New Castle Fire District Eyes Nearly $17M Firehouse Renovation

By Martin Wilbur

New Castle Fire District No. 1 is prepared to hold a nearly $17 million referendum in April to pay for the long-sought expansion and modernization of the King Street firehouse.

The district’s Board of Commissioners announced last Thursday that a vote has been tentatively scheduled for Apr. 5. Polls would be open from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. on that day.

The project would provide the space to accommodate modern emergency apparatus, equipment and decontamination facilities and an update of the facility to comply with current industry-standard workplace regulations and requirements for enhanced worker health and safety.

A renovation would also ensure the facility, located at 495 King St. in Chappaqua, is compliant with the Americans with Disabilities Act.

“I’m very confident that after the better part of five to six months of looking at these numbers and asking questions that this is the number that we need to go forward with,” Board of Commissioners Chairman Terence Hoey said of what would be a $16,992,906 bond.

As currently proposed, $13,440,000 of that total would be for hard construction costs. Another $2,425,000 would go toward pre-bond expenses and professional fees and $483,000 for fixtures, furniture and equipment. There would also be $403,000 set aside for contingency.

The remainder of the money would be for a variety of miscellaneous expenses and pre- and post-bond costs.

Money for the acquisition of the adjacent property and demolition of the old Chappaqua Animal Hospital was accounted for separately. That money was derived with the passage of a $2.6 million bond in 2017.

Another $38,500 for a variety of other expenses such as legal work, an asbestos remediation engineer and other professional services would also not be covered in the bond, said Bob Mitchell, the project architect from Mitchell Associates Architects.

For well over a year, the board has been signaling that it would schedule another referendum to make critical upgrades at the firehouse that district officials have contended are long overdue because it lacks the space for some of today’s fire trucks, a lack of room for firefighters rushing to respond to a call and the capacity to decontaminate their equipment from carcinogens following a fire.

It is a similar bond to the $12.6 million bond that voters overwhelmingly defeated in October 2016. However, this time commissioners are determined to demonstrate to voters the need for a renovated firehouse through an extensive public outreach campaign, including retaining Wise Oak Strategies, a public relations outfit headed by Bedford Fire District Commissioner Heather Feldman.

A similar effort helped the Bedford Village Fire District to pass a $14.8 million bond in January 2020 after a previous defeat.

Saw Mill Parkway Work Enters Second Half Bringing Noise, Disruption

By Martin Wilbur

A little more than a year ago, Booth Street homeowner Dina DellPriore started to feel her house shake. It certainly wasn’t an earthquake, but rather the heavy machinery used by the state Department of Transportation’s (DOT) contractor for the Saw Mill River Parkway road-raising project.

The complaints from Mount Pleasant and Pleasantville residents on both sides of the roadway by as much as eight feet on the northbound side of the Traditional hallway corridors, Fox Lane High School would alter spaces at the middle and high schools for modern education is likely to be scheduled for this spring.

School officials are prepared to hold the proposition in May, the same day as the budget vote and Board of Education election. Extensive infrastructure improvements throughout the district would also be part of the plan at an estimated $24.9 million, including work at each of the five elementary schools.

The project could also include connectors to enclose the exterior stairwell at Fox Lane Middle School, which is prone to deterioration from being exposed to the elements, said Kevin Walsh of BBS Architects, the firm designing the plans for the district.

A proposed redesign of interior spaces at the middle school and Fox Lane High School would alter the traditional hallway corridors, Walsh explained.

A potential $70 million referendum to upgrade all of the Bedford School District’s buildings and to reconfigure space at the middle and high schools for modern education is likely to be scheduled for this spring.

School officials are prepared to hold the proposition in May, the same day as the budget vote and Board of Education election. Extensive infrastructure improvements throughout the district would also be part of reconfigured areas that would integrate wellness and fitness with the cafeteria, for example, while grouping music instructional spaces on the second floor and STEAM subjects on the third level. There could also be connectors to the school’s houses and an emphasis on outdoor learning spaces.

Walsh said that it will be critical to have adaptable buildings, particularly at the middle school and high school.

“When it comes to spatial-educational projects, we’re not just looking at capacity, we’re looking at adapting your facilities to the evolving activity of learning and how can the buildings help support that and not contain it,” he said.

At the high school, there would be similar concepts of adapting first-floor space from a linear connection to a design that better connects the library, cafeteria, physical education and wellness with science, STEM and art, Walsh said.

“You have this idea of different types of spaces and different types of opportunities than the traditional, and it’s not that the traditional just goes away, it’s a combination, it’s a balance of traditional and innovative,” Walsh explained.

Extensive improvements to the campus’s athletic facilities have also been proposed.

In January and February, the board will need to pare down nearly $100 million worth of projects that have been reviewed by the architects into a final plan by the first meeting in March.

District officials will also be faced with the task of convincing residents that improvement to the district’s facilities is required. Age and use have contributed to the need for improvements to the athletic facilities and infrastructure work, said board Vice President Edward Reder.

“If they haven’t been in our buildings for even a couple of years, they may not understand the current state that they’re in,” Reder said.

Despite the large scope of work, bonding up to $70 million would have no impact on the tax rate, according to Walsh. That is a result of a large bond that is maturing in 2023 and another in 2026.

Board member Robert Mazurek said he would be in favor of the district doing as much work as possible now because many of the improvements are needed and interest rates are ready to rise.

“What we learned from the community members on this is that there’s a lot of interest and concern about, including myself, to get as much money as we can now because interest rates are at historic lows and they’re rising too fast,” Mazurek said.

“I support going for a bond referendum in the spring and running these scenarios through (the district’s financial services adviser) Capital Markets and getting as much money as we can as soon as possible because we’re going to need the money, we’re going to need the $25 million for repairs and we can do a lot of good things, and should do, to keep up competitively as well.”

A bond would be part of an ongoing district Master Plan that includes a series of five-year plans and a projection for another significant referendum in 2023, Walsh said.

Mitchell said since 2016, the annualized rate of inflation for construction has been 4.66 percent, explaining much of the rise in costs over what will be a vote five-and-a-half years later. It also factors in additional escalation due to the pandemic.

“So the 4.66 percent makes sense in terms of accounting for the COVID-related higher rate of escalation in ‘21 and the market-based regional information in ‘22,” Mitchell said.

“Board Treasurer Robin Rizzo said the current proposal would increase taxes $1.66 per thousand dollars of assessed value. The district will eventually post on its website what that tax increase would translate into for each property owner in the district.

Feldman said in the months until the vote, the district will be conducting extensive public outreach, including mailings, informational sessions and social media posts to help educate district residents about the need for the project, its financial implications and the timeline.

“I have great faith that if we continue in this direction it will result in a positive benefit for the district and the department,” Hoey said.

The fire district still needs to obtain site plan approval for the project from the New Castle Planning Board.

parkway. Earlier this year the road on the southbound side was raised.

However, DelPriore, who lives with her family in the last house at the end of Booth Street, said that the loss of virtually all of her screening not only leaves her a totally exposed view of the parkway, but sometimes deafening noise from routine traffic and greater wind. Her property is about 30 feet to the closest work being performed.

“What they are doing is just unbelievable,” said DelPriore of the work along the 1.3-mile stretch from south of Marble Avenue northward to near Bedford Road. “There are so many people complaining and now they did the sheet piling, and like I said, it’s an eyesore. Now they’re going to start piling driving.”

While the long-anticipated project to solve the frequent flooding and road closures is critical, certain steps that should have been taken were never addressed before work started or during the project, residents and elected officials have charged.

Residents have complained that the DOT has refused to have a community meeting with them, either in person or via Zoom, a highly unusual move for a $60 million project, said Pollywiggle Lane resident Gibson Craig. Craig, who lives on the opposite side of the parkway from DelPriore, endured months of pile driving last winter and spring and has also been an outspoken critic of DOT’s handling of the project.

“My project, for example, was not one single meeting with the town and the community, and I know (Mount Pleasant Supervisor) Carl Fulgenzi and a bunch of people on the board have been writing letters on our behalf to get the DOT to show up at the Town Hall and answer some questions and hear some concerns,” said Craig, an engineer who has extensive experience in the construction industry.

Homeowners and Fulgenzi have pressed for the installation of sound barriers to block roadway noise that now will be closer to street level causing greater disturbance. DelPriore said on the northbound side of the parkway, the road may be raised as much as eight feet.

Fulgenzi said to get the DOT to respond to their concerns has been largely futile. When residents were upset about night construction that often went past midnight, it was largely ignored.

But the agency’s refusal to even consider sound barriers has been a difficult sticking point for residents and the town.

“They have denied the fact that a sound barrier is needed,” Fulgenzi said. “We’ve all been over there, looking where the road is, where it’s going to be and stuff like that. It’s obvious to us that the raising of the road as far as it’s coming up, you’re basically closer to the line of traffic, and we believe a sound barrier is warranted in that area.”

But a spokesperson for the DOT said the site does not meet the standard for a barrier. “NYSDOT has reviewed the requests for sound barriers along the parkway and determined that the project does not meet Federal Highway Administration requirements for additional sound mitigation measures,” said Heather Pilksworth, a DOT public information officer.

Craig said that he had many other concerns over the past year such as what substances the piles were treated with since there are nearby wells. Also, Halmar International, the Nanuet-based construction company doing the work, was cited by the state Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) for discharging sediment and water into a stream.

Despite the problems, Craig said there is still time to make the situation better for nearby residents.

“They have the ability to simply come to our town, hear a bunch of our concerns and probably address half of them for less than $100,000, and this is a $60 million project,” he said.

Curtailing the work hours to comply with residents’ wishes would not be disruptive at night has elongated the project, and the DOT now hopes to complete the work by next fall.

That promises to be a long nine to 12 months for DelPriore.

“It’s not only sound, it’s air pollution, it’s wind pollution, it’s noise pollution, it’s everything,” she said.

Jenkins, White Plains’ Roach Test Positive as COVID Cases Skyrocket

By Martin Wilbur

Westchester’s Deputy County Executive Ken Jenkins and White Plains Mayor Tom Roach tested positive for COVID-19 within three days of each other as the explosion of active cases likely fueled by the Omicron variant accelerates.

Jenkins, who said he was told of his positive last Thursday, and Roach, whose office issued a statement on Monday after the mayor received his test result Sunday night, are isolating at home with mild symptoms.

They join County Executive George Latimer, who learned of his positive case on Dec. 13, in isolation as the county and at least one local government are taking precautions to limit community spread.

Jenkins compared his symptoms to a cold with a bit of a cough, some body chills and aches but no fever. He said he was fully vaccinated and boosted in October. He is eligible to complete his isolation on Dec. 28.

“Vaccinations are the means to reduce the severe hospitalizations and fatalities, and going through this particular process right now, I feel fine,” Jenkins said.

The statement from Roach’s office offered a similar scenario.

“The Mayor’s symptoms are mild, but he is taking every precaution, including isolating at home,” the statement read. “Mayor Roach is thankful that he received 2 doses of vaccine plus a booster shot and cites this as the reason he is not suffering more severely. He continues to carry out the work of the Government from his residence.”

An alarming spike to a 7.2 percent positivity rate for Westchester on Saturday was coupled with a jump to 7,468 active cases, a more than 50 percent surge in under a week. Putnam County had a 10 percent positivity rate on Saturday.

Latimer, speaking virtually from his home in Rye on Monday as he continues to isolate, said that the rapid increase in cases is leading to long delays for people who want to get tested. As a result, Westchester has asked the state to temporarily re-establish testing sites at the County Center in White Plains and Glen Island Park in New Rochelle.

A positive development is that hospitalizations are under control. As of Saturday, there were 134 COVID-19 patients being treated in Westchester hospitals. Considering the rate of increase in cases, it is a relatively low number, Latimer said.

“Given the astoundingly high number of infections, we’re hopeful that the number of hospitalizations are as low as 134,” Latimer said. “We might have thought that they would be double that by now, so we’re cautiously optimistic.”

During last winter’s peak, when cases peaked at more than 11,500 on Jan. 18, there were more than 500 hospitalizations. Other steps the county is taking is to distribute 500,000 masks from its stockpile to local businesses, nonprofit organizations and religious institutions, sending 35,000 tests kits to some of the public health facilities in economically stressed areas, including the Mount Vernon Health Center, the Greenburgh Health Center, Open Door Family Medical Centers and the Hudson River Health Care Center in Peekskill.

Latimer said he has sensed that in recent weeks residents are getting tired and upset with the latest surge and the precautions that are needed, thinking the worst of the pandemic had been in the past.

“I am concerned by the agitation I see out in the community, people who are now almost two full years off normalcy, they worry their kids won’t go to school, they worry about not being with loved ones for the holidays, they’re much more agitated, much more anxious, looking for somebody to blame, irritated,” Latimer said.

All Board of Legislators meetings and those of their committees will return to virtual only at least through Jan. 31.

On Monday, the Town of Yorktown announced that its municipal office will be closed to visitors. Anyone doing business at Town Hall must call or e-mail staff in advance. The John C. Hart Memorial Library in Shrub Oak will return to porch pickup service only.

There will also be a resumption to online-only public meetings starting Tuesday evening. The situation will be re-evaluated during the first week in January. These actions are common-sense responses designed to protect the health and safety of the public and our employees,” said Supervisor Matt Slater. “I ask everyone doing business with our Town to have patience and understanding. We are still open for business by phone and email.”

The Town of Ossining has also returned to virtual board meetings in recent weeks.
Gubernatorial Hopeful Slams Mask Mandate But Reaction is Varied

By Martin Wilbur

The presumed Republican frontrunner for the party’s nomination in the 2022 gubernatorial race slammed Gov. Kathy Hochul’s mask mandate last week, warning that it jeopardizes myriad business owners and infringes on personal freedom.

Long Island Congressman Lee Zeldin visited Jefferson Valley in Yorktown last Thursday with several local officials and merchants, charging that “the government is forcing you to turn (customers) away” even though many small businesses either failed or have barely survived the pandemic.

He chided Hochul for having run out of ideas, with her decision-making consisting of mandates, threats, fines and firings.

“We need people in government to be sensitive to what they need in order to survive because our small businesses are the engine, the backbone of the economy, the heart and soul of our community,” Zeldin said while accompanied by Assemblyman Kevin Byrne (R-Mahopac) and Yorktown Supervisor Matt Slater on Hill Boulevard in front of Frankie & Augie’s Ristorante and Pizzeria.

Hochul put the mandate into effect Dec. 13 for all indoor public spaces as a fall surge in COVID-19 has seen active caseloads skyrocket throughout New York and hospitals in some areas upstate fill up. On Saturday, New York State broke its record for the most new COVID-19 cases in one day since the start of the pandemic—22,478, according to its daily online tracker.

Her directive allows businesses and venues to opt for proof of vaccination to enter the premises rather than masks but not both. Violators could be fined up to $1,000. The governor said she would reassess the matter on Jan. 15.

Zeldin said Yorktown is vulnerable because it is one of the communities that borders Putnam County, which is ignoring the governor. Last Monday, Putnam County Executive MaryEllen Odell said police and health officials will not be enforcing the mandate.

“In my conversations with some of the business owners who are here is that there are people who are going to be taking their business to Putnam; they’re not going to be bringing their business here because of this mandate. There’s nothing extraordinary to do here. There’s nothing special about this,” Zeldin said.

Byrne said merchants don’t want to be harassing customers to put on a mask or display their vaccine passport or other personal information. He said store owners in Yorktown and other communities are going to be at a competitive disadvantage as well as placing business owners and their employees in a difficult position.

“It is going to be even harder for them to do their job when customers are upset because they feel that they are forced to ask (customers) for a vaccine passport or force them to wear a mask,” Byrne said. “It’s unfair for counties to be competing on a different playing field.”

Slater said he supports what Massachusetts has done, which is to leave the decision to each municipality to determine what is best for their community.

A spokesperson for Hochul said that in remarks made by the governor last week, 73 percent of the state’s population is governed by leaders who say they support the mandate. No, it’s not consistent, inconsistent, which leaves a whole lot of people wondering what hammer is next.”

“I in times of crisis, leaders are supposed to be inspiring folks to do the right thing for each other,” Slater continued. “We see the person, not the patient.

other, and if we want to keep our businesses strong and if we want to keep our kids in school, wearing a piece of cloth on your face is what the medical experts say will help keep the population healthy,” Harckham said. “For elected officials to be feeding into the anger and the negativity, I believe is the wrong approach.”

A random sampling of business owners ran the gamut, from those who are opposed to the governor’s measure to others who have imposed their own mask mandate since the start of the pandemic in March 2020.

Rich Donovan, president of All Seasons Wine & Spirits in Yorktown Heights, said last week that he lost customers. When told they need a mask, they walked out and said they would shop elsewhere. He said it is wrong to pit citizen versus citizen.

“Within one hour I had several customers turn around and walk away (and say) ‘I’ll take my business to Putnam seven minutes up the road,’” Donovan said.

Other business owners in areas farther away had less of an issue, but not completely without incidents. Mimi Wieland-Tesfaye, owner of Mimi’s Café in Mount Kisco, said most customers have generally complied when asked to put on a mask.

However, different standards based on the type of business has been confusing for some patrons. Wieland-Tesfaye said that some people wonder that why if they’re vaccinated and boosted must they still wear a mask when they enter or leave the premises or approach the counter. Then they see others who are sitting with a beverage who don’t have masks on, even when talking to someone else.

“I just want to be serving coffee, not telling people what to do,” Wieland-Tesfaye said.

Kevin Kane, vice president of the Saw Mill Club in Mount Kisco, said fitness centers have other challenges. Strenuous exercise makes it unrealistic for many patrons to wear masks, unlike shopping in Target or Wal Mart, where it shouldn’t be difficult for a shopper to wear one for a finite period of time.

With the recent mandate, Saw Mill requires members to be vaccinated, he said. Once proof of vaccination is presented, no mask is required and the member is logged into the system as vaccinated. Currently, unvaccinated members aren’t allowed until the regulation is rescinded.

Kane, a strong vaccine proponent, said Saw Mill has willingly complied with every mandate during the pandemic, but sometimes leaders seem to forget the challenges.

“There’s an unappreciated part of business, which I don’t think is recognized by the medical community or the political community,” Kane said.

Annette Colasuonno, owner of Lil Chocolate Shop in Pleasantville, said she has had her own mask mandate for her store since the emergence of COVID-19. At 72 years old, she doesn’t want to get sick, although the overwhelming portion of visitors have complied. However, there have been a few difficult people.

“If someone comes in with an attitude, they’re always going to have an attitude,” Colasuonno said. “It doesn’t matter.”

Putnam County Sheriff Robert L. Langley Jr., Carmel Police Chief Anthony Hoffmann and Kent Police Chief Kevin Owens announced last week that Putnam County police agencies and STOP-DWI coordinators are participating in special efforts to bring awareness to the dangers of impaired driving.

During this holiday season while celebrating with friends and family and looking forward to the blessings of a new year, a combined law enforcement effort to bring awareness to the dangers of impaired driving prevent injuries and save lives across New York State, and STOP-DWI programs will be participating in special engagement efforts.

The statewide STOP-DWI High Visibility Engagement Campaign started last Friday and will end on Jan.1.

The campaign is one of many statewide initiatives promoted by STOP-DWI NY and the Governor’s Traffic Safety Committee. The campaign also targets Memorial Day, July 4th, Labor Day/End of Summer, Halloween, Thanksgiving, Super Bowl weekend and St. Patrick’s Day.

Highly visible, highly publicized efforts like the STOP-DWI High Visibility Engagement Campaign aim to reduce drunk and impaired driving incidents.

Board of Legislators Chair Reflects on Four Years of Achievements

By Rick Pezzullo

Westchester County Board of Legislators Chairman Ben Boykin reflected last week on the achievements of the board over the last four years in an end-of-term report.

Boykin (D-White Plains), who was re-elected to a fifth two-year term representing District 5 last month running unopposed, has chaired the Democratic-dominated board since 2018.

“The last four years have been historic and consequential for this board,” Boykin stated. “As Westchester County elected officials, our greatest responsibility is to work toward a county that is improved in every way from the one we inherit. When people look back on the last four years, they will see that we have done that, and more.”

“I took office with great hopes for what we could achieve for the people of Westchester, despite the significant challenges we faced in terms of the county’s precarious financial position at the time, and not knowing the unprecedented difficulties that would arise from the COVID-19 pandemic,” he continued.

“But the verdict is in – our revitalization of the county’s finances over the past four years has been a remarkable success, and the myth that the only path to fiscal health is to deprive residents of necessary services has been debunked.”

Operations, cut the county’s tax levy three years in a row and rebuilt the county’s reserve funds to an expected $300 million from $65 million when Latimer took office.

“We have restored the county’s financial health,” Boykin stated. “Smart fiscal planning has made so much possible. With this transformative turnaround, the evidence is clear that with the right leadership and the right values we can strengthen the social safety net, invest in our infrastructure, and at the same time make extraordinary improvements in the county’s finances.”

In addition, Boykin said the board passed historic legislation to support Westchester’s working families; taken action to respond to the climate crisis; preserved and improved county parks and historic buildings; increased affordable housing access for thousands of seniors and working people; strengthened county government ethics and transparency; supported small businesses and consumers; and embraced and protected Westchester’s diversity.

“While I am extremely proud to have led the board during these historic times, the board’s achievements are not mine, they are the result of the committed, focused and collaborative work of all legislators during these last four years, the outstanding work of the board’s dedicated staff and the support and leadership of our partner in county government, County Executive George Latimer and his staff,” Boykin stated.

“The opportunity to serve as board chair during these last four years, when we both celebrated the board’s 50th anniversary and navigated the darkest days of the pandemic, has been one of the greatest privileges and the most formidable challenges of my career,” he added. “It is a time and place I will never forget, as we look ahead with hope for a return to normalcy in our future.”

It is unclear who will be the Board of Legislators’ chair for the next two years.

Opposing Mask Mandate Makes No Sense as COVID-19 Rages Again

Republican gubernatorial candidate Lee Zeldin, a congressman from the eastern end of Long Island, arrived in Yorktown last Thursday for the latest stop on his campaign tour around the state.

But what had to have been one of the most ill-timed and tone-deaf press conferences in recent memory, Zeldin and local supporters essentially tried to make the argument that mandating masks to enter a store is bad for business. That decision, he said, should be left up to each individual.

This was in response to Democratic Gov. Kathy Hochul’s mask mandate that went into effect Dec. 13 in hopes of protecting society as the Omicron variant, which three-and-a-half weeks ago was first detected in southern Africa, has raced around the globe with breathtaking speed.

On Monday, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported that 73 percent of all new cases in the U.S. are now Omicron.

If Zeldin is successful in his drive to become New York State’s next chief executive, don’t expect him to do much to protect you. And on Monday he doubled down on his foolishness in Albany preaching to the same anti-mask choir.

Here’s what’s bad for business: COVID-19. What’s worse for business? COVID-19 in overdrive, infecting more than 900 residents in Westchester on Sunday for the fourth consecutive day, filling up hospitals in less vaccinated portions of the state and burning out health care workers.

There’s no one, Republican, Democrat, some other affiliation or no affiliation, who wants to wear a mask. They’re annoying, especially if you have to work an eight-hour shift with one over your face or have it on for an extended period of time.

However, mature adults, and adults who aren’t pandering for votes, realize that if it can help themselves and others from getting infected, that’s a good thing. Since most people other than health care workers don’t have the N-95 masks to wear, the way that face coverings can be most effective is if everybody in an indoor space wears one.

If you’re inclined to go to a restaurant, nothing has changed from before Dec. 13. You walk in with a mask on, and once you’re seated you can take it off. When it’s time to leave, you put it back on for a minute.

For those who won’t shop at a business simply because they can’t be bothered to put on mask while they run in for a gallon of milk and a dozen eggs, it’s not about the mask. They’re making a political statement to demonstrate which political team they support.

For those merchants in the northern Westchester towns that border Putnam County worried about losing business to their northern neighbor, don’t blame Hochul. You can point your finger squarely at County Executive MaryEllen Odell, who in a cynical move sent out a press release shortly after 9 a.m. on Dec. 13 announcing that Putnam would reject enforcing the regulation.

In a week that saw the Westchester County executive, his deputy, the mayor of White Plains and thousands more get infected, and faced with the worst public health crisis in our lifetime, you don’t turn up your hands, shrug your shoulders and do nothing. You try the least intrusive option first, which is wearing masks.

We may have to live with COVID-19 in some shape or form for years, perhaps decades, even with vaccines. For some, that will be the remainder of their lives. It’s time as a society we stop playing politics and gird ourselves for a lengthy fight, and to be successful, it can’t be with one another.

Yorktown Desperately Needs the Help Overlay District Can Provide

As the owner of The Pub, located on Commerce Street in Yorktown Heights, I can tell you that the Yorktown Heights Business District needs help. The kind of help that the Overlay District legislation can provide, and I am officially throwing my full support for this legislation.

COVID-19 has significantly hurt many of our businesses and has heavily impacted my business. I applaud the town’s initiative to attempt to revitalize our main streets by thinking of creative and proven ways to achieve that goal.

The Overlay District legislation will help to revitalize many areas in this district, by providing well-needed attention to so many run-down properties that are simply not appealing to a would-be businessperson looking to start a new business or even an existing business that is looking to relocate.

The Overlay District is also critical to introducing housing alternatives so young people who cannot afford or may not desire to purchase a home can rent here.

No one can deny that our hamlets need help. The Overlay District Legislation is a great step forward!

Putnam County Ignoring Mask Mandate Is Senseless

Let’s see if I have this straight: COVID positivity in Putnam County is up 49 percent, Carmel schools moved to remote learning on Dec. 17, professional sports teams have postponed games and Radio City has canceled the Christmas show but our county executive wants citizens to ignore a mask mandate?

Our own health commissioner says “... Both vaccination and mask wearing are needed to slow this COVID-19 winter surge.” The governor’s action is designed to keep us safe and stop another business shutdown. Responsible leaders need to encourage people to follow rules and to look out for each other’s health and safety. Instead of complaining that the governor didn’t consult with each county executive, the elected leaders should consult with the local hospitals and health departments and get an accurate view on what is really happening.

I think it’s about time we faced the fact that the virus is real and that we have to take real actions to reduce the risks. Encouraging people to ignore rules that they don’t like solves nothing.

Strip Counties That Oppose Mask Mandates of Medicaid, Medicare Funds

As I see it, you break it, you own it. Putnam County (and any other county that refuses to enforce a governor’s order relating to infectious disease) should not be eligible for any additional taxpayer funded COVID-19 rescue funds that may be distributed to local governments.

Putnam County should not be eligible for any taxpayer-funded Medicaid and Medicare reimbursements for hospitalized COVID patients.

No one is above the law. And that includes laws relating to control of infectious disease.

Unite New Castle Should Explain Developers’ Campaign Contributions

Mr. Kemler’s wife is the daughter of the former CEO of Turner Construction, a multibillion-dollar commercial construction company. Steven Kemler runs a “family office-backed” investment firm named Stone Arch Group, whose website states they are actively looking to invest in the new construction of 50-plus-unit apartment buildings in subprime locations. Could that include North Greeley?

Again, we ask, is it the residents and local small business owners of Chappaqua, or is it these billionaire developers, who will be getting the best deal from Lisa Katz?

After the past year of the UNC slate’s surrogates improperly and publicly maligning current board members as being “in the pockets of developers,” it is very unsettling to uncover the fact that the UNC campaign coffers were filled by real estate developers.

I believe the public deserves the incoming Town Board’s assurances that this money flowing into the UNC campaign pockets from developers is NOT going to buy any favors, zoning variances or undue influence.

I believe that the public has a right to be assured that the divisive, unnecessary, year-long conflict over the Form Based Code was not simply a way for an incoming Town Board to provide backroom dealings to campaign contributors.

I believe that our elected officials owe us respect and transparency.

Surely all of this can be explained, so I am asking the incoming Town Board to do just that. Explain.

Chappaqua resident Cynthia Schemas has supported several local Democratic campaigns and has volunteered on initiatives for other organizations.

1. One $4,000 line item is in his own name, while the other is under the name SC Management, his commercial real estate development company. SC Management is an LLC separate from his day job at The Hakim Group, the billion-dollar real estate company owned by his wife’s family.

2. The second $4,000 transaction had the unusual designation as a Schedule O transaction, used for “subcontractors/partners.” It is unclear whether that $4,000 was a donation, (usually designated as Schedule A, B or C) or some other transaction between the two parties.

The UNC slate has refused to clarify this “partner” relationship, despite several inquiries both public and private, by several individuals. In fact, the campaign’s treasurer got so angry when asked about it on Election Day, that she cursed and stormed away from her position talking to voters outside of a polling place.

Now on to a larger set of family donations.

Various members of the Kemler family gave a total of $16,000 to the UNC slate – by far the largest aggregate donations of any parties.

This includes a maximum donation from an Andrew Kemler of Colorado, who seems to have lived in Colorado for at least 20 years. He is an active apartment house developer. What’s his interest in a local Town Board race in a small town halfway across the country?

Steven Kemler is a New Castle resident. He gave the maximum donation twice, once before the primary, and once after. He was seemingly very invested in the success of UNC, and by extension, their principal platform issue: the death of the Form Based Code.
Obituaries

James O'Connell

Dr. James J. O’Connell, a longtime Pleasantville resident, passed away peacefully surrounded by family at Calvary Hospital in the Bronx on Dec. 12. He was 91.

Jim was born in Yonkers on Oct. 25, 1930, to Rita Keenan and James O’Connell and spent his early years in the Sacred Heart parish, where he met the love of his life, Catherine T. Lynn, in first grade. Jim and Kate were married for nearly 60 years prior to her death in May 2014. Together they raised six daughters, Catherine Hopkins (John), Rosita McNamara (Thomas), Bernadette Chiarlitti (Anthony), Maureen Leah (Kevin), Patricia Hoxsie (Ronald) and Jamie O’Connell (Ronald Jendjejic), all of whom survive him. He is also survived by 21 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren. He was predeceased by his parents, his brother Bill and sister Rosita.

A graduate of Cardinal Hayes High School, Iona College (BBA) and Fordham University (MS, PhD), Jim served in Intelligence for the U.S. Army before launching his professional career as a teacher and track and field coach at Bergen Catholic High School. He moved to a 21-year tenure at Iona College where he served as career counselor, placement director and director of counseling until 1978.

A dedicated psychologist and career development specialist, Jim also served as the director of counseling at Pace University, senior vice president for Drake Beam Morin, Inc. and senior consultant for Spheron. He taught graduate courses at colleges and universities across the country, and was a frequent contributor to various publications and radio and television shows throughout his career. He also served as president for four major organizations and as a board member of three national professional organizations, including the Board of Governors of the College Placement Council.

Central to Jim’s life was his Catholic faith, love of family and friends and service to others, particularly within the Holy Innocents community in Pleasantville.

A licensed pilot, Jim also loved soaring through the sky, flying airplanes as a hobby and traveling the world with Kate. He was even fortunate enough to fly one last time in 2019 as a guest of the Hudson Valley Honor Flight’s Mission #23.

If you couldn’t spot Jim in the stadiums of the Summer Olympic Games he attended all over the globe, it was a guarantee you’d find him cheering on the Iona Gaels in cross country, track and basketball all around the U.S. He was also an avid gardener and spent many hours planting on the hilly terrain around his home, when not roaming the fairways of Pleasantville Country Club.

There wasn’t a stranger Jim would meet with whom he wouldn’t strike up a conversation, nor a holiday gathering or annual beach vacation he would pass up to let his sense of humor shine among the presence of his large family and friends.

A Mass of Christian Burial was held on Dec. 16 at Holy Innocents R.C. Church in Pleasantville, followed by interment at All Souls Cemetery in Pleasantville.

In lieu of flowers, the family kindly requests donations be made to Calvary Hospital at 1740 Eastchester Rd., Bronx, N.Y. 10461 (www.calvaryhospital.org) or the Hudson Valley Honor Flight (https://hvhonorflight.com/donate/).

He is survived by his sweetheart and loving wife of 56 years, Catherine (nee Cusmano); their two sons, Joseph (Mary Kate) and John (Maryann), both of Stamford, Conn.; and their five adored grandchildren, Anthony, Emma Rose, MaryGrace, Julia and Elizabeth.

Tony embraced life to the fullest each day, cherishing his family and friends. As a physician for over 55 years, his passion and lifelong devotion was always to his patients and their care.

Dr. SanFilippo was a graduate of Iona Prep, College of the Holy Cross (’61) and Georgetown University School of Medicine (’65). He did his pediatric surgical fellowship at Buffalo Children’s Hospital and then served as a surgeon in the United States Navy where he reached the rank of commander.

In remembrance of his life and commitment for the best health care for children, the family asks that in lieu of flowers, donations be made in memory of Tony to the Maria Fareri Children’s Hospital, 100 Woods Rd., Valhalla, N.Y. 10595 (https://cloud.wmchealthcommunity.com/support-mfch).
Annual Polar Plunge Returns on New Year’s Day in Peekskill

By Rick Pezzullo

The annual Polar Plunge benefitting the This is Me Foundation is slated to return New Year’s Day at the Peekskill Riverfront Green after a one-year absence.

The This Is Me Foundation, founded by Peekskill residents and sisters Caitlin and Lauren Brady in 2011, raises awareness about alopecia areata, an autoimmune disorder that causes hair loss, while giving hope to any individual who faces adversity.

After watching Miss Delaware 2010, Kayla Martell, take her wig off and explain that she would compete in the 2011 Miss America pageant wearing a wig, as she too had alopecia, the Brady sisters decided they needed to do something to inspire others just as Martell had done for them.

Three weeks later, on Feb. 12, 2011, This Is Me was born as a two-and-a-half-minute YouTube PSA. The video was created to not only raise awareness about alopecia, but to try and inspire others who are facing challenges.

All proceeds go directly to the This Is Me Scholarship Fund, Inspired by Ryan Risco and Cait Chivonne Polhill. The fund has awarded 89 $500 scholarships since 2012 to local students who have faced adversity or helped a friend overcome hardship, as well as national scholarships to students who have alopecia.

This year’s event kicks off at noon on Jan. 1 and is open to the public to watch and cheer on the brave plungers. Anyone interested in plunging or donating can visit http://www.newyearspolarplunge.com. Plungers are required to register in advance by Dec. 30 to participate.

The first Polar Plunge, where participants strip down to their bathing suits and run into the frigid waters of the Hudson River, on Jan. 1, 2013, attracted 11 brave souls and raised $2,400. In 2018, a record-setting 80 participants raised more than $13,500.

For more information, or to learn more about the This Is Me Foundation and the This is Me Scholarship Fund, visit the foundation’s website at http://www.thisismefoundation.com or Facebook page at http://www.facebook.com/ThisIsMeFoundation.

High-Flying High School Senior Earns Top Civil Air Patrol Award

By Abby Luby

When Grant Becker was 13, he sat in the co-pilot’s seat of a small Cessna 172 plane that was taking off at Westchester County Airport.

At an altitude of 1,000 feet, he was allowed to take control and do basic maneuvers.

“I loved it,” he said, recalling the flight that marked the first leg of his pilot training.

A member of the Civil Air Patrol (CAP) since 2016, Becker, a Pleasantville High School senior, just earned his private pilot’s certificate through the Civil Air Patrol’s Cadet Wings program, which provides cadet scholarships funded by the United States Air Force to cover the cost of flight training.

When Becker initially received his private pilot’s license, he said he took his mom for a ride in one of the flight school planes.

“She really liked it a lot,” he said.

Becker was recently awarded CAP’s highest cadet achievement, the Carl A. Spaatz Award, a prestigious honor for cadets who have worked for five years to complete 16 required achievements in the CAP Cadet Program.

By Abby Luby

Becker’s list of accolades also includes graduating from the Hawk Mountain Ranger School, a search-and-rescue training facility operated by Pennsylvania’s Civil Air Patrol, and completing the field medic course, a one-week program for future combat medics.

The local CAP is based at Westchester County Airport, and there is occasional squadron training at Camp Smith.

During the summer Becker said he had basic training at Stratton, the National Guard based near Scotia, N.Y. and has trained privately at a local flight school at the airport.

Becker is currently an emergency medical technician and volunteers with the Pleasantville Volunteer Ambulance Corps.

Innovation and construction played a big part in Becker’s childhood. At 10 years old, Becker was one of 13 finalists, out of thousands of applicants, in the 2014 Grow Your Own Business challenge, flying out to Omaha, where he met Warren Buffett.

“My grandpa and I fabricated the wheelchair bike together,” Becker recalled.

“One of my classmates was in a wheelchair and since I enjoy riding a mountain bike, I thought why shouldn’t my classmate with a disability be able to do that? I showed the bike to Warren Buffet.”

For 80 years, the Civil Air Patrol has been the official auxiliary of the U.S. Air Force. Becker said he always wanted to pursue service and hasn’t ruled out entering the military. Since he was 12, Becker said he has dreamed of going to the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs.

To be accepted to the academy, Becker needed to be nominated by his congressional representative. Just a few weeks ago, Becker was notified that Rep. Mondaire Jones had officially nominated him.

“That means there is a slot at the academy for me,” said Becker. “It’s like a conditional acceptance.”

As a future enrollee at the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Becker said he will probably take undergraduate courses towards a Bachelor’s Degree in science and then apply to medical school.

“My hope is to pursue a medical degree as a flight surgeon with a flying squadron,” he said. “They have a few different paths to go down in terms of medical school that leads to the air force or the military in general.”

Did You Know That Gum Disease Can Lead to Serious Medical Conditions?

- ALZHEIMER’S DISEASE: Certain oral bacteria can travel to the brain, creating enzymes that can lead to memory loss, and eventually, Alzheimer’s. Ongoing management and treatment of gum disease is vital.
- SLEEP APNEA: If left unmanaged, sleep apnea can lead to tooth decay, plaque, sores, gum inflammation and disease.
- DIABETES: Nearly 95% of diabetics have gum disease which increases blood sugar and other related complications.
- ORAL CANCER: Approximately 53,000 adults in the U.S. will be diagnosed with oral cancer annually. Early diagnosis and treatment is critical.
- CARDIOVASCULAR DISEASE & STROKE: Bacteria that infects the gums may cause blood vessel inflammation and damage leading to blood clots, heart attack or stroke.
- CANCER: Clinical studies show that certain oral bacteria may influence the onset of certain cancers including Esophageal, Pancreatic, Colorectal, and others.

In the spirit of giving this year, Kent Elementary School fourth-grade students used Giving Tuesday as a day to give back and support those in need in the local community with an in-class volunteer opportunity.

Through a project idea from Volunteer New York, the students in the classes of Cathleen Rossetti, Carrie Cioffi, Kristin Mordecki and Chris Livulpi assembled individual hygiene kits that included a toothbrush, toothpaste, shampoo, conditioner and body wash, along with a hand-drawn card from a student.

Putnam Community Action Partnership (CAP), an anti-poverty group dedicated to helping those who are struggling in the community, will distribute the kits this year. “We are working on cards to put in bags to send shampoo and conditioner to a shelter so whenever someone needs something the shelter can give it to them,” said student Natasha Portillo, who drew a smiley face, balloons and a flower on her card. “It’s important to give back because if some people need these things, they can get it for free.”

Cards from the students included a variety of positive sentiments, such as “keep going, you are awesome,” “you are special in a perfect way,” and even “soar like an eagle and stay strong.”

The purpose of the cards: “To make them feel good and maybe if they are having a bad day, it might cheer them up,” said student Tyrieke Hall.

The students created 65 total hygiene kits for the Putnam CAP and showed a great deal of compassion for others this holiday season.

I can’t remember the last time I climbed a flight of stairs.

For the past five years, I’ve been happily ensconced in a one-level home at Trump Park and, yes, I probably haven’t climbed a flight of stairs during all that time. My generous waistline would attest to that.

Prior to that I was climbing and descending stairs all the time, living in an 18th century home where every day I would climb two flights from my home office to the attic for supplies or down to the basement to attend to a temperamental boiler and water heater.

Some people seek to avoid stairs in their housing choices, especially older citizens, preferring one-level living, while others insist on having sleeping quarters on a second level. The reasons for either preference can be quite different.

When I was very young, maybe five or six years old, I had a recurring dream of tumbling down an endless flight of steps, but they were too far removed if the master bedroom was on one roof. Then, there is the argument for the first floor.

While early in my real estate career, I thought that only senior homebuyers would have a preference for avoiding steps, I found many young buyers with the same avoidance issue because they had young children and were afraid either of children falling or being too far removed if the master bedroom was on the first floor.

For older buyers who prefer homes without steps, many have mobility issues. The need for level floors is inarguable. But assuming one must live with stairs, is there any benefit to having them?

A set of stairs in the middle of the home might be an annoyance for people who aren’t used to them, but I have lived with them for most of my life. There were times in New York City when I have lived in four- and five-floor walk-ups. In the country, I’ve lived in a two-story home with laundry and storage in the basement. I’ve looked at the stairs as part of my exercise routine. In fact, the workout that comes from regular stair climbing may help to keep us young.

As a case in point, I think of my mother-in-law. My wife was initially relieved when her parents, upon retiring to Hyannis, Mass., didn’t say he’d get there by just strolling across it on the same level or taking an elevator.

Harckham Announces State Grant for New Castle Park Renovation

State Sen. Peter Harckham (D-Lewisboro) announced this week that he was able to secure $100,000 in state grant funding for renovations and improvements to the popular soccer fields at Amsterdam Park, located on Hoags Cross Road in the Town of New Castle.

“Parks and recreation areas are so important for residents’ well-being, especially as people look to be outdoors more, and that means maintaining the infrastructure is a must for these well-used grounds and facilities,” Harckham said. “The upgrades coming to the soccer fields at Amsterdam Park will benefit community members in so many ways, and I’m pleased to have been able to partner with town officials in getting improvements at the park underway.”

Harckham made his surprise holiday announcement during the Town Board’s Dec. 14 meeting.

Amsterdam Park is home to two of the Town of New Castle’s three soccer fields. The fields serve as practice and home fields for the youth soccer program, which serves over 400 children between the ages of 8 and 14, and also for a smaller lacrosse program of about 40 10- and 11-year-old players.

Because of heavy regular use of the fields throughout the year, the turf has suffered to the extent that one of the fields at Amsterdam Park was deemed unusable and needed to be closed off for athletic use after a child tripped on an exposed sprinkler head during a soccer match and was injured.

The town plans to use the state grant funding to completely renovate the damaged playing field at Amsterdam Park. The field will be skinned and graded and fresh topsoil will be installed to completely conceal the recessed sprinkler heads and allow proper drainage. Sod will then be installed and allowed to set, so that the field will be playable by late spring.

The awarded grant funding was secured within the State and Municipal Facilities Program (SAM), which is among the grant programs administered by the Dormitory Authority of the State of New York (DASNY) to support community and economic development.

“New Castle’s soccer fields at Amsterdam Park are in desperate need of repair,” said Supervisor Lisa Katz. “Thanks to Sen. Harckham and this generous SAM grant, the town will be able to repair and renovate these heavily utilized fields so that our youth soccer players and summer camp participants will have safe fields on which to play. It is always wonderful to see the state enabling important infrastructure improvements in our community.”

“Sen. Harckham has always gone to bat for New Castle, both for our parks system and for the greater good,” said Councilman Jeremy Saland. “The facilities at Amsterdam Park are a big asset to our town, and maintaining the fields in their best condition benefits all of our residents.”

Families Should Be Mindful of Alzheimer’s Warning Signs

Last year, the COVID-19 pandemic caused many families to celebrate the holidays remotely because of public health concerns. As we return to more in-person celebrations this year, cognitive or memory changes in an elderly loved one may be alarming and concerning.

Visiting aging loved ones after being apart for so long might lead to the realization of changes in behavior, physical health and new expressions of memory loss or cognitive decline. When starting to notice these changes, there can be a variety of responses and moments of uncertainty. Denial that anything unusual is happening can be tempting, and families often don’t know where to turn.

As our loved ones age, we often attribute memory loss to a normal part of aging, although some behaviors or signs of cognitive decline may result from something more severe.

“Alzheimer’s is not a normal part of aging. It is a progressive disease, in which the symptoms gradually worsen over time,” said Meg Boyce, vice president for programs and services at the Alzheimer’s Association Hudson Valley Chapter. “Ignoring signs of cognitive impairment out of fear or denial can lead to greater heartache and the possible worsening of the situation.”

The Alzheimer’s Association Hudson Valley Chapter encourages families to keep the 10 warning signs of Alzheimer’s in mind:

• Memory changes that disrupt daily life, such as forgetting important events.
• Challenges in planning or solving problems, such as keeping track of monthly bills.
• Difficulty completing familiar tasks, such as driving to routine places.
• Confusion with time or place.
• Trouble understanding visual images and spatial relationships.
• New problems with words in speaking or writing.
• Misplacing things and being unable to retrac steps, such as putting keys in the freezer.
• Decreased or poor judgment, such as giving large sums of money to telemarketers.
• Withdrawal from work or social activities and forgetting how to work on a favorite hobby.
• Changes in mood and personality, such as becoming angry or fearful for seemingly no reason.

“The holidays revolve around traditions, so if you are seeing someone struggling with a familiar task, it’s important to reach out to their health care providers,” Boyce said. “Early diagnosis is crucial, as it gives the person living with the disease and their family more time to plan for the future, as well as the opportunity to take advantage of some drugs that can help manage symptoms in the early stage.”

The Alzheimer’s Association typically sees an increase in calls to its 24-hour Helpline (800-272-3900) during the holidays when people visiting with friends and family whom they haven’t seen in a while become aware that something is different.

“Helpline calls often lead to local referrals to our chapter for additional resources, such as free education programs and personalized family care consultations,” Boyce said.

The Alzheimer’s Association Hudson Valley Chapter serves families living with dementia in seven counties in New York, including Dutchess, Orange, Putnam, Rockland, Sullivan, Ulster and Westchester. To learn more about the programs and services offered locally, visit alz.org/hudsonvalley.

What a Victory!

Team Walk to Victory raised $76,345 for the 2021 Westchester Walk to End Alzheimer’s in October, the most its members have ever raised for the organization and a record-breaking amount for a family team. A majority of the money was raised at the team’s sixth annual Alzheimer’s Luncheon and Card Party: “Take Me to Provence!” that was held at Brae Burn County Club on Oct. 14. This year’s event featured a theme of cards and luncheon tables outside, as well as raffles and 14 vendors.

Westchester County, WCC Partner on Manufacturing Training Effort

As part of the county’s commitment to growing the local advanced manufacturing industry and ensuring companies have access to qualified local talent, the Westchester County Office of Economic Development and Westchester Community College (WCC) are pleased to announced a career training program for advanced manufacturing.

The program assists individuals with little or no prior manufacturing experience on the path to a highly skilled, well-paying and in-demand career.

“Westchester County is home to a diverse advanced manufacturing industry which makes a tremendous impact on our local economy,” said County Executive George Latimer. “This program will help to equip the next generation of employees with valuable skills and ensure our businesses have access to the talent they need locally.”

Beginning a career in advanced manufacturing does not require a college degree. WCC’s program lets participants earn a certification at their own pace and provides education and mentorship. Participants will learn skills to create products using computers, robotics, 3D printing and more, as well as master the basics of safety, quality, manufacturing processes and green production.

The program will also offer opportunities to see first-hand how things work and to get a sense of Westchester’s advanced manufacturing firms. Upon completion, participants will hold a Manufacturing Skill Standards Council (MSSC) CPT 4.0 Certification.

“WCC has been experiencing a surge in enrollment by those who have chosen to upskill and pursue job training in fields that are, and will be, drivers of our economic re-emergence,” said its President Dr. Belinda Miles. “A WCC education serves as a catalyst, preparing our students with the skills and certifications they require to move up the socioeconomic ladder and provide for themselves and their families. This program illustrates how WCC partners with local industries to identify future workforce needs and then prepare workers to fill those critical roles.”

PNW BOCES Official Named Communicator of the Year

Ellen Lane, the communications director at Putnam Northern Westchester BOCES, has been named the 2021 Communicator of the Year by the New York School Public Relations Association.

The award recognizes a school communications professional who has been a leader in strengthening relationships between public schools and the students, families and communities they serve. A panel of out-of-state communications experts chooses the honoree.

Since her arrival at BOCES in 2010, Lane, who oversees a team of 18, has embraced and pioneered 21st century communications tools, bringing mobile apps, digital communications, live-stream captioning and live production video to BOCES and the districts it serves. She has also broadened the scope of the service, turning it into a one-stop shop for all of a school district’s communications needs.

“Ellen is like the ‘MacGyver’ of communications. Whatever is needed, Ellen will make it happen,” said former superintendent Valerie Hendrickson-Piedmonte, who worked with Lane in the Brewster Central School District and Hastings-on-Hudson Union Free School District. “As a bonus, my own knowledge and understanding about communications was enriched by working with Ellen.”

Lane arrived at a time when school districts were feeling the effects of the 2008 recession and money was tight. She began by offering free workshops for school leaders with titles such as “How to Communicate on a Shoestring.” Lane met school districts at their level, built relationships and then respectfully led the way to improved communications.

She found economical and effective ways to raise a district’s profile and community engagement, but also demonstrated best practices that gave district leaders something to which they could aspire.

“It’s important to be confident in your expertise and the importance of your role,” Lane said of what it takes to be a successful communications director. “School communications professionals should not write press releases. Be respectful but firm when giving public relations advice.”

Lane has worked diligently over the years to assemble a strong team with deep, broad expertise.

“She has been an inspiration and a mentor,” said Laura Belfiore, communications director in the Peekskill City School District, in her letter of support of the nomination.

In addition to her colleagues, several area school district superintendents and public relations professionals submitted letters on Lane’s behalf. Hendrick Hudson Central School District Superintendent Joseph Hochreiter commended Lane for her ability to lead the communications function.

“I can count on Ellen and the service to ensure that our district follows best practices for school public relations and uses the latest tools to reach our stakeholders,” Hochreiter said. “Her demeanor, confidence and resilience has played a large role in my professional success and the increasingly positive reputation of our school district.”

“I was touched and delighted to receive this award because I have so much respect for my peers and the great work they are doing all across New York,” Lane said.

The New York School Public Relations Association is a nonprofit membership organization that serves school communications professionals and administrators in New York State. For more information, visit www.nyspra.org.

My Favorite Culinary Encounters of 2021

By Morris Gut

Flavors of the surprising contemporary and traditional dining concepts can be found across New Rochelle, Chappaqua and White Plains. Here is a short list of favorite dishes and dining venues you should not miss in 2022! Of course, take-out is a good option, too.

Fogo de Chao
After a major renovation to the landmark Bank of New York building on Main and Church streets in downtown White Plains, Fogo de Chao, a Brazilian steakhouse chain with 40 restaurants across the U.S., Middle East, Brazil and Mexico, premiered in this sprawling space with its churrascaria BBQ. It is a sparkling spot for drinks, giant market table salad bar and waves of fire-roasted meats served on skewers in the churrasco style. If you’ve never experienced this type of dining concept, make sure you bring a hearty appetite.

Additions to the traditional meat offerings include a fresh daily seafood selection, a variety of fresh-made salads and a dramatic bar and lounge where it’s Happy Hour all day, every day. There is a bar menu and a butcher shop for take-home.

Fogo de Chao is located at 235 Main St. in White Plains. Info: www.fogodechao.com.

Maria
A two-time winner of Michelin’s prestigious Bib Gourmet Award, brothers Peter and Giovanni Cucullo have been causing a stir in New Rochelle, drawing patronage from all over the county to their flavorful riff on Italian-global cooking.

Named after their mother, Maria has become almost a regular haunt for me. Love their Happy Hours from 3 to 7 p.m. when they offer some favorite beverages and small plates that are loaded with flavors. I am particularly fond of their meatballs, cauliflower fritters and roasted shishito peppers. Special mention must go to their tender baby lamb chops.

The family also operates the bustling Fratelli’s Pizza & Pasta and Pop’s Espresso Bar on the same block.

Trattoria Vivolo
Seasonal baccala, also referred to as salt cod, is a traditional staple in many ethnic kitchens, especially during the holiday season. Chef and owner Dean Vivolo prepares several versions, and one of my favorites is baccala salad. Vivolo prepares it fried or in a stew with potatoes.

His Paglia e Fieno con Funghi, was also incredibly flavorful with its mix of mushroom ragu, scallions, crispy prosciutto and pecorino cheese. We enjoy it with a side of tender broccoli rabe.

Vivolo and his friendly staff are on top of their game. His robust regional Italian cuisine is served out of a万事大吉 dining room just across from Harrison’s Metro-North station. Sit at the counter, tuck into a booth or take a table in the rear greenhouse and enjoy the surprising contemporary and traditional flavors: tasty thin-crusted pizza; old-fashioned meatballs and sauce; rabbit cacciatore; crostino di polenta topped with wild mushrooms, gorgonzola and tomato sauce; lasagna Bolognese al forno; and osso buco (tender braised veal shank).

There’s a good wine list and sparkling lights in the evening. Open seven days. Free parking.

Trattoria Vivolo is located at 301 Halstead Ave. in Harrison. Info: 914-835-6190 or visit www.trattoriavivolo.com.

Macelleria Italian Steakhouse
This high-end Italian steakhouse with locations in Pelham and Armonk just premiered a third location in Greenwich offering classic cuts of prime beef and chops along with a hearty helping of Italian-American specialties. Tony Lala and his crew will take good care of you.

Be seated in the handsome dining room with its warming stone hearth or bar and lounge and peruse the menu over a glass of wine. Enjoy diver scallops, steak tartare, slabs of Canadian bacon, spaghetti carbonara, pappardelle with short rib ragu, zuppa di pesce and even a classic burger. Carnivores should consider the lamb chops, veal chop, New York strip steak or porterhouse for two. Open seven days for lunch and dinner.

Macelleria is located at 111 Bedford Rd. in Armonk. Info: 914-219-5728.

Freebird Kitchen and Bar
During my visits we have devoured fried calamari, meaty racks of baby back ribs, Cobb salad, spicy chicken wings, crispy Brussels sprouts, shrimp and grits and braised short ribs, too. The cooking here is very satisfying and all done with a friendly Southern theme.

Portions are ample and shareable. The lighting and the three birds hanging from the ceiling in the dining room give it a magical atmosphere. There is a seasonal rooftop, Sunday night jam sessions and a sprawling bar. Craft beers. Happy hours are Tuesday to Thursday 4 to 6 p.m. and Friday and Saturday 2 to 6 p.m.

Freebird is located at 161 Mamaronек Ave. in White Plains. Open Tuesday through Sunday for lunch, dinner and weekend brunch. Info: 914-607-2476 or visit www.freebirdkitchenandbar.com.

Alex’s Bar & Grille
Proprietor Alex Ahmetaj updated the menu at this restaurant offering big cuts of aged steaks and chops along with generously served Northern Italian/Continental fare. The handsome dining room is split into cozy sections with white lampshades and chairs complement wooden walls and plush beige curtains.

Out of Chef Nick Deimant’s kitchen come the pan-fried calamari with hot cherry peppers; linguini alla vongole; classic veal parmigiana; grilled filet mignon; New York sirloin steak; and pork chops. The house-made smooth ricotta cheesecake is top notch, as are the cannoli.

Alex’s Bar & Grille is located at 577 N. Broadway in North White Plains. Info: 914-358-1444 or visit www.alexseastchester.com.

MP Taverna
Celebrity chef Michael Psilakis brought his Mediterranean culinary magic to Westchester almost a decade ago. He is an award-winning innovator, having enhanced our knowledge of modern Greek-inspired cuisine through his restaurants, cookbooks and television appearances. Psilakis was there on our visits tending to tables and chatting with guests. We preferred the handsome main dining room.

Share a platter of his superb grilled octopus served with an herbal chickpea salad and Greek yogurt. For main courses, there’s an eight-ounce lamb burger served with spicy whipped feta and a stuffed falafel souvlaki wrapped in fresh pita with tzatziki, onion, tomato, romaine and bell pepper. Both dishes come with sides of signature smashed potatoes. Portions are generous.

MP Taverna is located at 1 Bridge St. in Irvington next to the Metro-North station. Open daily. Free parking. Info: 914-231-7854 or visit www.mptaverna.com.

Gusto Pizza
David Masliah and chef Erwen Perez of Encore have opened an artisanal pizza shop next to their popular bistro in Larchmont. One taste of their pies and your palate will fly off to foodie heaven.

The imported wood-burning pizza oven is named Victor, after Masliah’s father, who was a pizzaiolo in France for many years. Have wines by the glass, appetizers, salads and delicious individual pizzas such as the Margherita (tomato, fresh mozzarella, fresh basil) or the Pancetta (tomato, pancetta, crème fraiche, onion, and mozzarella).

Enjoy the cozy and colorful setting. Open seven days for lunch and dinner.

Gusto Pizza is located at 18 Chatsworth Ave. in Larchmont. Info: 914-881-3466 or visit www.gustopizzanyc.com.

You can have delicious cannoli for dessert at Alex’s Bar & Grille in North White Plains.

Jack’s Bar & Restaurant
Marking their first year, Jack’s is the new kid on the block – and a darn good one. Owner Shane Clifford and his staff have been drawing a fine crowd. The space has been remodeled and offers an enhanced Irish American tavern menu on steroids.

Generous specialties coming out of Chef Brendan Donohoe’s kitchen include a refreshing harvest green salad; a double-stacked smash burger; decadent short rib mac ‘n’ cheese; Jack’s meatballs; seared scallops; chicken curry; ‘shroom pizza out of their wood-fired oven; the Berkshire pork chop; and grilled lamb sliders. The staff could not be more friendly.

Open daily. Indoor and outdoor seating. TV’s. Municipal parking is free in the evenings.

Jack’s Bar & Restaurant is located at 219 Main St. in Eastchester. Info: 914-652-7650 or visit www.jacksseastchester.com.

Putnam Chorale Performs Holiday Concerts Before Sold-Out Crowds

On Dec. 3 and Dec. 5, the Putnam Chorale, the sole community chorus in Putnam County performed the complete Messiah before sold-out audiences at St. Luke & St. Andrew Episcopal Church in Beacon and the First United Methodist Church in Brewster.

Under the artistic direction of composer and Conductor Dr. Douglas Anderson, a chorus of 46 singers and soloists Lianne Gennaco, Helen Fanelli, David Gordon and Fred Redd, accompanied by a 14-piece orchestra, joyfully sang the entire 54-section version of one of the best-known and most frequently performed choral works in the history of Western music.

The Messiah, composed by Handel in 1741, based on a text compiled by Charles Jenner from Old Testament Psalms and New Testament Gospel, spans the prophecy of Christmas, the Crucifixion and Resurrection and features the famous “Hallelujah” chorus. Audiences at both concerts couldn’t contain their enthusiasm, showering the performers with standing ovations and shouts of Bravo!

The Putnam Chorale has been entertaining and educating Putnam and Duchess County audiences continuously since 1984. Two major concerts in December and April of each year, plus a rotating program of community events offering open summer sings, ensemble performances at various local living centers and historic sites, a Christmas program at Boscobel and Walter Brewster House and the America Through Song Summer lawn concerts, offer local singers of all experience levels the opportunity to enrich their lives through music and provides the community with compelling, unrivaled performances not available outside major city venues.

There is also the fascinating education about the music, which is provided by Anderson during each concert.

Videos of the chorale’s performances appear weekly on local public access channels.

The Putnam Chorale always welcomes new singers. Auditions are not required. Rehearsals for next spring’s performance of opera choruses begin Monday, Jan. 3 at 6:45 p.m. at the First United Methodist Church on Main Street in Brewster. All experienced singers at all levels are cordially invited to join.

The youth softball player cuts the shape of a young pro, strutting to the on-deck circle with quiet confidence, twirling her bat for fun with the ease and dexterity of a baton artist. She unleashes a series of fierce and fluid practice swings.

Sporting a muddied red and white jersey with black pants, glistening from a day of sweaty game action, she sprints around the sun-soaked bases with studied precision, skillfully nicking the corner of each bag, hustling around the diamond with the intensity of an inmate running a jailbreak dash. Patrolling centerfield, knees bent in perfect ready position, she glides to flyballs in the gap, comfortably catching the yellow orb rocketed her way. All familiar sights.

What made this spring of 2021 softball afternoon different, however, was what I saw that day when studying the lithe, athletic beauty flashing her on-field skills at her final Fox Lane Middle school softball game. I saw a young adult who was done with life dominated and defined by softball. She just didn’t know it yet.

Call it a father’s intuition, call it a subtle look I saw in her eyes, but I knew it was an issue that needed to be addressed, despite positive outward appearances. Sometimes you love someone so much that you know something about them that they don’t yet consciously know about themselves.

Here in Westchester County, we’re all too familiar with parents who lovingly but misguidedly apply all manner of unnecessary pressure on their kids, in the classroom and out on the ball field. Highly competitive youth sports deliver uniquely wonderful benefits to kids, especially team sports. Those benefits are sometimes counteracted by well-intentioned parents who lose sight of what matters and begin to rely on the athletic achievements of their kids to fulfill their egos and social lives. It is also true that feeling a sense of pride and generating a sense of community through youth sports can and usually is achieved in healthy doses, despite what naysayers might insist. But, in my case, I started to wonder ...

Homemade Holiday Delights That Are Guaranteed to Butter Anyone Up

As we find ourselves surrounded by an abundance of this year’s must-have items, our shopping lists are often dictated by retail experts all claiming to offer the ultimate gift-giving guide.

But there’s no need to spend a fortune or face the aggravation of competing with crowds for sold-out products. Sometimes, the most rich and memorable gifts can be created in the kitchen. To put a touch of finesse on your sweet treats, take a cue from the experts and use Plugrá butter, which professional pastry chefs prefer because of its slow-churn and extra creaminess. Unlike other butters, Plugrá uses the right balance of specially selected cream and butterfat, resulting in a texture that harmoniously bends and blends to help craft homemade, confectionary masterpieces.

Using the finest ingredients, Plugrá’s executive chef, Linda Hall, developed a decadent brownie recipe that’s certain to spice up gift-giving.

Mexican Hot Chocolate Brownies

Prep Time: 10 Minutes
Cook Time: 30 Minutes
Servings: 24

Ingredients
- 5 ounces unsweetened chocolate
- 10 tablespoons Plugrá European Style Butter, unsalted
- 4 large eggs
- 2 cups sugar
- 1 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 tablespoon ground Saigon cinnamon from the Spice House
- 1/4 teaspoon kosher salt
- 1/4 teaspoon chipotle powder or cayenne pepper
- 2 teaspoons Nielsen-Massey Madagascar Bourbon Pure Vanilla Extract
- 6 ounces Valrhona Manjari 64% Dark Chocolate, chopped

Instructions
1. Preheat the oven to 350 F. Line a 9-by-13-inch square pan with parchment paper or aluminum foil and spray with non-stick cooking spray.
2. Place the unsweetened chocolate and butter in a large, microwave safe bowl. Microwave on high for three minutes, stirring every 30 seconds or until melted.
3. Stir in the sugar until well blended.
4. Beat in the eggs.
5. Stir in the remaining ingredients until just blended.
6. Spread the batter on the prepared pan and bake for 25 to 30 minutes. Check for doneness by inserting a toothpick into the center of the pan to see if it comes out clean.

“Nothing says indulgence like a gooey, chocolaty brownie; however, most people have been there, done that,” Hall said. “This year, dial it up a notch by adding spices and flavors that evoke warmth and coziness. My recipe is reminiscent of a hot cup of Mexican hot chocolate that has cinnamon and vanilla notes.”

To get you inspired this season, Plugrá partnered with other premium ingredients brands to create a brownie with better results. The Mexican Hot Chocolate Brownies recipe below embraces a savory note produced by Spice House’s strongest and sweetest Vietnamese “Saigon” cinnamon, along with a kick of chipotle pepper. The decadent flavor is also emphasized by using fair and sustainable Manjari dark chocolate from leading chocolate brand, Valrhona, in addition to Nielsen-Massey Madagascar Bourbon Pure Vanilla Extract, which uses premium, hand-selected beans and a slow extraction process to produce the richest tasting vanilla. Additional holiday recipes can be found by visiting plugra.com/recipes.

Holiday Activities to Consider With the Children

Local museums and arts groups will offer four in-person events during the holidays when children are not in school.

The events range from holiday favorites like “The Nutcracker” to story time in the Hudson River Museum’s planetarium.

“The arts don’t take a break during the holidays, which we can all enjoy activities safely and happily by observing proper face-mask protocols,” said Janet Langsam, ArtsWestchester’s CEO. “Our member organizations know that local families rely on them for entertainment and enrichment. Some of these holiday traditions, such as “The Nutcracker,” help children form memories that last a lifetime.”

Contact the presenting arts groups ahead of time in case changing health rules cause event postponement or cancellation. Scheduled activities during the last week of the year include:

Dec. 27: Mr. Dickens Tells a Christmas Carol, Bartow-Pell Mansion Museum, Pelham.

“Mr. Dickens Tells a Christmas Carol” re-creates the famous performance tour by Charles Dickens in 1867 with his classic tale bringing the travails of Ebenezer Scrooge, Bob Cratchit and Tiny Tim alive. Taken from the original script, actor Michael Muldoon plays Charles Dickens and tells the well-loved story in the beautifully decorated double parlors of the mansion meeting the different spirits and characters. Info: 718-885-1461

The Carole Alexis Ballet Theatre/Ballet des Amériques returns to the Wainwright House through Dec. 28. Info: 914-967-6080

The display will feature numerous vintage train sets, one dating back 100 years, running throughout the festively decorated rooms of the Horace Greeley House for the holidays. Children and adults alike can experience the magic of these heirloom items as they watch trains travel through such backdrops as a Bavarian countryside scene, the Rip Roaring 20’s, or ride the rails with the rugged Jesse James Gang, and then take it East to the New York Central… and more!

Admission to this special event is $10 for members and $15 for non-members. Children eight years old and under are $8. Tickets can be purchased online at www.newcastlehs.org/events. Info: 914-238-4666.

A tale of a girl who arrived one spring day, after a storm, walking upside down upon the rainbow. She has a unique way of looking at things, in particular the sky, and an affection for the moon and stars. Recommended for ages four to seven years old. It’s a 33-minute show plus Q&A. Capacity is currently limited to 60 seats per show. Masks are required in the planetarium until further notice. Advance reservations are strongly encouraged. Info: 914-963-4550.

A Look at Wine ‘Truths’ — Myths or Facts?

In this age of media frenzy, our cravings for real-time news and our blind faith in the plethora of social media outlets has created a society of information-hungry individuals where “first to report” supersedes vetted information time and time again.

To make matters worse, misinformation, whether inadvertent or intentional, can grab a foothold and become de facto truth by the mere passage of time — or the number of likes.

The media world of wine falls into this category.

In past columns, I’ve addressed a number of wine-related “facts” to determine their veracity. My goal was to demystify subjects of wine-related “facts” to determine their category.

This week’s myth buster subject: Always use cheap wine when cooking.

Wrong.

A good cook knows that the best ingredients make for a superior dish. You don’t use industrial grade olive oil for your favorite recipe, you use extra virgin olive oil. Similarly, you shouldn’t cook with a mass-produced generic wine.

The reason for adding wine to a recipe is to enhance its aroma, to create a new flavor or to add a unique component to a sauce. Cheap wine is generally too light in aroma or flavor for these tasks. My rule of thumb: If the wine is nondescript in your personal consumption.

For your original or personalized recipes, the wine should fit the overall profile you are attempting to achieve for a particular dish. Alternatively, certain third-party recipes (from books, television or the internet) call for a “dry wine.” This is a carryover from a long-gone era when many wines were overly sweet or enhanced with salt or sugar — certainly not for cooking that $35-per-pound wild Pacific King Salmon.

In today’s sophisticated world of wine, a dry wine may be a French Chardonnay for a simple chicken dish or a citrusy Sauvignon Blanc for a basic seafood sauce. It may be a Syrah for a pot roast or a Cabernet Sauvignon for a robust sauce to accompany medallions of filet mignon.

Stay away from bottle labels that identify the contents as “cooking wine.” These industrial wines bear only a minor resemblance to a wine you would pour for your personal consumption.

Another rule of thumb I follow: Pour the same wine into the sauté pan as you will pour at the dinner table with your completed dish.

Yet one more rule of thumb: Sipping a bit of wine at the start of a meal may be a culinary sin, but sipping a bit of wine as you make your signature dish will enhance your experience. A good cook knows that the best ingredients make for a superior dish.
