonald House any way possible.

"There are so many out there that do stuff like this," Riley said. "It just helps raise money and awareness. Now, more people know about the house."

Ronald McDonald House offers free accommodations for families who have a child in Maria Fareri Children's Hospital. It is located across the parking lot from the children's hospital near Westchester Medical Center.

Several dozen car owners who made the trip from around the county brought a personal favorite of theirs, such as Pleasantville resident Cameron Kelly. Kelly brought her 1986 red Pontiac Fiero. Although not a collector, she decided to be part of the show when she saw a recent notice posted in McDonald's.

Kelly said the car was her father's before he got older and he no longer feels confident driving it any longer because of diminishing reflexes.

She uses it as her primary vehicle and it catches the eye of a lot of other motorists on the road.

"It's a fantastic car," Kelly said. "It's got pickup. It was great. It's so much fun to drive and everybody likes it. People stop me at the corner and they'll jump out and they'll go 'I want your car.'"

Livecchi said of some of the cars on hand wouldn't be considered classics. Generally, cars need to have been from before 1980 to be considered vintage, he said. However, the way Shift Masters runs its shows, if someone loves a car that they have and are willing to pay the entry fee, they'll be part of the show.

"We look at it differently," Livecchi said. "If you have a late model Corvette sitting there, that's a person's, that's their baby, why not let them in the show?"

Joe Ricci, of Pelham Manor, came to Sunday's show with one of his six classic cars, a black 1965 Chevy Corvair. He called it a car that "drives like a big car."

He said the best part of participating in car shows is the camaraderie and looking at what everyone else brings.

"Everyone has a story," Ricci said. "I remember my first car; I drove it to high school; I remember riding in the back."

Does Your Street's Name Influence Your Home's Appeal?

For the past few years, I've been living in a condominium whose street name is that of a recent former president. While a highly political friend tells me that she would not live on a street bearing that name even if the home were given to her free, I suspect that she would.

The home is splendid in my view, and I believe that its address projects an image of quality, which follows through in reality. I consider myself lucky to be able to live there.

Besides serving as a way to find where you live, can the name of your street influence the perception of your home and its value, positively or negatively?

The thought occurred to me a while back when I read a report about residents' complaints in a town in Putnam County where a local motel housed a number of sex offenders. Almost as a throwaway at the end of the article, the motel's street address was listed as Sodom Road. You just can't make this stuff up.

The origins of street names can be a fascinating study, ranging from history, their locations, mystery or sheer whimsy.

I was first aware of how streets got their names while attending elementary school in Philadelphia. The nuns taught us that the derivation of street names was based on the plan developed by William Penn, where the major east-west streets were the names of trees: Vine, Mulberry, Chestnut, Walnut, Locust, Spruce and Pine among them, intersected by a numbered grid.

When we took a class trip to Washington, D.C., I found that all 50 states have streets named after them and most of them cross diagonally through an alphabetic and numbered grid system. Rather than making an address clear, the intention of that system was to confuse invaders and to guard the Capitol, but today it serves to confuse tourists as well.

When I moved to New York City, I was relieved to find a grid that made finding any address very easy, except for the wildly erratic system in Greenwich Village, which was established before the grid system. It resulted in having West 4th Street somehow managing to intersect West 12th Street.

Around 1850, with increased value placed on nature, it became common to name streets after trees. As a result, my past neighborhood, an early one, features Hickory, Hemlock and Birch streets.

The roads in our communities might reveal the types of industries they originally supported, such as Mill Street, Milk Street, Commerce Street and Mechanics Road. Also, Presidents were honored in every town: Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, Madison and Kennedy boulevards abound across the nation. And some streets simply reflect the surroundings, such as Mountain View, Lakeside and Hudson View.

But the most creative names came with modern housing track developments where builders became responsible for naming streets, harnessing the suggestive power of words that shape a neighborhood even before the first home was built.

Sometimes the personal interests of builders attached themselves to street names. The most interesting I've found is a Mahopac neighborhood known as the "fish bowl" where the streets are named Pike Place, Perch Drive and Trout Place. I also have friends who live in the "flower" neighborhood of Astor, Dahlia, and Tulip.

In Yorktown, we become American literary aficionados with such names as Whitman, Emerson and Thoreau.

From the 1970s and '80s, newer developments frequently adopted names of the developers' wives or daughters, and only infrequently, sons. Today, that practice is generally discouraged by town planning boards because those street signs tend to be stolen more frequently, presumably by young people of the same names.

We can be drawn to or repelled by the mystery of some street names. I had a real estate client who challenged me to find a house for her on Watermelon Hill Road simply because she loved the name so much. My personal favorites in this region are Pudding Street, Bullet Hole Road and Lover's Lane in Putnam Valley and Fiddler's Bridge Road in Dutchess County. Where did those haunting names originate, I wonder?

As I travel our byways, I also ponder such questions as whether Church Street or Seminary Road lead the traveler to heaven?

And let's not forget all the names that reflect our native American roots, such as Wiccoppee and Taconic.

There's no denying that whether your street suggests picking a flower, enjoying the comfort of a shade tree, paying tribute to a founding father, making love or catching a fish, its name can indeed add character, charm or mystery to where you live.

Can you guess the most popular street name in America? No, it's not Main, Maple or Elm. It's 2nd Street. Surprised?

The reason is that most towns in America started with a simple grid of numbered streets, but many times 1st Street was renamed Main Street, boosting 2nd Street to the lead. So you might say that 2nd is second to none.

Here it is: The Most Expensive Wine in the World

By Nick Antonaccio

What is it that makes a wine desirable? Is it its underlying ethereal essence that sets it apart from others? Is it the prestige of its provenance? The exorbitant price that makes it unattainable to all but a wealthy few?

Or is it simply its scarcity?

Certainly, there are multiple examples of coveted goods in our society. Italian race cars have a measurable value. The finest components, superior design and engineering require significant investment. These costs contribute to the lofty $277,000 price tag of a Ferrari 458 Spider.

The finest materials, top architectural design houses and ocean vistas contribute to the stratospheric prices for luxury homes in the Hamptons. For each of these examples, mystique and scarcity are a major component of their steep price tags.

However, for the world's coveted wines, the components of price are more subjective than the aforementioned luxury items. The singular expression of a bottle of wine strikes an inner chord of mystery; its scarcity sets in motion a buying frenzy for the bragging rights of tasting a wine that very few people in the world will ever enjoy; or adding such a wine to one's trophy room; or both.

One such wine is La Romanée-Conti

'its scarcity sets in motion a buying frenzy for the bragging rights of tasting a wine that very few people in the world will ever enjoy'

Grand Cru produced by the Domaine de la Romanée-Conti, most commonly known by its acronym, DRC, and perennially the most expensive wine sold.

What are the elements of this wine that contribute to its worldwide prestige and command such exorbitant prices?

First and foremost, DRC's reputation and price are attributable to its prestigious location, both the region and the specific locale; second, the winemaker's production philosophy; and third, its scarcity. As with many coveted goods, the end result is greater than the sum of its parts.

Located in the Côte de Nuits region of Burgundy, DRC is a relatively small plot of land that has been highly coveted since the Benedictine monks toiled in the vineyards and winery eight centuries ago. Even then, it was recognized as a near perfect section in the premier sub region in Burgundy, which itself was highly regarded throughout France.

Three unique soil components – limestone, red clay and gravel – contribute to the richness and velvety texture of DRC. Following in the footsteps of the ancient monks, successive owners further enhanced the DRC reputation.

The forbearers of the present owners purchased the land in 1869. Jacques-Marie Duvault-Blochet and his family assiduously expanded their envied holdings to 62 acres, which now encircle the present four acres of La Romanée-Conti. So land cost is not a major component of the price of DRC, since the vineyards have been owned by the same family for nearly 150 years.

The second component of DRC's reputation is the owners' commitment to sustainability. The vineyards and winery are managed biodynamically. No chemical fertilizers or pesticides are used, only organic products. No mechanical equipment is employed, only the power of horses. These and other practices produce silky, natural wines that are well-balanced, complex and have long-term aging potential (which, in turn, affect prices). In years of below standard crops, much of the fruit may be discarded, rather than produce a lesser wine.

The third component is a matter of economics. With only 450 cases – 5,400 bottles – produced annually, demand can never be fully met. While this is an envious position for any winery, the DRC reputation has created an auction frenzy that pushes prices higher and higher each year.

Whether the current vintage (2017) at $15,000 per bottle ($3,000 per glass), or the most highly regarded bottle (of any wine) ever sold at auction (1945 vintage) at $558,000 (An astounding $111,600 per glass, which may never be consumed!), DRC has stood at the pinnacle of the luxury goods market for generations, highly desirable and fanatically coveted – and deservedly so.

Bird By Bird, or, One Bird at a Time

By Brian Kluepfel

Author Anne Lamott wrote a book several years ago called "Bird by Bird," which was about both the writing process and life itself.

It began with the story of her panic-stricken younger brother freaking out over a pending book report on birds. Lamott encouraged him to do it "bird by bird." In other words, you can only complete one piece of a puzzle at a time.

I am often reminded, too, of the 1976 Johnny Cash novelty hit "One Piece at a Time," wherein the singer goes to work in a Cadillac factory. Year by year, he steals in dribs and drabs all the components of a Cadillac. When he tries to put them together in the last verse, the result is predictably comic.

These stories and songs relate to many of my birding experiences with friends, where one memorable sighting often became the focus of the day.

I recall a trek through the Sacramento National Wildlife Refuge in northern California with my friend Ed, "stalking," as he put it, a great blue heron. Similarly, one afternoon at Cesar Chavez Park, a reclaimed dump across from the Golden Gate, we watched in awe as a cormorant struggled mightily for several minutes to swallow a fish. (It finally succeeded.)

At the same park, I discovered, and later took friends to see, burrowing owls, which lived among the rip-rap and abandoned gopher holes of the reclaimed parkland.

On the eastern seaboard, I have sat with my wife at the Mariandale Center on the Hudson, nothing going on, when seemingly out of nowhere an osprey appears with a struggling fish in its talons. At the same site, on another day when nothing out of the ordinary seemed to be happening, we spied a great horned owl high in a pine tree.

Just this week, on a very hot day at the Kensico Dam, a clever white-breasted nuthatch appeared in front of us, navigating the trees in reverse as only this species does, making its unique "beep" as it patrolled for insects.

Early this spring, we visited the Weir Farm National Historic Park in Ridgefield, Conn. (well worth a visit, just for the trails). After investigating a familiar and repetitive drumming, we finally spotted the culprit, an outstanding pileated woodpecker, king of the woods, and an absolute favorite in this house.

One day, walking the North County Trail near Briarcliff Manor, my sister and I spied an oriole flying in and out of the shrubbery. It was the only bird I recall seeing that day, but how could you forget an oriole?

As a teen, my father spent an entire family outing on Sanibel Island, Fla. pointing out the anhinga, perched and sunning its wings in a now-familiar fashion. (Familiar because we saw it about 100 times on that trip.)

Further afield, friends and guides have taken me on special excursions to see Andean cock-of-the-rock in Ecuador, something I won't forget, despite the hangover, an incredible jabiru stork in the marshy llanos of Venezuela and a bee hummingbird in a backyard somewhere in the Cuban countryside.

I don't keep a life list of birds, but I do hold special memories of certain species seen with good friends or amazing guides. It is the company of good people, along with the wonder of nature, that produce these magical moments.

When you're out and about, and not seeing any birds, focus on the next one you see. It might be the only one of the day, so make your own magical moment around it.

Remember, we can only go bird by bird, or as the man sang, one bird at a time.

Brian Kluepfel writes for the Lonely Planet travel guide series and is a proud member of Saw Mill River Audubon (SMRA). He encourages you to get involved in local birding with SMRA, and when you travel, to support community and eco-tourism whenever you can. # Cortlandt American Cops Another District 33 12U Title

By Ray Gallagher

Examiner Sports Editor @Directrays

The Cortlandt American Little League baseball program has long been the model guide to local baseball success. At a time when travel teams -- spring, summer and fall -- have taken over most communities, Cortlandt American continues to provide a top-notch, in-town venture for little leaguers within its district.

The outcome, year after year, has seen the program produce scores of legendary players like Shawn Tarkington and Mike Anderson and multiple District 33 championships, including last Wednesday's 11-1 win over visiting Ossining for the 12U championship (46-60).

It helps to have great coaching in place, which CALL often has, including 2021 Manager Lou Vernagallo, who played the game at a very high collegiate level (LIU) before playing professionally in West Virginia in the Frontier League. Flanked by assistants Jon Clyman and Mike Silvestri, the CALL-stars went 3-0 and advanced to the NYS Little League Sectional round and will begin play against a yet to be determined opponent on July 15 in Stony Point, NY.

Going into the District 33 title game, CALL only needed to win last Wednesday's game to become D33 champs as it was 2-0 going into the game and Ossining came out of the losers bracket and needed to win twice.

It was a pitching rematch of District Game 1 with Louie Vernagallo of CALL facing Ossining ace Owen Brennan. Vernagallo had already shut down Ossining in game one on June 26th, pitching 4 1/3 brilliant innings (0 ER, 3 H, 0 BB and 12 whiffs). CALL won that game 3-2 playing short handed with only players and missing stars Thomas Imperati, Matt Clyman and Max Selinger.

"We needed a team effort without those guys in the lineup that night and that's what we got from one through nine, whoever we call upon delivered," Coach V said.

CALL got off to the fast start in the title tilt, going up 2-0 in the first on a groundout RBI by Vinny Lugo, which scored Max Selinger and a single by Clyman, which plated Imperati.

In the 3rd, CALL jumped out to a 3-0 lead when Vernagallo got drilled on his helmet by a 60 mph Brennan fastball, which allowed Lugo to score. In the top of the 4th, CALL opened it up on a Lugo single to CF, which scored Selinger and a three-run HR to dead center by Clyman scoring Lugo and Imperati for a 7-0 lead. In the 5th, a Selinger single to CF scored Chris Silvestri making it 8-0. ## Fox Lane's Davis No.1 Pick in MLB Draft to Pittsburgh, Lakeland's Mikulski Follows at No.50 to San Fran Ever since their respective heydays at Fox Lane High and Lakeland High School, former Section 1 standouts -- Louisville C Henry Davis and Fordham P Matt Mikulski -- showed the kind of promise that had scouts knocking down their doors at an early age, and both were rewarded for years of dedication in last Sunday's Major League Baseball Draft where the strong-armed Davis, a former 2018 first team All-NYS Fox, went No.1 overall to the Pittsburgh Pirates after a sophomore year in which he .370 with 15 home runs and 10 stolen bases in leading the Cardinals to a berth in the NCAA College World Series. Mikulski, a 2017 former second team All-NYS Hornet, went 49 picks later in the second round to the San Francisco Giants after recently garnering 2nd team All-American honors at Fordham after finishing senior year with a perfect 9-0 record to go with a 1.45 ERA and 124 strikeouts in 68.1 innings pitched, leading to his being named both a Golden Spikes semifinalist and the Atlantic 10 Pitcher of the Year.
