Planners Continue to Weigh Issues on Cell Tower Application

By Martin Wilbur

Two Mount Kisco residents have asked the village Planning Board to issue a positive declaration for a proposed cell tower as attorneys for the applicant and board clashed over the issue of whether the tower can be sited elsewhere on the property.

A more than two-hour public hearing last Tuesday evening on Homeland Towers' plan to erect a 140-foot monopole antenna tower on about a 3,000-square-foot portion of the 25-acre property at 180 S. Bedford Rd. addressed a wide range of technical issues related to the project, including a preliminary visual analysis of the Nov. 21 balloon test that occurred at the site.

However, the hearing grew testy at times when Village Attorney Whitney Singleton repeatedly asked the applicant's lawyer, Robert Gaudio, to provide the village with a copy of Homeland Towers' leases with property owner Skull Island

Partners providing evidence that it is limited to building the tower at one specific spot on the land.

In Homeland Towers' submission to the board, Singleton and a couple of board members had pointed out that a document stated that the company can site the tower elsewhere on the property to help reduce negative visual impacts on neighbors or the environment, among other factors. The tower is proposed to be located to the northeast of the roughly 5.7-acre ground-mounted solar farm that is also being considered for the property.

"I'm going to continue to ask you for a copy (of) any and all leases and if you don't like that, that's just too bad," Singleton told Gaudio. "You have a lease that you submitted to us that's a memorandum of lease that (states) you can go anywhere on the property."

But Gaudio responded that pursuant

Mt. Kisco Man to Receive Special Honor

Melvin Berger of Mount Kisco is one of 49 senior citizens throughout Westchester that will be honored at the 38th Annual Senior Citizens Hall of Fame Awards, scheduled to be held virtual on Friday, December 4 at 11:30 a.m. Berger is one of four honorees receiving "Special Recognition" for his achievements. Berger, originally from the Bronx, first moved to Mount Kisco in 1984 when he purchased a pharmacy there. Within two short years, he saw firsthand the impacts of addiction in his community, particularly through individuals attempting to fill fake prescriptions. He worked with the local police and struck up a conversation with a local judge about his concern for these people, and thus began his tireless volunteer work. These programs have improved the quality of life for individuals in Mount Kisco and beyond, and include treatment programs for those in the Hispanic community, anti-addiction education and support programs for local teenagers, drug take back days, and a critical emergency shelter partnership program which runs in local churches through the cold months of the year in Mount Kisco and in the surrounding communities.

New Castle Begins Discussions on Form Based Code Feedback

By Lindsay Emery

The New Castle Town Board began internal discussions last week on the proposed Form Based Code, looking to work through some of the more contentious issues that have been raised by residents.

Board members re-emphasized that the current iteration of the code is a draft and pledged to work collaboratively with the Chappaqua Board of Education. There has been some dissension between the two boards since September when the Town Board approved the code's Draft Generic Environmental Impact Statement (DGEIS) and the school board voiced skepticism regarding the code's full build-out scenario, which the document states could result in nearly 1,000 units in downtown Chappaqua but just under 100 school-age children.

The school district has hired its own planning consultant to analyze the town's projections.

Both boards will hold a joint work session on Tuesday, Jan. 12 at 7 p.m. to review and discuss the results of the school district's consultant's work. There is an additional public session that has been tentatively scheduled following the Town Board's Jan. 19 work session. Deputy Supervisor Jeremy Saland said last week that the Town Board isn't ignoring the potential influx of students in the school district.

Supervisor Ivy Pool said there are five initial areas of discussion that will be considered by the board, although the categories – administration and process, regulating plan, housing and retail, impacts and development and architecture regulations – may still change with additional feedback from the Town Board or the public.

For the administration and process section of the discussion, Town Board members deliberated how the approval process can be streamlined to allow for expedited review of certain applications. The board also tried to decipher how to determine which types of projects could trigger a different type of review. Pool mentioned the possibility of having the Final Generic Environmental Impact Statement clearly compare and contrast what currently exists in town and future build-out scenarios.

Town officials also addressed the prospect of expanding the neighbor notification area and developing a website page for future development projects related to the Form Based Code.

"If it's just that they get notified and they come in and talk but no one's really listening because it's already basically been approved, that's not so helpful, just a notification," Councilwoman Lisa Katz said. "They need to be able to come in and potentially change the project."

Katz then questioned whether it was possible to limit the number of open permits in the hamlet. Pool also wondered if it was feasible to consider a phased approach to limit the rate of development downtown.

"You're not concerned about the number of projects, you're concerned about the impacts, whether that impact is from two projects or from six projects," Town Attorney Nicholas Ward-Willis said.

Ward-Willis explained that all property in the 72-acre study area must be included within a zoning to an agreement with Skull Island Partners there is no ability to change the location of the tower. Furthermore, he said there is nothing in the village code that requires his client to provide that information to the village.

"There is no conspiracy here, there's nothing that we're hiding other than the fact that we have a contract, it's a proprietary contract, we have fairly represented that this is the only location where we're permitted to place the facility," Gaudioso said.

Singleton said that it's highly confusing that the village was provided with a document that refutes Gaudioso's claim.

"I think you can appreciate the fact that the landowner is not going to allow the lessee to go anywhere they want," Gaudioso said.

Board member Ralph Vigliotti responded that calls for copies of all leases between the two parties is based on what had originally been submitted to the village, which clearly supports Singleton's argument.

"It's not anything that was made up, and we stand by our village attorney," Vigliotti said.

The recurring spat came before comments from a handful of speakers during the public comments portion of the hearing. Mount Kisco Chase resident Maryann Tarnok and village Conservation Advisory Council Chairman John Rhodes called on the board to issue a positive declaration for the cell tower and solar farm under the state Environmental Quality Review Act (SEQRA).

Tarnok said the clearing of 600 to 700 trees next to Marsh Sanctuary and dozens of neighbors is just one of many environmental factors against the twin proposals and would transform the site into a "commercial-industrial zone."

Rhodes said a positive declaration is necessary to allow the Planning Board access to the information it needs to make an informed decision.

"We need the ability of the Planning Board to create a scope to decide what information and what documents you need in order to make a proper decision here," Rhodes said.

Another speaker, attorney Anthony Campanelli, who is representing nearby homeowner Rex Pietrobono, said it is up to the board to determine whether the applicant's proposed location and height are the least intrusive site and height possible.

"It doesn't matter what the applicant or its attorney says, it's up to you to make that fact-finding determination, and the reason that's critical is that if you find the applicant has proven both of these things," then you must approve the application, Campanelli said.

The Planning Board may be faced with a difficult decision regarding timing. In September, it determined that the environmental review for the proposed solar farm and cell tower be conducted in tandem. However, under federal telecommunications law, municipalities have up to 150 days from the time of submission to make a decision on the application, Gaudioso has previously stated.

Meanwhile, Sunrise Community Solar, the applicant proposing the solar farm, has canceled multiple appearances since the summer. Therefore, the cell tower application appears to be advancing ahead of the solar farm review.

Homeland Towers is looking to build the tower to enable Verizon, the anchor carrier, to improve coverage gaps along the Route 172 corridor. It is expected that up to three additional carriers would be co-located on the tower.

The hearing was adjourned until the board's Dec. 8 meeting.

district, whether it is municipally owned or not. Rezoning public land has sparked some concerns in the community that the town could be motivated to sell some of its land for development or entice a developer.

Director of Planning Sabrina Charney Hull said that the reason there are parcels in the Form Based Code zoning district is because they were in the previous zoning district that the town is looking to replace.

During the recent public hearings on the proposed code, building height was one of the more contentious points of discussion.

Katz, Pool and Councilwoman Lauren Levin agreed that five-story buildings are not in character with the Chappaqua hamlet. The Form Based Code has proposed five-story structures in limited areas of the hamlet – the west side of South Greeley Avenue from Woodburn Avenue to King Street and a portion of the town-owned parking lot at the train station.

Pool said that she would prefer to see four stories as the maximum height with perhaps the top floor being recessed to make the buildings appear less massive.

Levin introduced the idea of a transitional buffer known as the neighborhood compatibility clause in the Form Based Code that protects residents at 149 King St.

The public hearing on the Form Based Code was adjourned on Nov. 10 until the Town Board's Dec. 8 meeting. The board also plans to once again extend its downtown Chappaqua moratorium for another six months while the town continues to receive comments on the DGEIS proposed Form Based Code. The moratorium was originally enacted in late 2018.

Cuomo Focuses on Hospital Capacity, Health Care Resources as Virus Surges

By Martin Wilbur

The spiraling number of COVID-19 cases in New York State prompted Gov. Andrew Cuomo Monday to announce strategies focused on ensuring adequate hospital capacity, staff and testing while keeping schools open as much as possible.

On Sunday, the state reported 3,532 positive COVID-19 statewide, a nearly 250 percent increase from Oct. 29 and up from 429 on Aug. 29. Health officials expect an even greater post-Thanksgiving and holiday season virus surge that may last into mid-January.

"We are now worried about overwhelming the hospital system, and if these numbers continue to increase, which we expect they will, you will see serious stress on the hospital system," Cuomo said.

The governor said the state will extend its yellow, orange and red zone designations to include hospital rates, death rates, ICU capacity and personal protection equipment.

Other specific steps outlined by Cuomo calls for hospital systems, such as Northwell, Montefiore and others around the state, to shift patients to its other locations to avoid overwhelming a single facility. He warned that if a hospital gets overwhelmed, there will be a state investigation, and if it is found a hospital system failed to redistribute patients, it will be cited for malpractice.

Additional steps call for health care systems to prepare emergency field hospitals and be prepared to staff them, plan to increase bed capacity by 50 percent and confirm personal protection equipment stockpiles.

This Friday, the state will stop all elective surgery in Erie County because of a surge in cases in western New York State. The halt in elective surgeries will be considered elsewhere throughout the state should that become necessary.

Hospital systems are also being asked to identify retired doctors and nurses to have on standby to supplement current staff.

Cuomo said the state must make these preparations to avoid the acute overload the health care system experienced in the spring.

"In the new battlefield, hospital capacity is the top concern - period," he said. "It's about hospital beds, it's about ICUs and it's about having enough staff and enough equipment. That is the effect and that is what we're going to have to deal with."

While cases continue to explode in Westchester, County Executive George Latimer said Monday that COVID-19-related hospitalizations are currently manageable. He spoke with hospital administrators throughout the county on Monday, and they were confident that COVID-19 hospitalizations at this point were under control.

On Saturday, there were 244 virus patients in Westchester hospitals. While that number has doubled in the past two weeks, it represents less than 10 percent of the roughly 3,000 hospital beds within the county, Latimer said.

However, the county executive said other numbers are worrisome. As of Sunday, there were 6,117 active cases in Westchester, a number that has more than quadrupled from 1,393 since Oct. 30. During the last week, 15 people died of the virus, placing the county death toll since the start of the pandemic at 1,515. For the month of November there were 42 COVID-19-related deaths in Westchester.

"As these numbers continue to increase, it's going to be a concern how we're going to have to deal with it," Latimer said.

In addition to the state's strategies to manage hospitalizations, Cuomo also disclosed other measures to try and limit the spread of the disease. He said the state continue to look to increase overall testing, and target it more effectively to health care workers, nursing homes, schools and essential workers. The key is to have it targeted to the proper populations but also have a fair distribution of tests so it is most effective.

The emphasis on testing for schools is to maintain as much in-person learning as possible, particularly for grades K-8 and special education students, Cuomo said. Schools that are in designated orange zones will not automatically shut down, he said. If a school is located in an orange zone, it will be expected to test 20 percent of its students over a month and maintain a low enough positivity rate to continue in-person instruction. If a school is in a red zone, it would have to test 30 percent of its students in a month.

Officials also plan to run a public information campaign stressing the importance of limiting gatherings and avoiding holiday celebrations at home other than with members of your immediate household. The state estimates that there has been close to a 98 percent compliance rate with masks, and it is hoped that repeating information about the need to avoid social gatherings can be similarly effective, Cuomo said.

He said it is estimated that 65 percent of the latest wave of transmissions has been a result of small gatherings, dwarfing the rate of infections at workplaces and schools.

"We have to communicate this to people the way we communicate about masks," Cuomo said.

The governor also announced that the state will develop an equitable vaccine distribution plan, but did not expect widespread inoculations until at least late spring or early summer because of the complicated nature of the operation.

Farber Says Goodbye to Village Board After Decade of Service

By Martin Wilbur

Village Board colleagues of Mount Kisco Deputy Mayor Jean Farber paid tribute to her 10 years of service to municipal government, praising her efforts to elevate the arts and local historical society while always providing a voice of reason.

Farber, a Democrat, who has completed her fifth two-year term on the board, decided against running for re-election this year. She is being replaced by former trustee Anthony Markus, who had previously served on the board for 14 years before losing his seat in 2017. He will be sworn in along with returning Trustee Karen Schleimer, who both ran unopposed on the Democratic ticket last month.

Farber thanked a long list of current and former village officials at her last board meeting on Nov. 16 as well as residents for having provided her the privilege to serve.

"I have been so fortunate to have met so many of you," said Farber, 72, a real estate broker. "Thank you all for the most amazing 10 years of my life. Please stay the course, be safe, give a shout-out when you can. Thank you, thank you, thank you very much."

She mentioned in early March and again at her last meeting, which once again was a virtual meeting, that she thought it was time someone else had the opportunity to serve on the board.

Board members sent a photo album and a small desktop sculpture to Farber's home, both of which bear her name followed by the phrase "10 years of service."

Her colleagues recognized her efforts working alongside the Mount Kisco Arts Council to bring a variety of arts programming to the village during her tenure, including free concerts in the public space between the library and Village Hall, art exhibits at the library and pop-up exhibits. Farber was also credited with working with the Kirby Commons developers to have them provide a public arts space for the council within its proposed development.

In addition, she worked with the Mount Kisco Historical Society to move the organization to its new home at 40 Green St., using a portion of the former village police department's home.

Mayor Gina Picinich said along with her accomplishments, finding common ground was one of the hallmarks of Farber's time on the board.

"You always listen and work to seek compromise to find the best, most effective solutions for the community, and you always represent our village and yourself with grace and class," Picinich said.

Trustee Peter Grunthal echoed those sentiments.

"(You've) been a tremendously important person on our board," he said. "She has brought a light touch, a lovely smile and an impressive balance and stability to her decisions. I've always enjoyed working with her and I will miss her presence on the board."

Trustee Karen Schleimer, who was Farber's running mate four times from 2012 to 2018, called her "my mentor."

"To spearhead the arts and music, these programs and what that has meant for everyone; it's available to everyone without charge. This is just the most wonderful thing everyone could ever bring to Mount Kisco," Schleimer said.

Trustee David Squirrel, who has known Farber for about 25 years, said he was certain that she would find a way to contribute to the community without being on the Village Board.

"We will miss you. We will definitely miss you, but you love this town so much and you love to serve so much that I definitely feel that we're going to be seeing a lot of you going forward," he said.

Jean Farber, who has completed her five terms of service on the Mount Kisco Village Board.

Croton Trio Ensures Everyone is Protected with Homemade Face Masks

By Anna Young

With COVID-19 fatigue setting in for most, it can be easy to forget the mass panic and fear so many felt at the start of the pandemic when face masks were at one point inaccessible.

Knowing hospitals, front line workers and residents were reeling from the shortage of face masks in March, three Croton-on-Hudson residents, Liz Poling-Hiraldo, Jayne Grant and Khamla Erskine, launched Croton Face Mask Makers to ensure those in need would never have to feel unsafe at work or when leaving their home.

Since March, the local group, which produces free homemade cloth face masks, has recruited about 140 residents across Westchester and Putnam counties to generate more than 36,000 masks and coverings to more than 160 hospitals, shelters, schools and organizations across the state and nation.

"What keeps this going is that there is a need out there and it makes me feel good that we can address that need," Poling-Hiraldo said. "It is a really incredible thing to be able to help those who have been forgotten and places that aren't necessarily being helped by the government."

On March 21, just days after New York went into lockdown due to rising coronavirus cases, the trio launched a Facebook page, imploring friends to make masks for those in need after Erskine issued concern that family members in the medical field were experiencing a shortage of PPE.

The trio and group members immediately went to work after contacting area medical professionals and hospitals that might need additional PPE, Poling-Hiraldo said. Within days of launching, hundreds of masks were produced to fulfill orders made by New York-Presbyterian Hospital, Children's Hospital at Montefiore, and Westchester Medical Center.

Other orders included, NYU Medical Center, Bethel Nursing Home and Rehabilitation Center, and Sing Sing Correctional Facility.

By April 1, the group had made over 1,000 masks to donate, Poling-Hiraldo said, with requests coming in from all over through outreach and word of mouth. In August, the group had surpassed 25,000 masks donated, with the number exceeding 36,000 last month.

But what started off as an effort to support hospitals and first responders soon expanded to homeless shelters, schools, nursing homes, post offices, military bases, food pantries, farmers, tribal nations, local community groups, and area prisons.

"It really took off on its own, and as people heard about us, we just started taking in more and more requests," Poling-Hiraldo said. "It just kept evolving overtime, and every time I thought we were going to wind down, someone else came in with an order."

With so many masks being created at one time, Poling-Hiraldo eventually created a depot outside her home for folks to pick up fabric and drop off masks. She and her kids would then bag the masks in personalized kits and fulfill the order.

The depot was also available to those wanting a mask for themselves or to make donations. Poling-Hiraldo said people often felt bad they couldn't sew and would donate money, fabric or necessary sewing items, asserting how they wanted to help.

"We've gotten donations of sewing machines and fabric, so anything people could do to empower us because we were the people who could sew, they would do," she said. "As time went on, people wanted to help and we created other jobs for them to do, like manage the depot, and we had people volunteering to drive and deliver orders for us."

As the group continued to grow over the months, Poling-Hiraldo said they began incorporating scrub caps, headbands, buttons, and ear savers into the fold after several requests for them were made. Ear savers were made available via 3D printer or crochet, she said.

"We found some simple patterns and they all took off," she said. "Now we're making window masks for the hard of hearing."

While the local group has been fortunate to help those in need, Poling-Hiraldo said it's also given community members a feeling of purpose and friendship during a very isolated and stressful time. It makes you feel good to help people and give back in a meaningful way, she said.

Even though the group launched nine months ago, Poling-Hiraldo explained how people continually carve time out of their day to sew, crochet or help in some way.

"They're taking time out of their day where they could be doing something else, and they're conscientiously making the time because they want to," Poling-Hiraldo said. "It gives them a purpose and this whole COVID thing makes everyone feel out of control and this is one of those things that gives people a sense of control."

As coronavirus cases continue to surge statewide, Poling-Hiraldo acknowledged that many are suffering from COVID fatigue. But she pressed that as Croton Face Mask Makers continue to help the community, she takes solace knowing people are masked and safe.

"Making masks is a sign of love. If I'm putting a mask on someone else's face, I can help slow the spread," Poling-Hiraldo said. "There are nurses and doctors who are working long hours, so if I can make their lives a little bit more comfortable, then I'll have done something."

Childhood Education Center Makes its Westchester Debut

By Martin Wilbur

Westchester offers plenty of choices for early childhood and afterschool programs for working parents, but there's a new option locally that parents of young children might find appealing.

Lightbridge Academy, which was established more than 20 years ago in New Jersey and has expanded to locations throughout the Northeast, opened its first location in Westchester on Oct. 5 in Elmsford's new mixed-used building The Elm at 35 Valley Ave., off of Exit 21 on the Saw Mill Parkway.

Director Maureen Gioio, who has 36 years of early childhood care experience, said Lightbridge Academy is more than just daycare, serving as an early childhood education center that is not only convenient for parents but recognizes that each child learns differently.

"What they do is they have taken the really great parts of all the early childhood programs and developed their own curriculum that is developmentally appropriate for each age group," said Gioio. "They also teach to the whole child. So every child learns differently."

The Elmsford location, which has about 10,000 square feet with 11 classrooms, a large multipurpose room and two outdoor play areas, is owned by Ramkumar Jagadeesan and Joanne McKay, a couple who sent their three children, now between the ages four and eight, to Lightbridge. Gioio said they had such a great experience with their own kids that they wanted to bring the program to Westchester.

"They see a need for quality childcare so this is why they decided to come in," Gioio said. "They had such a great experience and they wanted to share it with Westchester families."

Lightbridge Academy takes children from six weeks old through the preschool ages for half- and full-day programs from two to five days a week. Gioio said drop-in service is also offered in the event parents need an option to watch their children on short notice; however, she recommends that families provide staff at least 24 hours' notice so Lightbridge has appropriate staffing levels on hand.

As of mid-November, there were seven full-time teachers and assistants that oversee a little more than 20 children enrolled in its early childhood programs. Gioio said additional children are ready to come on board after the holidays and next spring, as parents prefer to take a wait-and-see approach regarding COVID-19.

Afterschool programs are available for school-age children up to 12 years old.

The Lightbridge program is based on helping each child reach its different development appropriate milestones, she said.

"We also believe in play, she said. "I say it's the child's work."

The teachers encourage problem-solving with other children, a critically important skill to learn from a young age, Gioio said. Lightbridge also provides sign language instruction to every child along with Spanish. The curriculum is often influenced by an appropriate theme of the week or month, she said.

It is open from 6:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Gioio said that the center has attracted families from the Bronx and southern Westchester as well as northern Westchester and as far away as Brewster who work in the White Plains area and central Westchester.

There is also a contingent of parents

Harckham Declares Victory Over Astorino in 40th Senate District

By Anna Young

Exactly three weeks after Election Day, state Sen. Pete Harckham secured victory to continue serving the 40th state Senate District for a second term.

Following a heated race, Harckham declared victory last Tuesday over Republican challenger and former Westchester County executive Rob Astorino. While Astorino led the race by more than 8,000 votes at the close of Election night, Harckham was able to start quickly reduce the lead once officials began tallying thousands of absentee ballots.

As of the close of last week, with most absentee ballots in the three-county district tallied, Harckham forged to the lead by nearly 6,000 votes: 82,765-76,788. A small number of ballots have yet to be tabulated after they had been challenged by the Astorino camp but there aren't enough outstanding ballots remaining to change the outcome, Harckham spokesman Thomas Staudter said.

"I am humbled and grateful for all of the tremendous support I have received during this campaign and thank all of the voters in Senate District 40 for participating in this historic election," Harckham said. "The confidence and trust that residents have placed in me once again will continue to guide my intentions. These are challenging times, though, and I look forward to being engaged in the hard work necessary to ensure a better future for all."

After the absentee ballots were counted in Dutchess and Putnam Counties, two Republican strongholds, Harckham had reduced Astorino's lead to 5,896 votes, with the process to begin counting Westchester's roughly 25,000 absentee ballots getting underway on Nov. 20.

In total, the absentee ballots in the race amounted to about 25 percent of the entire vote.

Astorino conceded last Tuesday, with both men congratulating each other on a hard-fought race.

"Mr. Astorino called Sen. Harckham this morning to congratulate him on his victory and to offer him his support in any way," Astorino's spokesperson William O'Reilly said. "This was a close, close race, but we respect the will of the voters and wish Sen. Harckham the best in his new term."

Two years ago, Harckham became the first Democrat to serve northern Westchester and Putnam County in the state Senate since 1914 after ousting Republican Terrence Murphy. Harckham will begin his second term in January. His win secures a Democratic supermajority in the Senate.

"I'm thrilled to welcome my good friend Sen. Peter Harckham back to the state Senate," said Majority Leader Andrea Stewart-Cousins.

"Sen. Harckham has worked tirelessly to deliver results to the people of Westchester, Dutchess and Putnam counties and earned this re-election. I look forward to continuing to partner with Sen. Harckham as we tackle the many challenges ahead of us."

The 40th District covers the villages of Sleepy Hollow, Pleasantville, Briarcliff Manor, Croton-on-Hudson, Buchanan and Mount Kisco, the towns of Cortlandt, Lewisboro, Mount Pleasant, New Castle, North Salem, Pound Ridge, Somers and Yorktown, the City of Peekskill and parts of Putnam and Dutchess counties.

Slater Joins Business Council of Westchester's Economic Recovery Task Force

Yorktown Supervisor Matt Slater has joined the Business Council of Westchester's Economic Recovery Task Force.

Economic Recovery Task Force is developing a comprehensive plan to provide specific recovery measures for Westchester's diverse business and not-for-profit sectors. Supervisor Slater will share his perspective and help the group formulate initiatives that include northern Westchester's special needs.

"I'm grateful to the Business Council of Westchester for their invitation to join this critical group. As we inch closer to a Covid-19 vaccine, our county's governments, businesses and institutions must work together to forge a recovery that benefits all our residents," Slater said. "Throughout the pandemic downturn, Yorktown aggressively pursued a recovery agenda that has already borne fruit in terms of new investments and redevelopment of languishing properties."

The Task Force, comprised of more than 40 leaders from a broad spectrum of economic sectors across Westchester, first met in May to begin development of a strategic plan for providing coordinated assistance to businesses as the County's economy reemerges from the unprecedented pandemic.

"As we emerge from this crisis it is critically important that we have the strategies and plans in place that will let us hit the ground running," said BCW President and CEO

Marsha Gordon. "We are thrilled to have Supervisor Slater join our group and we are eager to learn about his revitalization efforts for Yorktown."

The county's largest and most influential business membership organization, The Business Council of Westchester is committed to helping businesses market, learn, advocate and grow. In addition, The Business Council of Westchester is actively involved in reviewing federal, state and county legislation and regulations in order to assess the potential impact on the business community and to influence the outcomes through advocacy when the business community's interests may be affected.

On This Thanksgiving, More Grateful to You Than Ever

From the Publisher

By Adam Stone

It was the type of text that rocks your world, triggering a thousand thoughts at once. "My diagnostic test came back positive this afternoon," my longtime colleague and friend Martin Wilbur, The Examiner's Editor-in-Chief and founding journalistic voice, wrote me on Nov. 11, delivering the news that he contracted COVID-19.

Gratitude can be a complicated emotion, because it's too often a byproduct of unpleasant developments in our lives.

In the wrenching weeks that have followed Martin's diagnosis, as he continued to keep me posted about his family's battle with this vicious, indiscriminating, apolitical but politicized beast of a virus in the lead up to Thanksgiving, I kept reminding myself of all I had to be thankful for during this admittedly vexing year.

Setting aside personal gratitude to family, friends and staff for the purpose of this thank you note, let me first say I've never been more acutely aware of just how much Examiner Media's success is inextricably linked to your readership and support. Our readers and advertisers are our oxygen, and, improbably, we're now breathing as comfortably as ever thanks to you.

In March, as the world was turned on its head by a global pandemic, our small local news publishing company was shook to its core, forcing layoffs and a fundamental restructuring of how we operate. In the days, weeks and months that followed, we turned to you for assistance. The result was hundreds of small donations totaling more than thirty-thousand critical dollars. And, just as fortifying, a seemingly endless stream of messages expressing your admiration and appreciation of the professionally reported local journalism we've been producing for the past 13 years.

As the founder and publisher, you might assume I always possessed a precise idea of the depth of appreciation the community holds for our publications. It's not to say I was entirely unfamiliar. It's to say I already knew the appreciation was deep and profound but, as I learned, the appreciation ran far deeper than I previously understood. In fact, the truth of the matter is, your insistence that we continue, recover and return strong was deeper than even my own initial response. As I wrote once before, there was a fleeting moment in March — and I promise it was literally just a moment — when I allowed myself to imagine a different professional future, one where I permitted the virus' roaring waves to wash our newspapers away. You, on the other hand, didn't flinch. You immediately demanded our continued long-term presence covering your town board meetings, your school board work sessions, your homecoming games, your local parades. You demanded it in deed and in words, and here we are, thanks to you.

Let me also say a word about this virus as we enter the holiday season. We have been covering the impact of COVID-19 since the beginning, hour-to-hour, day-to-day, and this moment in time worries me as much as any. With something of a finish line finally within sight, with the development of several promising and seemingly miraculous vaccines on their way, let's redouble efforts to remain safe, and not fall victim to the ill effects of an understandable but fatally dangerous COVID safety fatigue. While we can take some genuine comfort knowing how far we've come with treatments, the daily decisions we face are no ordinary exercise in risk assessment, like the patently absurd comparisons to our logical willingness to risk the flu in our pre-pandemic lives. There's a reason the expression "avoid it like the plague" exists as the ultimate expression of caution.

As I can now personally conclude, based on Martin's experience, you genuinely wouldn't — or shouldn't — wish a bad case of this virus on your worst enemy. That's the best way to process how much it could flatten you and your loved ones. Wear a mask, social distance and wash your hands with the same appropriate level of zeal you exhibited in March for your safety and the safety of those you love — and even for those you don't. These months ahead promise to be a challenge but there's very real, shining light glimmering on the warmer end of this 2020-2021 tunnel. Let's make it there safely and prudently, controlling what we can control.

As I write this thank you note on Nov. 25, on the eve of our great American holiday, Martin, for his part, returned to work for the first time today, having endured hell, prepared to return to serve you with his impeccable brand of high quality community coverage. All of us at Examiner Media are that much more sympathetic and personally attuned to the havoc wrought by this yet-to-be-tamed beast. And in a very real sense, we are here, ready and poised to cover this next chapter, due to your generosity of spirit and deep appreciation for community journalism.

From all of us to all of you, thank you again. Happy Thanksgiving (in the rearview when you read this) and wishing you and yours a joyful holiday season. Please also make it a safe one so we can avoid more texts that rock our worlds.

Gratefully yours,

Adam Stone, Publisher of Examiner Media

Yorktown PD is a Model for Other Communities to Emulate

This past fall the Town of Yorktown has engaged in a meaningful conversation about the state of the Yorktown Police Department. Multiple presentations have been made which have provided clarity on current policing policies as well as meaningful data on the performance of our police department. These presentations, which were made by Police Chief Robert Noble, clearly displayed the superior level our police department has and continues to operate on. This should come as no surprise to any informed resident. The Yorktown Police Department has been consistently accredited by New York State for nearly 30 years. I was involved when they were first accredited and applaud their continued commitment to this cause. We are truly blessed to have someone with the integrity and caliber of Chief Noble who oversees the day to day operations of the department. Just like in the military, Chief Noble has three very capable lieutenants who assist with the ongoing responsibilities and duties to ensure the Yorktown Police Department operates at the high level this community has come to expect. Lastly, we have a very capable Board of Commissioners, the Yorktown Town Board, who the residents have elected. This process, which in my eyes has been superbly crafted and executed by Supervisor Matt Slater, has reestablished the Yorktown Police Department as a model for communities near and far. The Yorktown community should be proud of this Police Department, applaud our Town Supervisor and members of the Coalition for their ability to manage an emotionally charged issue and take the time to watch the meetings to understand how lucky we are to live in this great town.

Thanks to State DOT for Repaving Greenburgh Roads

In recent years The Examiner has published a number of letters and articles about the condition of NYS owned roads located within the Town of Greenburgh. Many residents complained about potholes, craters - - unsafe conditions on state roads. And, in 2018, 36 Greenburgh student interns organized a lobbying effort to persuade the state to repave roads within our town. The last time a NYS road located in the town was repaved was over five years ago. The students met with state Department of Transportation officials, state lawmakers. They organized petition drives.

I am very thankful that the New York State

Transportation Department was responsive to our concerns. This past week they completed repaving Dobbs Ferry Road from Sprain Parkway to Route 119 --one of the most pothole filled roads in the town. Earlier this summer the state repaved Hillside Ave in

Annual Yorktown Funeral Home Tree Lighting to be Held Virtual

Yorktown Funeral Home in Shrub Oak will hold its 10th Anniversary Holiday Tree Lighting Ceremony -- this year virtually and safely during this time of the COVID-19 pandemic -- on Sunday, December 6, at 6:15 p.m., according to Anthony Guarino, Funeral Director.

At that time, family members and friends of those whose lives were celebrated at the home since its founding in 2011 are invited to link remotely into the Home's event.

(<https://client.tribucast.com/tcid/36348081>)

"The holidays are a particularly difficult time of year for those who are grieving the loss of a loved one," said Guarino, "and this year, when many of us must isolate during the Covid-19 pandemic, we feel that celebrating in this way can bring comfort to family members and friends of the deceased.

"It gives us the opportunity to remember what's important about our lives and what we've shared with others who are no longer with us," Guarino continued.

Guarino added that anyone who wants to join in the ceremony to remember a lost friend or family member, even if they were not served by Yorktown Funeral

Home, is welcome to participate. "Interest in this event has grown each year, and it convinces us that the need is there for people to participate in this way," he said. "Even when person-to-person social distancing is necessary."

Additionally, the public is invited to visit the Home individually anytime during the month of December, after the 6th, to place an ornament on the tree.

Yorktown Funeral Home is located at 945 E Main Street in Shrub Oak. Its website is www.yorktownfuneralhome.com. The Guarino family also owns Yannantuono, Burr, Davis, Sharpe Funeral Home in Mt. Vernon.

Holtec Will Help Restore Indian Point Site and Benefit the Community

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) staff approval of the sale of Indian Point to Holtec should be welcome news to everyone who cares about our environment and economy in the Hudson Valley.

Indian Point's 24/7 carbon-free baseload power, and the millions in tax revenues it pays, will be missed after operations cease in April -- and we need a plan to make our communities whole. Holtec has that plan and the proven capabilities to carry it out.

The NRC staff are highly trained and experienced public servants who take their responsibilities seriously, examining facts without bias. They know Holtec well: the company's already been managing the spent fuel at Indian Point for years and will continue to do so whether the property is sold to it or not.

Those who seek to hinder the sale are the same people who, for years, leveled baseless charges -- exceedingly useful as fodder for fundraising or political maneuvering -- against Indian Point's operators.

Now they tell us to ignore NRC experts in favor of self-appointed gadflies.

While it is sadly easy to guess at the naysayers' ultimate goals, it's also sadly true that once Indian Point closes, the clock starts ticking for our future.

The choice is clear: between a site fully restored by Holtec by the early 2030s, or an industrial carbuncle on the shores of the Hudson that will sit untouched for the next 60 years. Our communities deserve the safest and timeliest decommissioning, and everyone should welcome the NRC staff's bringing that bright future one step closer.

A big thank you to NYS officials for the excellent job they did with milling and repaving these important roads. There are still many roads in Greenburgh and in our villages that need repaving. But - what NYS did in 2020 was a great start. And, their work is appreciated. I was also impressed with the team that the state assigned to the work within Greenburgh. Dina Colavito, Engineer in charge of the NYS Department of Transportation kept town officials informed of the status of the work they were doing, responded to calls and did a fabulous job. Thank you.

Mount Pleasant Chamber Launches “Be A Star” Drive to Help Needy

During a year when those in need require a bit more support, a group of Mount Pleasant restaurants and merchants will donate a percentage of their sales to benefit the local food pantry this month.

The “Be A Star” Drive will take place on December 8. The campaign is organized by the Mount Pleasant Chamber of Commerce in coordination with the Mount Pleasant Food Pantry, which is now assisted by the Thornwood Knights of Columbus.

“The Food Pantry is the brainstem of Laurie and Pete Smalley who saw a need when the pandemic hit,” said Tom Milliot, president of the Chamber of Commerce. “They started by providing meals to the senior population and quickly expanded when they discovered over two dozen families within the town that struggled to put food on the table.”

Laurie Smalley currently serves on the Mount Pleasant Town Board.

Following a chamber-sponsored dinner Smalley organized last month, the organization felt a food drive would be the best way to support those in need during the holiday season, while also aiding in driving customers to local businesses.

“It is very rewarding when so many people come together for a great cause,” Milliot said. “The Chamber Board members are all pitching in to get the word out.”

Key participants will include The Barley House, Silvio’s, and Valhalla Crossing. McCarthy Insurance will also make a generous donation to ensure that any cost to run the food drive would not stem from the events proceeds.

John Taxter of JT Graphics in Thornwood has also donated flyers and posters for the event.

Smalley, who was instrumental in working with ShopRite of Thornwood, has been donating food for many months. ShopRite is really one of many “Shining Stars” in this effort, Milliot stated.

“What our program needs now is a way to supplement the dry goods with other important nutrients and perishables,” Milliot said. “This event is really a win-win as it will not only raise needed funds to keep the program going strong into 2021 but will also help the local participating merchants.”

who are working from home who need to concentrate without interruption and want their children to have healthy interaction with their peers.

“Especially a child that’s beginning to walk or a toddler that needs one-on-one attention because toddlers are just beginning to explore, they’re climbing, they’re jumping, so a lot of the parents are working from home but they need to get work done, and they want their children to have social interaction and not just see mom and dad,” Gioio said.

Like all schools Lightbridge Academy is focused on secure facilities and providing health safety during the COVID-19 pandemic. There is a double set of doors with a face scanner to keep track of all visitors.

All staff and children who are old enough wear masks. There is emphasis on frequent handwashing and the center regularly sanitizes surfaces throughout the day. Lightbridge also is employing a professional cleaning service that comes in every evening, Gioio said.

The school is also refraining from mixing classes and teachers and it is capping its capacity until the end of the pandemic at 122 children.

Gioio said that Lightbridge Academy is a facility that she would have sent her own children to.

“I have a daughter that went through childcare. I’m a grandmother of three. I would only work in an environment that I would want my grandchildren in,” she said.

One of Lightbridge Academy’s 11 classrooms at its new Elmsford location, the center’s first site in Westchester.

Chappaqua Church Adds Outdoor Holiday Market to Annual Tree Sale

By Lindsay Emery

Even though the weather is getting cooler and people are gearing up to search for gifts for loved ones, holiday shopping is different this year because of the pandemic.

Discomfort surrounding shopping indoors has forced retailers to look elsewhere to make consumers feel safe.

The First Congregational Church of Chappaqua is trying to ease local residents' worries by adding an outdoor holiday market to their annual Christmas tree sales.

Rev. Dr. Martha Jacobs, the church's senior minister, visited farmers markets this summer and found that some vendors struggled through the summer and fall because of the lack of events. Jacobs thought that the church could supplement selling its Christmas trees with an outdoor Christmas market to support local vendors into the winter season.

"We've sold Christmas trees here for years and years and years and thought it would be a wonderful opportunity to give vendors a chance to have a place to continue to sell their wares," Jacobs said.

The church's congregants were supportive of supporting local merchants who lost opportunities to sell their products last summer when events were canceled. Jacobs said as a church, it is important to collectively support people, especially during the pandemic.

Jacobs' discussions with sellers led to more than 10 vendors agreeing to sell their merchandise, ranging from chocolates to health and beauty products. All vendors are required to bring their own tents, since the outdoor holiday market will be held rain or shine.

The market will also require patrons to wear masks and the retailers must follow social distancing protocols with tables and tents set up at least six feet apart. Jacobs also hopes that the church can provide an alternative outdoor activity for families, couples and individuals looking for a gift.

"They [the vendors] will require the people they deal with to wear a mask as well so we're really trying hard to make sure everyone is safe and also have an opportunity to kind of

do something a little different maybe than just going for a walk in a park," Jacobs said.

Ultimately, Jacobs wants the tree sale and market to drive patrons not only to the local vendors, but also the stores in nearby downtown Chappaqua.

Even though the holidays will be unusual compared to prior years, First Congregational Church is adapting to meet the needs of the community.

"Something may be a little different because our holidays are not going to be what they have been in the past this year," she said. "Hopefully people will be smart and will have smaller gatherings and a smaller Christmas, perhaps so that next year can be that much better and hopefully people are here for next year."

The Christmas tree sale and outdoor market is open during weekends through Sunday, Dec. 20. It is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturdays and 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Sundays. For more information, call 914-238-4411 or visit www.fcc-chappaqua.org.

Westchester Winter Wonderland Drive-Thru Light Extravaganza

Westchester Deputy County Executive Ken Jenkins joined with Westchester Parks Foundation (WPF), and the Westchester County Parks Department at Kensico Dam Plaza in Valhalla on Friday, November 27 to celebrate the opening of NEW Westchester's Winter Wonderland Drive-Thru Holiday Light Extravaganza.

Thanks to the event's presenting sponsor, Westchester Medical Center Health Network, Jenkins and Westchester Parks Foundation welcomed a special child to help him light the tree, nine-year-old Mt Vernon resident Jorden Hutchens, who made a miraculous recovery after contracting COVID-19 and suffering from a life-threatening complication of the virus. Jorden was treated at Maria Fareri Children's Hospital in May for Multi-System Inflammatory Syndrome, an illness seen in pediatric patients related to the coronavirus infection. Robison Oil was the sponsor the tree lighting ceremony.

Proceeds from this event benefit WPF and allow the organization to further its mission to advocate for and invest in the preservation, conservation, use and enjoyment of the 18,000 acres of parks, trails and open spaces within the Westchester County Parks system. # SUNY Purchase, WCC Successfully Navigate COVID-19 Crisis

By Joan Gaylord

How does the nation's largest public higher education system respond to a global pandemic? How do they protect the community while also continuing to fulfill its mission to educate its student body? And how is it that they have consistently had virus testing rates lower than the national averages?

Dr. Jim Malatras, chancellor of the State University of New York, as well as Dr. Milagros Pena, president of Purchase College, and Dr. Belinda Miles, president of Westchester Community College, shared their experiences during an online event sponsored by the Business Council of Westchester KeyBank Program.

"We saw this train coming," said Malatras, recalling his actions last spring. "But it came upon us so quickly. In March, we didn't know how it was going to play out, but we adapted as a system."

WCC quickly collaborated with the Westchester County Department of Health after the community became aware of the impending pandemic, Miles noted. She said officials followed scientific, evidence-based practices that would both protect the WCC community and allow them to continue offering classes.

"There is no playbook for this," Miles said. "We have had to be extremely nimble and learn fast."

One step that WCC administrators pursued was moving most classes online.

Over the summer, 100 percent of the faculty became certified in online learning in just two weeks. And while this has allowed the school to resume classes, it has also created new challenges.

One of the most glaring tasks each school has faced, the educators each said, has been the disparity in resources available to their students. Shifting to online learning revealed the unequal access to technology such including the availability of high-speed internet service, they said.

It has also removed a safety net that colleges provide for some students, including the availability of healthy food, a situation exacerbated by the economic devastation brought on by the pandemic.

"This has not been easy," said Pena. "College, for many students, provides a haven."

Pena added that SUNY officials have worked toward a change in policy for SNAP recipients. Students have been able to use their time spent in classes to meet the usual work requirements necessary to receive the benefits that allow them access to healthy food.

The SUNY system has also expanded mental wellness services for their students in response to the emotional impact of the pandemic.

Both Westchester campuses have continued to provide limited in-person learning, a step they realized would require careful planning and a lot of on-campus COVID testing. Their vigilance has resulted in one of the lowest positive test rates in the nation, Malatras said.

"Our students have done a phenomenal job," he added.

And to protect the students' families, each student who has spent this past fall on campus will be tested before returning home for Thanksgiving.

Educators said schools are now in the process of planning for next semester, a step made more challenging by the exhaustion so many are feeling after spending the last year adapting to necessary restrictions.

Before returning to campus, students must first provide a negative COVID test result. Calendars have also been adjusted to resume classes the first week of February, with spring break eliminated to minimize travel that could result in spreading the virus.

Furthermore, students will continue to get tested regularly while on campus.

Pena said much of the SUNY Purchase population has been willing to abide by regulations, such as wearing masks and social distancing, steps that have allowed the school to safely continue providing educational services.

"It really showcases our future leaders," she said.

Country Star Jessica Lynn to Stage Virtual Christmas Show Dec. 10

By Anna Young

Following months of anguish and unease, rising country star Jessica Lynn knows just how important it is to put folks in the holiday spirit this year.

With so many in need of joy, hope and a distraction, Lynn said she didn't want to let audiences down by canceling her annual Christmas event, which usually includes several local dance troupes, choirs and musicians joining her on stage throughout her two-hour show at The Paramount in Peekskill.

While she admitted canceling almost became inevitable, her love of Christmas, giving back to the community, and honoring tradition prevailed.

"I was holding on all this year hoping this show would happen and we tried every option and there was not a single option that would allow us to put on our show," said Lynn, a Yorktown resident. "I realized that we have to keep this tradition alive because it's been such a big deal for the last five years and a tradition for so many families."

With the current health crisis derailing plans to return to The Paramount, Lynn and her seven-member band, which includes her father, mother, and husband, will transition to a virtual platform to spread the holiday cheer. Her show will be free and live streamed from Daryl's House in Pawling on December 10.

The show can be accessed via Facebook or YouTube.

Unlike previous years, the show will be free to all, though Lynn said the event will accept virtual donations in lieu of tickets, with contributions split between Lynn's band and Daryl's House.

"I feel like this year more than ever people need something and maybe not everybody can afford a ticket," the 30-year-old singer said. "I wanted to make it's available to everybody."

Donations can also be made to Toys for Tots, which Lynn regularly supports during her annual show.

While Lynn is excited to perform this month, her admittedly favorite show to play comes after a year full of sadness and change. Like many who have lost their jobs or been forced to put plans on hold due to COVID-19, Lynn had to quickly adapt after her five-month long international tour was cancelled in March.

The tour, which she performs yearly, spanned 12 countries and 80 cities, with the Christmas show her final stop. Lynn said the tour, along with other local shows, makes up the revenue her band needs to sustain, perform, and support themselves individually.

When everything was canceled, Lynn said she spent a lot of time crying and wondering what the future held for the career she had spent half her life building.

"Our stages are gone, our work is gone, our shows are gone, and you just feel very lost and you don't know where to turn or what to do," Lynn said. "But then I realized early on that you have to have this mindset that everything will be ok, and as soon as I dried off my tears I decided to fight back."

With motivation to maintain a positive outlook, Lynn upped her social media presence and transitioned to the most high-quality technology that would allow her to host daily live stream performances on her Facebook page. She also reached out to radio stations and media outlets across the United States and internationally to schedule live virtual concerts and interviews.

As a result of her determination to press on and fight back against the virus, her audience has grown from thousands to millions in months with people tuning in to hear her sing from all over the world. She hopes the same will happen with her Christmas show.

"I miss performing so much and it's really where I feel most alive in life," Lynn said. "For me, starting our rehearsal now, I'm so thrilled to do that and feel some sense of normalcy and get on a stage again even if there's nobody there and be able to perform and do what I love."

Throughout the hour-long show, audiences can expect to hear Lynn's Christmas songs "It's Just Not Christmas" and "Santa You can Skip Our House," along with other traditional holiday classics.

"A Very Merry Country Christmas" is scheduled for 8 p.m. on Dec. 10. For more information on the show or how to donate, visit <https://rb.gy/pnreix>

Where and How to Celebrate the Holidays, Part I

It will be a holiday season like no other as we navigate COVID-19. Some towns and villages have put up lights and decorations early. We do deserve some delicious fun. So, whether you've been naughty or nice, it's time to make plans with friends and family.

If you are planning a remote ZOOM gathering, that's preferred. If you are planning to gather with friends and family, make sure you follow the latest COVID protocols. If you are dining out, restaurants have been trying their best to adhere to the guidelines. Take-out and delivery from your favorite eatery is a fine option, too.

Here are some festive suggestions for every palate, each offering a good dose of holiday cheer. Seasoned greetings!

Mulino's Holiday Fest

The show will go on at Mulino's of Westchester in White Plains. Begin with the bright glittering lights at the entranceway along Court Street. The annual Christmas Holiday Fest lasts through the season and it's a sight to behold for the whole family! The fountain garden is beautiful as is the lavish dining room and bar and lounge.

galore, holiday carolers, life-size toy soldiers, the bursting colorful floral displays and the handsome multilevel seating area. A special holiday menu is served. Open seven days. Valet parking. COVID-19 protocols will be in place. Time slot reservations advised.

Modern Italian Vintage Diner

Chef-owner and personable host Dean Vivolo of Trattoria Vivolo in Harrison serves his robust regional Italian cuisine out of a vintage diner just across from the Harrison Metro-North station. Sit at the counter, tuck into a booth or take a table in the rear greenhouse and enjoy the surprising contemporary and traditional flavors emanating from his kitchen: tasty thin-crust pizza; fresh old-fashioned meatballs and sausage; rabbit cacciatore; Crostino di Polenta topped with wild mushrooms, gorgonzola and tomato sauce; Lasagna Bolognese al Forno; osso buco; occasional roasted porchetta; and warm fresh Zabaglione with fresh fruit for dessert.

There's a good wine list. Sparkling lights evenings. Take-out and delivery are available. Free parking.

Trattoria Vivolo is located at 301 Halstead Ave. in Harrison. Info: 914-835-6199 or visit www.trattoriavivolo.com.

Southern Comfort

I have been enjoying my visits to Freebird Kitchen & Bar. There have been delicious offerings of succulent half-racks of baby back ribs, Cobb salad, spicy chicken wings and crispy Brussels sprouts, all reasonably priced. There are shrimp and grits and braised short ribs, too. The cooking here is satisfying and quite good, all done with a southern theme. Portions are ample and shareable. The seasonal lighting and artsy birds hanging from the ceiling in the dining room create a charming atmosphere.

Freebird has made special physical COVID-19 guideline changes to the bar and dining room area. There is seating outdoors along Mamaroneck Avenue and its rooftop is open as well. Happy hours are back: Tuesday

Creatively Festive at The 808 Bistro

Marking its 10th year, this eclectic Italian-American eatery on Scarsdale Avenue in Scarsdale, glows nightly in a rainbow of alternating colors. Glistening ceramic and metal tiles highlight the 50-seat dining room and ceiling. There is modern artwork, and the lighting and silver metal chairs softened by stressed leather seats offer comfort, as does the friendly staff. It's a Manhattan vibe and it's all kept properly casual.

Chef-owner Sal Cucullo Jr. is a Culinary Institute of America graduate who practically grew up in restaurants, working kitchens owned by his family as well venues of every stripe. In short, he knows how to cook Italian, but for as long as I have known him his creativity has never been bound by culinary borders. He can knock out a delicious version of Grandma's gnocchi in a basil-pomodoro sauce one moment and prepare a decadent baked macaroni and cheese with chunks of lobster and shrimp infused with truffle oil that will propel you to foodie heaven.

Feliz Navidad at Cantina

Cantina Taqueria & Tequila Bar is always

Aged Steaks, Chops at Alex's Bar & Grille

Proprietor Alex Ahmetaj, a veteran of the restaurant and hospitality field, updated the menu at Alex's Bar & Grille offering big cuts of aged steaks and chops along with generously served Northern Italian and Continental fare. The handsome dining room is split into cozy sections with white tablecloths, colorful deVilleneuve impressionist paintings and warming candlelight. Mediterranean clay-colored banquettes and chairs complement wooden walls and plush beige curtained windows.

Check out specialties such as pan-fried calamari with hot cherry peppers; Linguini alla Vongole (a delicious fresh Branzino prepared tableside); classic veal parmigiana; grilled filet mignon; New York sirloin or rib-eye steak; and pork chops.

Alex's Bar & Grille is located at 577 N. Broadway in North White Plains. Open daily. Free parking. Info: 914-358-1444 or visit www.alexsbargrille.com.

As a reminder, during ongoing pandemic, restaurants have been stepping up take-out and delivery service during prescribed hours. At this writing, restaurants are required to close by 10 p.m., though pick-up and delivery can continue. Some establishments offer in-house delivery and curbside pick-up.

The Impact of DNA Research on Traditional Winemaking

By Nick Antonaccio

Since the Romans began planting vines throughout their empire in the centuries before the birth of Christ, man has had to adapt to environmental issues and problems.

Since the European monks began toiling in their sophisticated vineyards and wineries in the Medieval and Renaissance eras, man has had to deal with the vagaries of weather and natural disasters.

Today's vineyard owners and winemakers have been dealing with these centuries-old issues in a manner similar to the trial-and-error methods of their predecessors – until recently.

The research and success in dealing with nature's proclivities and calamities is beginning to shift from artisans in disheveled, stained work clothes in field laboratories to trained scientists in crisp, spotless lab coats in science laboratories. Jeans research and genes research, if you'll forgive the alliteration.

Throughout history, winemakers have relied on traditional means of developing, hybridizing and grafting grapevines to produce more disease-resistant rootstock and grapes with unique traits. By unraveling the DNA of grapevines and grapes, the future impact of science on the wine industry seems destined to overcome many of the issues that have plagued winemakers for millennia.

For centuries, winemakers realized that developing the best grapevines was the function of two factors. First, the need for strong rootstock that withstands diseases such as fungus and mildew, and predators such as insects. Second, the hybridization of growth shoots, grafted onto rootstock, that produce the optimal quality fruit for a particular environment.

Let's review several instances in which man persevered, utilizing trial-and-error methods over a protracted period and at significant unrealized profits. A question looms large: Is DNA-altering a radical divergence from nature or a logical progression of man's interaction with it?

1. Before the advent of evolving DNA discoveries, winemakers across nations were continual victims of nature. In the late 19th century, French winemakers, in an effort to improve their grapevines, imported rootstock from the United States. Unfortunately, these hybridized clones harbored an insect (Phylloxera) that, while not harmful to American rootstocks, were devastating to European plants. Thousands of acres throughout Europe were wiped out in a matter of a few years.

Belatedly, the desperate French wine industry discovered that the American rootstock was immune to the Phylloxera. What a vicious circle: American rootstock unknowingly spread the disease and then was discovered to be the cure.

In the 21st century, similar circumstances are resolved in a science laboratory, producing immeasurable time and financial savings. Is DNA altering a radical divergence from nature or a logical progression of man's interaction with it?

2. Before DNA research, regional producers dependent on traditional grape varietals were victims of changing consumer palates. In Tuscany, sales of Chianti Classico wines began declining in the 1990s as consumers' preferences for more balanced, less acidic, wines emerged, relegating Chianti Classicos to also-rans.

Growers in the region reacted by investing significant research dollars over a number of years to develop hundreds of clones of their signature Sangiovese grape. Winemakers then conducted their own experiments to determine which of the new clones were best suited for their unique terroir.

Today the quality and popularity of Chianti Classico wines is at an all-time high. Is DNA altering a radical divergence from nature or a logical progression of man's interaction with it?

3. In the United States, winegrowers have gone one step further than the Tuscans. Rather than seeking a singular clone that meets a particular profile, they have selected, even created, clones that optimize grape quality and quantity in small plots within a single vineyard.

I've visited one such winery, Siduri Winery in California, which plants clones to meet specific terroirs of plots of several acres in size or several rows of vines. All in the name of manipulating nature to meet their objectives.

Is DNA altering a radical divergence from nature or a logical progression of man's interaction with it?

Science is stepping in to replace the timeworn efforts of winegrowers experimenting in their vineyards. The science of genomics is rising in popularity; stay tuned for further developments.

The Top Half-Dozen Home Updates That Pay Off

Like most people, I'm stuck at home during the COVID-19 pandemic, contemplating the ceiling, floor and walls, along with all they encompass. Other people might be using this downtime to consider upgrades they could be incorporating into their homes, but thank God I live in a relatively new home where no updates are needed.

I bought my condo new just five years ago and only had to add my personal touches, such as adding professional woodworking of fine furniture quality in each room.

Had the pandemic visited us a few years ago when I was living in a 275-year-old farmhouse, it would have been a totally different story. From the time my wife and I moved in more than 40 years ago, until we downsized to our new home, we were in constant updating mode. While we always loved our surroundings, we never quite finished the job.

If we were still living in our old home, I would be going nuts right now, making lists of the remodeling and upgrade work that needed to be done while sidelined by the pandemic. During the entire time I lived there, I was never able to just sit back and relax.

Now, however, with an almost perverse delight, I checked in with HGTV for the first time in years to see what other homeowners were up to in upgrading their homes and how much money they were doling out to get the projects done.

HGTV offered 15 top projects with the biggest returns on investment, but my mind would have exploded to consider all 15. I think a good half-dozen is all my brain can accommodate, even when it's strictly for editorial consideration.

1. Minor Bathroom Remodel Average return at resale: 102 percent

It costs about $10,500 to replace the tub, tile surrounds, floor, toilet, sink, vanity and fixtures. Remove dated wall coverings and apply a fresh coat of paint. For damaged walls, spray-on texture provides quick coverage. The removal of old shower doors or replacing them with clear glass creates the illusion of space.

2. Landscaping Average return at resale: 100 percent

The average homeowner spends about $3,502 for landscaping and $1,465 on a designer, according to the American Nursery Landscape Association. Local garden centers often offer free design services. Sod costs about 30 to 35 cents a square foot, so a 5,000-square-foot yard would cost about $1,500 to sod.

3. Minor Kitchen Remodel Average return at resale: 98.5 percent

A minor kitchen remodel averages $14,913 for $14,691 at resale, a recoup rate of 98.5

percent. Do a minor remodel when your kitchen needs a cosmetic update and not a drastically different floor plan. A $15,000 kitchen update covers 30 feet of re-facing for cabinets and drawers, a new wall oven, cooktop, sink and fixtures, laminate countertops and resilient flooring.

4. Exterior Improvements (including vinyl siding, paint, updated front entry) Average return at resale: 95.5 percent

The average national cost to replace 1,250 square feet of vinyl siding: $7,239. Average return: $6,914, with a recoup rate of 95.5 percent. A gallon of paint covers 400 square feet of house. Upscale, fiber-cement siding costs $10,393 and returns $10,771 at resale, an even better recoup rate of 103.6 percent.

5. Attic Bedroom Conversion Average return at resale: 93.5 percent

The average attic bedroom in a two- or three-bedroom house costs $39,188 and returns $36,649 at resale. Adding attic insulation lowers utility bills, making sure the foil vapor barrier is installed down toward the ceiling to prevent moisture from seeping up. A solar-powered attic fan is an efficient way to save on cooling costs.

6. Major Bathroom Remodel Average return at resale: 93.2 percent

A major bathroom remodel involves expanding an existing 5-foot by 7-foot bathroom, relocating and replacing the tub and toilet and adding designer sinks and faucets, a linen closet, lighting, a ceramic tile floor and exhaust fan for $26,052, which brings in $24,286 at resale.

These are just some of the ideas for upgrading the home that pay off best. If you're fully upgraded as I am, the pandemic can offer the welcome excuse to just sit back, relax and gain weight from the lack of physical activity, as I'm doing.

What You Shouldn't Neglect in Your Estate Plan

An estate planning consultation is your opportunity to learn how to protect your assets and make life easier for your loved ones. There is a tendency to focus on documents like "Wills," "Trusts," and "Power of Attorney," as universal remedies for planning issues. For many clients, proper estate planning requires more nuanced decision-making and preparation. To give some examples, proper titling of assets and designation of beneficiaries are as important as any document drafting. Neglect it and an estate plan may come undone. If a bank account is titled only in one person's name with no beneficiaries, then that asset will pass through the Will. Accounts with a joint account holder or beneficiary will pass directly to that person and will not reach the probate estate through the Will. Real property that has a single name on the deed without a joint tenancy will likewise pass through the Will. Deeds with joint tenants with rights of survivorship will pass directly to the survivor. Tenants-in-common will still be required to have that asset pass through their Will.

Asset titling overrides Will planning and any inconsistency with those asset provisions in your Will may adversely impact your entire estate plan. It is important that you look at each asset and map out the best ways to utilize, protect, and ultimately distribute the asset as part of your plan. Real estate, qualified retirement accounts, non-qualified accounts, life insurance, and emerging digital assets can be titled accordingly or designated for a beneficiary so that upon your passing they are passed to the person, people or entity of your choice.

One asset class always seems to be overlooked in an estate plan – motor vehicles. The car, motorcycle, or RV that you currently own will be someone else's problem after you pass away. That person will have to deal with the Department of Motor Vehicles, the insurance company, potential buyers or family members and even Surrogate's Court. An organized estate planner may have every asset set to pass outside of probate, but if their car remains titled in just their name and there is no surviving spouse then a small estate proceeding would have to be initiated. These are the practical, legal implications. Family dynamics also come into play as the car becomes a bargaining chip. Overeager family members strategize on whether to sell the car and distribute the proceeds or present the car to the family member who could use the car the most and equalize the estate shares. The neat and tidy legacy that you crafted over time may devolve into months of squabbling over a 1997

Bronxville Delivers Knockout Blow to Pleasantville; Panthers Fall, 3-1, in South. Westchester Regional Final

By Rob DiAntonio
Examiner News Writer

Pleasantville's girls' soccer team fell into an early hole and the top-seeded Panthers weren't able dig out of it in a 3-1 loss to second-seeded Bronxville in the Southern Westchester small school regional final on Monday, Nov. 23. It was a rematch of last year's Section 1 Class B final, which was won by the Panthers, on their way to a state championship.

Lily Jebejian scored a pair of first-half goals to get the Broncos out to a quick lead. Her first goal came with 31:21 left in the first half when she curved in a corner that deflected off a Panthers defender and into the net. Pleasantville had a chance to tie it up right away when Katie Moses broke loose but Bronxville goalie Milly Koenig made the sliding save.

Jebejian extended Bronxville's lead to 2-0 when she blasted a deep shot that went off the outstretched hands of Panther keeper Lila Donohue and into the net with 24 minutes left in the opening half.

"They're well coached and disciplined," Pleasantville Coach Chris Osterhoudt said of Bronxville. "They have a high I.Q. and are very skilled as well. Year after year they put such a good product out on the field."

The Panthers continued to get their chances but couldn't capitalize. Isabelle Kapoor just missed on a breakaway with 18 minutes left in the first half. Mary Grace O'Neill crossed a pass to Jessica Beck but she couldn't get enough on the shot as the game went into halftime with the Panthers still trailing 2-0.

"For the chances that we did have, we just didn't connect on them," Osterhoudt said. "Against a team like that, we can't assume that we're going to have many more after that. We have to take advantage of the opportunities that we get and unfortunately we just didn't connect on too many of them."

With the wind at their back in the second half, Pleasantville knew it had an opportunity at a comeback. The Panthers began their comeback attempt when O'Neill sent a blast of a shot off the crossbar and into the net just over five minutes into the second half to cut the deficit to 2-1.

"We knew that the wind was certainly going to help us in certain opportunities, and we took advantage on the one goal," Osterhoudt said. "But, like I said, we just didn't take advantage of the early opportunities in the first half that we had. There were two or three times where we had a potential chance and it just didn't go our way."

"Bronxville kept the ball alive and we just couldn't get it out," Osterhoudt added. "They were there at the right place, right time. We didn't do an overly good job of getting the balls out."

Pleasantville's run to the finals included a quarterfinal win with the majority of its starters in quarantine. The JV squad was called up and helped the Panthers advance past Blind Brook on penalty kicks.

Byram, Mahopac, Somers Copped 2020 Regional Titles

By Ray Gallagher
Examiner Sports Editor@Directrays

There was a ton of heartache, some drama and mixed emotions behind the scenes for many Examiner-area girls' soccer teams due to Coronavirus, including a co-championship situation between Mahopac and Somers in the Putnam-Northern Westchester Large School Regional Tournament; an unforeseen forfeit by Briarcliff that handed Byram Hills the Putnam-Northern Westchester Small School title, and a mega upset of former NYS Class B champion Pleasantville in the Southern Westchester Small School Regional Tournament.

So, while the 2020 climax left some programs with a sense of bathos (with the subsequent quarantines and the cancellation of the state tournament), we still managed to get our girls to the finish line thanks to the hard work -- both on and off the field -- by players, coaches and administrators, who juggled schedules due to COVID-19.

MAHOPAC'S (8-3-2) run to the Putnam-Northern Westchester large school finals as the No.4 seed was a credit to Coach Casey Carroll's wherewithal to juggle her lineup down the stretch. With key players like All-NYS senior Mia Klammer (6G, 2A) plus Amanda Beberman and Alyssa Chiulli quarantined, Carroll had to move her pieces into different positions, using her versatile players in a host of ways. Junior goalkeeper Maddy McCrosson and junior defenders Maddy DeCola (All-Section HM) and Marissa McCarney (All-League HM) were mainstays on the back line, and Bryant-bound senior F Hailey Pereira and All-League sophomore Piper Klammer came up huge in key moments. Pereira (7G, 9A), who earned an All-Section nod, had the game-tying PK in the second half after Piper Klammer (10G, 2A) was fouled before Pereira converted the final PK to ice the semifinal win over top-seeded Yorktown where McCrosson began a torrid stretch between the pipes.

"We had to switch positions around from about the midpoint of the season on," Coach Carroll said. "Piper Klammer had to move up top when we lost Mia, who is just such a dynamic player you immediately notice when she's not on the field. So, now Hailey's gotta stay on one side of the field, and Maddy DeCola would've played more center mid for us. And we had JV players come up and play the back line for us. But our three quarantined players help us get to where we are now, going all the way back to last year and my heart breaks for them."

"We were so happy to have any type of season this year, but in true 2020 fashion it didn't come without its challenges," she added. "I am so happy we were able to have such a successful run in the postseason."

SOMERS (11-3-1) got hot when it counted and turned its season around after a slow start -- opening at 3-3 -- but continued its strong soccer tradition under first-year Coach Kelci Hegg, who transitioned in a new style with similar winning results, including the shared regional title with Mahopac after 110 minutes of scoreless action.

An eight-game winning streak ensued, in which the second-seeded Tuskars outscored their opponents 40-3 behind a combined 20 goals from All-Section seniors Dahlia Pepe (14G, 4) and Ella Kittredge (12G, 7A), producing a thrilling run to the finals. All-Leaguer sophomore Ava Giudice (6G, 5A) provided a third legit scoring threat.

Senior Kayli McMorro was named All-Section HM while senior Noelle DeMarinis and junior Tori Righetti were tabbed All-League.

"I can't say enough about these girls and all they did to turn this season around," Hegg said. "Under the circumstances, including a new coach, a new style of play and a pandemic, I could not be any prouder of our season."

YORKTOWN (10-1-1) performed one of their greatest starts in program history and went unbeaten during the regular season before falling to Mahopac in the regional semis on PK's. Coach Rich Armstrong's top-seeded Huskers unleashed sophomore F Julianna Vano (11G, 5A) on Section 1 and she responded with an All-Section HM campaign, scoring a team-high 16 points. Freshman F Drita Tinaj (4G, 8A) had a monster rookie campaign and will combine with Vano next season to pose as one of the top dual threats in the section. Senior M Chayce Buono and Caitlin Ward each secured All-Section honors to cap their brilliant careers. Sophia Spallone (5G), Emily Ward (4G, 4A), Samantha Paglino, Abby Passarella and Grace Pearce were all named All-League.

"From the first day of practice, the senior class of seven have set the tone, led by example and set their sights on a league title," Armstrong said. "When we were finally about to kick-off at Somers, as a team we weren't sure how many games we would play. We said to each other, 'play like today is it, play like tomorrow is a Covid outbreak', so from the first game to the last, each and everyone of these girls played with grit and determination to be the best they could be."

No.4 LAKELAND (6-6) was shut down after a quarterfinal win over No.5 PUTNAM VALLEY (4-6-1), reaching the semifinals before the unexpected, COVID-related halt. The Hornets' would-be semifinal opponent, Briarcliff, had to forfeit its championship game last Monday against Byram Hills for similar reasons. All the associated teams deserved a better conclusion to this whacky season.

"We are so grateful that we had a season," Lakeland Coach Shawn Sullivan said. "While the team's season got cut short by COVID, after we advanced in the playoffs, just having our team back together made this year a huge success. The season was highlighted by wins over local rivals: Panas, Hen Hud and Putnam Valley. This group was an absolute pleasure to coach. They arrived willing and eager to learn and showed constant improvement throughout the year."

Hornet M Linda Daly earned a second All-Section honor as a junior while Francesca Gerbasi (5G, 8A) was All-Section HM and both Ava Pagliaro (7G) and Nadia Parisi (3G, 5A) were tabbed as All-Leaguers.

BYRAM HILLS (7-2) would be crowned champs via a forfeit win over BRIARCLIFF (11-3) after the Bears were bitten by the COVID bug on the day of the title tilt. Neither team was happy with the unfortunate decision. The Bobcats reached the finals after a 2-1 semifinal win over North Salem with All-Section senior F Alexa Jindal (8G, 4A) scoring a big goal to finish up. The Bobcats overcame a regular season quarantine to rise above it all. Junior Reese Ertel was named All-Section HM while Olivia Tedesco (6G, 2A) came up strong all season and in the playoffs, and All-League junior Sara Grguvoric (3G, 2A) was steady throughout. Sophomore Syndey Nichols earned All-League as well.

"They could have done really well in the finals," Bobcat Coach Julianne Marinero said. "To be honest, due to our 14 day shut-down, we didn't even reach our potential. This was a very talented team and we were all disappointed with the ending."

Briarcliff was led offensively by All-League junior F Arianna Vizcaino (9G, 3A), gifted Buffalo-bound All-Section senior Ashleigh Fortunate (10G, 2A) and All-Section F/M Caitlyn Dornau (5G, 3A), an extremely versatile senior. Sophomore G

Pleasantville senior F Katie Moses earned an All-Section nod for 2020 regional runner-up Panthers.

Dylan Zednick secured All-Section honors to begin what should be a superb career between the pipes.

HORACE GREELEY (4-6-2) was eliminated by Mahopac in the quarters of the large school Putnam-N.West. tourney but saw Ramsey Edson (8G, 3A) post All-Section numbers. Abigail Hanlon also secured an All-Section nod while All-League honors went to Jillian Gordon and Sydney Mikesell.

"The girls were led by senior captains Ellie Handwerger and Abigail Hanlon," Quaker Coach Erin Tracy said. "In addition to those seniors, Grace Byrne, Emily Nordberg, Jessie Greenstein, Riley Card and Jessica Kratz were big for us. Our leading scorer was Ramsey Edson who scored 85% of our goals. We had a new addition Sydney Mikesell who helped solidify the defensive back line. This was an incredibly talented group whose record doesn't quite show how talented they were."

No.6 WALTER PANAS (5-8), despite losing to Byram Hills in the opening round, displayed tremendous heart, resiliency, and work ethic throughout the season, according to Coach Kyle Pierce. "Whether it was practice, games, or time with the team, it was always an enjoyable experience for players and coaches."

The Panther's offense was led by junior Kayla Guevara who chalked-up five goals and added four assists to become the team's high scorer and secure an All-League nod. Freshman Kaylie Mellars recorded four goals and three assists, and sophomore Molly Muller scored three goals while adding an assist.

Captains Amanda Cohen and Alex Sudol displayed steadfast leadership on the defensive end for Panas, each earning All-League honors. Senior G Natalia Londono recorded 101 saves, keeping the Panthers in most games this season. Ella Yaeger served a vital role as the team's marking fullback and was able to shutdown most opposing teams' offensive threats, earning her HM All-League.

"Despite all the obstacles, this season was fun, successful, and an overall great experience for coaches and players alike," Pierce said.

No.8 HEN HUD (5-7) eliminated No.9 PEEK-SKILL (2-10-1) before falling to Briarcliff in the quarters. Sailor senior Kira Varada (12G, 4A) chalked up her second All-Section honor and finished her career as one of the top scorers in school history with 44 career goals. She averaged 1.25 goals per game for her career.

All-League sophomore Lena Johnsen (9G, 6A) had an amazing rookie season while All-Section junior Sabrina Byrne (5G, 2A) was one of the most improved players who established herself as potentially one of the top returning players for next year. The two should be dynamite next season but 2020 was a season for character building, according to Sailor Coach Bill Pagel.

"The most important win this season was to be able to have a season," Hagel said. "We had a team with 11 seniors and for them to be able to play a 12 game season was a huge success. Our senior captains Elizabeth McDowell, Molly Gibson, Maddy O'Hara and Kira Varada did an amazing job leading the team through a difficult season filled with many unknowns."

Honorable Mention All-Section honors went to senior Maddy O'Hara while All-League merits went to seniors Elizabeth McDowell, Molly Gibson and sophomore Katherine Couch.

Pagel cited special acknowledgement to senior G Iliana Done. "She has been a steady, reliable presence for us the past three seasons and her final season was her best season."

PLEASANTVILLE (12-1), the No.1 seed, was shocked in the small school Southern Westchester Regional finals by No.3 Bronxville, 3-1 (see game story). All-Section senior F Katie Moses (7G, 10A) was named the Player of the Year in the league. All-Section HM senior F Izzy Kapoor (9G, 5A), All-Section HM senior M Amber Nanaj (7G, 3A) and All-League HM freshman M

Yorktown sophomore Julianna Vano earned a 2020 All-Section HM nod after leading Huskers in scoring.

Jess Beck (4G, 4A) also led the attack. The stalwart defense featured seniors G Lila Donohue (All-League HM), All-Section D Carolyn Lee and All-Section D Analese Picart. Grace Capko and Mary Grace O'Neill were named All-League as well.

The Panthers will graduate a talented senior group of 15 players.

"We've had so many of them as part of the program since their freshman year," said Panther Coach Chris Osterhoud, the league's Coach of the Year. "They pretty much put Pleasantville on the map during their four years. This is definitely a class that went down in history, especially with the state championship last year. They kind of cemented what they meant to the program, the coaching staff and the school as well."

"When the kids had to quarantine for those two weeks, for us it was early enough in the year that we were able to get out of it," Osterhoudt added. "Just crazy situations. We just tried to keep the girls positive and hoping for the best. They worked so hard to get that quarterfinal win with a lot of the JV call-ups. It's certainly a season we're never going to forget. That's for sure."

No.7 WHITE PLAINS (6-7), which was knocked out of the playoffs by No.2 Rye, was led offensively by All-Section HM Katie McAteer (7G, 12A), All-League Julieth Valesquez (9G), All-League Melissa Soto (6G) and All-League Alexa Galligani (5G, 1A). Kristen Russo was also named All-League while All-League HM honors went to Sofia Andrade, Shannon Larkin, Natasha Mendez, Jade Palmer and Anneliese Reggio.

"I am so incredibly proud of the 2020 girls' soccer program," White Plains Coach Meaghan Chase said. "It goes without saying how difficult this year has been, and my players truly blew me away by how strong they remained during the entire season. Even when we were losing against the team that won the section by three goals in the last five minutes of the game, every single one of my players fought until the very end.

I could not have asked for anything more."

PUTNAM VALLEY (4-5-1) turned things around this year and saw Lindsey Cohen secure All-Section HM honors while Danna Jadan, Arianna Stockinger, Karol Noguera and Amanda Orlando were named All-League under Coach Nicole Ryan, who was named Coach of the Year in their league.

"To go from not a single win last season, to 4-5-1 during such a complicated and short season, shows the great dedication, effort, and teamwork on this team," Ryan said. "What's more remarkable than progress since last season, is progress within this season alone. To have the girls' resilience, improvement and overall attitudes commended by other coaches is even more meaningful to me than what's in the record books. As coaches we were so very proud to see the girls take the little aspects of the game on the individual level and piece them together on the team level. It's been a beautiful thing to watch them grow as student athletes and to watch them perform at the varsity level. We take great pride in this season."

No.10 WESTLAKE (4-10-2) knocked off Leffell in the opening round but was bounced in the semis by eventual champ Bronxville. All-Section sniper Jennifer Straface (8G, 1A), who had two goals in a 5-1 quarterfinal playoff win over Tuckahoe, led the club in scoring in what could only be considered a solid playoff showing.

No.8 CARMEL (1-8) was eliminated in the first round of the playoffs by Yorktown.

Sixth-seeded OSSINING (4-6) ended the season with a loss to John Jay CR in the Put.-N.West. large school regional with Marlee Potillo (6G, 3A) leading the way.

No.7 FOX LANE (2-9) was eliminated by Somers.

No.10 CROTON-HARMON (5-7) knocked off No.10 HALDANE (1-10-1) and was led by Maliha Ravelo (10G, 1A) this season.

No.11 VALHALLA (0-10-1) was eliminated by Dobbs in the opening round.
