Noise, Environment Raise Residents’ Ire Near Saw Mill Work Site

By Martin Wilbur

About 100 feet from Danielle and Gibson Craig’s Pollywiggle Lane home in Pleasantville, a tall, clanging pile driver repeatedly hammers pressure-treated wood piles to help raise a 1.3-mile section of the Saw Mill River Parkway.

Ear-splitting decibel levels from the work, reaching 90 dB in some instances, according to Gibson Craig’s decibel counter, begin as early as 7:20 a.m. and last past 5 p.m. most days except Sunday.

But the disturbance doesn’t end there. The contractors for the state Department of Transportation (DOT) then prepare for the night crew with less noisy tasks but with floodlights illuminating the area until 1 or 2 a.m.

The nearly constant noise of the pile driver during daytime hours and upheaval caused by the lights, generators and other equipment at night have severely impacted the Craig’s quality of life and dozens or perhaps hundreds of other residents in Pleasantville and Mount Pleasant.

Craig, an engineer who works as a construction manager for a private developer, said the noise and lights are just two problems. He questions whether the DOT has improperly designated the project as a minor highway rehabilitation project to avoid conducting a sound impact study.

The agency may also be skirting state environmental regulations, Craig charged, by failing to submit an Environmental Impact Statement in close proximity to a section of the Saw Mill River that’s designated a Class A wetland and a Class B trout habitat. His estimate of 5,000 to 6,000 pressure-treated piles could possibly be affecting nearby residents’ drinking wells, he said.

Craig charged that the DOT is apparently its own regulator with little to no oversight. “They’re able to say this is a minor project with minimal impacts to the environment and there’s nobody to countercheck them,” Craig said. “You have to sue them in an Article 78 lawsuit, and this project they’re still saying the plans are under design. So, really, who’s the chicken and who’s the egg here? Without seeing what’s happening, how could you even prepare an Article 78 motion? There’s nothing available.”

He recently started an online petition drive that has collected 410 names as of Monday morning.

Last week, Mount Pleasant Supervisor Carl Fulgenzi fired off a letter to DOT informing the agency of repeated complaints from residents who live on streets near the parkway. In fact, Fulgenzi said he lives about three miles away from the work site and he can hear the noise in the background at his home.

While acknowledging that the project to raise the roadway six feet has been necessary for decades to alleviate the flood-prone stretch from being inundated during heavy rain, there is more the DOT can be doing to make life more bearable for residents, he said.

“They make temporary sound barriers that they could be using to help muffle some of the sounds of the banging of the pilings,” Fulgenzi said. “David Smyth, our (town) engineer, said they’ve done it in the past, they can do it now. I’m hoping that they do.”

The project from just south of Manville Road down to Marble Avenue in Thornwood is work that is designed to increase safety improvements will cost $4.25 million from the original 2017 bond and the supplemental referendum two years later. Brancati said the Green Street firehouse improvements could be finished by June, with the village then expected to go out to bid for the Mutual and Independent firehouses.

Work on the $3.6 million Preston Way bridge rehabilitation is included in the capital spending plan, with the village having received $1.9 million in state funding for the project.

Mt. Kisco Residents Face 1.25% Tax Hike in Proposed Village Budget

By Martin Wilbur

Mount Kisco residents face a modest 1.25 percent tax rate increase for the village’s upcoming fiscal year that raises taxes on the average homeowner by about $47.

Village Manager Ed Brancati presented the municipality’s proposed $23.7 million budget for 2021-22 last week to the Village Board that is tax cap compliant and addresses a wide variety of water, sewer and capital projects.

The currently proposed budget is $100,119 below the tax cap ceiling of 1.31 percent.

The village has been able to make it through the past year of the pandemic in relatively strong fiscal shape, Brancati said. While there have been revenue losses, particularly a 30 percent drop, or $260,000, in parking revenue with many commuters having worked from home, sales tax revenue has not sunk as severely as initially feared, he said.

Through the first three quarters of the current fiscal year, which ends May 31, sales tax revenue is on target to meet the $1.75 million budgeted last spring, which is similar to pre-COVID-19 levels but before Westchester County raised its sales tax to 8.375 percent and committed to sharing a portion of the money with municipalities and school districts.

“There has been an impact for sure,” Brancati said, “but (sales tax) rebounded a little more quickly than people expected and it wasn’t as severe as expected.”

There is about $468,000 appropriated from the general fund’s fund balance for the next fiscal year, although the village will be able to maintain 25 percent of its general fund budget in the reserve fund, a level recommended by the Budget Finance Committee.

Brancati said that Mount Kisco is also expected to receive $1.18 million over the next two fiscal years from the American Rescue Plan.

A highlight of the upcoming budget is the list of village capital projects as well as additional work to upgrade water and sewer infrastructure that has tentatively been scheduled for 2021-22.

Academy Street to Be Closed for Bedford Road School Pick Up

By Abby Luby

A new pickup and traffic plan will go into effect for parents retrieving Bedford Road School students in Pleasantville at the end of the school day when full-time, in-person attendance resumes on Apr. 7.

Because the village and school district must still adhere to COVID-19 safety guidelines, including social distancing, the Pleasantville Police Department will be closing Academy Street from 2:30 to 3:15 p.m. on school days. Parents will have to park nearby and walk to the school to pick up their children.

Until now, fewer students have been attending in-person classes because of the hybrid model due to the pandemic, where social distancing was achievable at the hybrid model due to the pandemic, attending in-person classes because of the hybrid model due to the pandemic.

Until now, 10 cars at a time have pulled up to one of three school entrances to retrieve students this school year. Grutzner said that although this process was deemed safest for children, it caused delays on Academy Street and Manville Road as the cars cycled through the queue.

Now, because the student population will double with the full return of in-person learning on Apr. 7, parents will back up on Academy Street causing more extensive traffic delays. Pleasantville does not have district transportation.

“There’s not supposed to be anybody parking or stopping up there (on Academy Street) at all,” Grutzner said. “Parents won’t be able to pull up quick and grab their kids. It will be a challenge.”

Village police worked with Pleasantville school administrators to devise the plan. Officials introduced parents to the street closure last week for two days when only half the number of families were still picking up children.

“With the traffic road closure to half the families at a time should ease the community to compliance and provide the opportunity for an understanding of the reasons for the changes,” Grutzner said.

Handicapped parking permit holders can pick up students at the circle closest to the school gym off of Manville Road. Grutzner also said that parents who arrive before 2:30 p.m. can still pick up their children at the usual place and wait until Academy Street reopens to depart.

School personnel will be available to accompany Academy Street neighborhood vehicles from Manville Road or to Bedford Road, he said. The only vehicular traffic that will be allowed during that time on the street will be for people who live there.

Village Trustee Nicole Asquith supported the plan.

“That’s the way it used to be and reverting to that probably wouldn’t be that surprising,” Asquith said of the street’s closure during dismissal. “Even though it’s inconvenient for some people, the fact that you have to walk to pick up children, to me that’s one of those moments in Pleasantville that creates the community we have where people encounter each other.”

Academy Street will be closed for 45 minutes at the end of each school day starting Apr. 7 when full in-person learning resumes to allow for social distancing during dismissal at Pleasantville’s Bedford Road School.

and improve resiliency during storms. When asked about the concerns from town officials and local residents, the DOT issued written responses saying that it is in compliance with all regulations but provided no specifics.

“The safety and well-being of the community and the surrounding environment is always a top priority for the Department of Transportation and none of the materials or construction methods on this project pose a threat to drinking water sources,” the statement read in part. “All construction activities and materials in this project adhere to federal and state regulations.”

It was also mentioned that the DOT has worked with its contractor to minimize noise and disruptions to the surrounding communities as much as possible by limiting pile driving to daytime hours.

Noise levels at the work site are monitored and there has been an outreach manager to allow the department to keep local officials and community members updated on progress.

Furhtermore, overnight work is required to complete the project more quickly and reduce impacts on motorists and local communities.

The DOT reported that a noise impact study was not required for this project “since the roadway alignment was not being moved closer to any adjoining dwellings or other potential noise receptors.” Standard erosion control methods, including silt fences and traps, have been installed along work zones, the department’s correspondence noted. The site will be landscaped and adjoining wetlands restored once work is completed.

Craig said he was told the pile driving work will last about nine months along the 1.3-mile stretch. The DOT forecasts all of the Westchester projects, including bridge replacements on East Lincoln Avenue in Mount Vernon and Pelham and on U.S. Route 1 over the Mamaroneck River, to be completed by Fall 2022.

At the Mar. 18 Saw Mill River Watershed Advisory Board meeting, the DOT was scheduled to have representatives on hand but failed to show. Smyth, the town of Mount Pleasant engineer, said the project does more than impact local residents.

“It symbolizes DOT working with locals on a project such as this and I think it’s just good experience to know how the DOT will work with locals on a very large infrastructure project,” Smyth said.

Steven Kayvee, chair of the town’s Conservation Advisory Council, recommended a policy review be undertaken to address how DOT does not need to apply for a wetlands permit. Helen Meurer, chair of Pleasantville’s Conservation Advisory Council, said it has been alarming to see the wetlands buffer being used for storage and equipment.

“The fact that they are not paying attention to the actual wetland areas is very disturbing,” she said.

Meanwhile, Danielle Craig and Gibson Craig and scores of other residents on the east and west sides of the parkway have potentially months of noise ahead. The Craigs said they understand the importance of the project, but residents are being ignored by DOT.

Danielle Craig, who works for a communications firm, said, with so many people working from home because of the pandemic, trying to accomplish their tasks has been problematic. Their three-year-old daughter has also been home since her pre-school has been closed.

“It’s horrible,” said her old daughter has also been home since her pre-school has been closed.

She just made my life a form of torture hearing this every day. I have nowhere to go.”

Gibson Craig said the lack of noise mitigation efforts, disregard for the environment and poor communication on the part of DOT has been infuriating.

“They didn’t have the decency to bring us earplugs,” he said.

Other projects on the docket include streetscape improvements for $1.5 million; paving and sidewalk work for $525,000; Fox Senior Center improvements for $850,000, as the village pursues Community Development Block Grant money to offset some of the cost; $250,000 for vehicle replacement; Village Hall improvements for $635,000, of which $400,000 has been received from the state and federal government; and relining of the main streetscape improvements for $1.5 million; and the Leonard Park wells project, but Mount Kisco has already received $3 million in Water Infrastructure Improvement Act (WIIA) funds that will largely pay for those three projects.

Additional water improvements are Byram Lake Dam and water building upgrades ($500,000 each) and the Leonard Street water main replacement ($400,000).

Saw Mill Sewer Pump Station upgrades will cost $3,625,000 and the first phase of the Branch Brook sewer line work costing $1,925,000 has also been included. Mount Kisco has received $2,375,000 in WIIA funds for the two sewer projects.

Brancati said Village is looking to be as fiscally prudent and efficient as possible.

“The departments, the staff are all working very hard to do everything they can to really maximize every dollar and every resource to meet the needs of the public,” he said.

A public hearing on the proposed 2021-22 budget will be held at the Apr. 5 Village Board meeting.

State Lifts Nursing Home Restrictions; Citizens Health Course Available

By Martin Wilbur

New York State has lifted most of the severe restrictions on nursing home and assisted living facility visitation after some residents hadn’t seen their relatives face to face for a full year.

Gov. Andrew Cuomo’s office announced late last Thursday that all nursing home residents will be allowed to have visitors effective immediately except for home residents will be allowed to have face for a full year.

“We understand the emotional toll that this community has experienced by being separated from their loved ones during a particularly challenging year,” said state Health Commissioner Dr. Howard Zucker. “We’re confident that these facilities can continue strong infection control practices that will allow for the safe visitation they have dearly missed.”

Lisa Newcomb, executive director of the Empire State Association of Assisted Living, said the past year has been extraordinarily difficult for everyone, but those with loved ones in facilities had it particularly hard.

“The vaccine is the game changer. The overwhelming majority of our residents are fully vaccinated,” Newcomb said. “Due to the pronounced efficacy of the vaccines in preventing COVID-19, the New York State Department of Health has given residents and providers the much-needed green light to reopen their doors and provide for a more active lifestyle for the seniors in our care.”

Citizen Health Training

New York State has arranged for all residents to be trained for a public health crisis by offering a free online course with the goal of preventing and responding to future emergencies.

Registration opened last Thursday for the Citizen Public Health Training Program, which will not only help people during the remainder of the COVID-19 pandemic but in any future crises, Cuomo said.

The curriculum was developed and is being offered by Cornell University, which has also enlisted a variety of its own professors and professors from the SUNY system. It will address topics such as COVID-19 prevention; COVID-19 vaccines; health literacy; health priorities and equity; public health improvement and community leadership; public health preparedness; and health impacts from emergency events.

Cuomo urged everyone to sign up for the 16-hour course, which is set to begin on Apr. 30.

“I think having the information and knowledge will go a long way toward reducing the anxiety that people felt now,” he said. “People felt out of control – isolated and out of control.”

Dr. Lorin Warnick of Cornell University will oversee the program. He said the program’s goal is to increase understanding and improve public health so the general public will be better equipped to respond.

“The material will help people understand the principles needed to respond to COVID-19, including prevention and vaccination efforts, and these modules also motivate participation in personal and community health promotion, and this will in turn help build preparedness in future health emergencies,” Warnick said.

While everyone is looking forward to the time when the population reaches herd immunity, Cuomo warned that when COVID-19 is done it likely won’t be the last time there is a worldwide pandemic.

He pointed to how there have been public health scares over the past 25 years that had similarly threatened the global community but failed to mushroom into a pandemic. Those included the avian flu in 1996-97, SARS in 2002, the swine flu in 2009, MERS in 2012, Ebola in 2014 and Zika in 2016.

“Every few years we have been warned and what happened? We didn’t really make the changes, (take) the precautions that needed to be put in place,” Cuomo said.

Vaccine Eligibility Expanded to 30-Year-Olds; 16-Year-Olds on Apr. 6

By Martin Wilbur

Eligibility for the COVID-19 vaccines in New York State is once again being expanded this week to include all residents who are 30 years old and up, and by next Tuesday will include everyone at least 16 years old.

Gov. Andrew Cuomo made the announcement on Monday a week after those 50 years and up became eligible for vaccinations and as vaccine availability starts ramping up.

More than nine million doses have been administered statewide with 171,419 does in a 24-hour period on Sunday. During the seven-day stretch ending Sunday, more than 1.3 million doses were given throughout New York.

Delivery of the current week’s allocation, which is expected to include increased allotments of the one-dose Johnson & Johnson vaccine, many to local pharmacies, is expected to arrive by mid-week.

“As we continue to expand eligibility, New York will double down on making the vaccine accessible for every community to ensure equity, particularly for communities of color who are too often left behind,” he said. “We can see the light at the end of the tunnel, but until we get there it is more important than ever for each and every New Yorker to wear a mask, socially distance and follow all safety guidelines.”

County Executive George Latimer, with Deputy County Executive Ken Jenkins, at Monday afternoon's COVID-19 briefing.

Newly eligible people are free to sign up for an appointment on Tuesday at 8 a.m. of the week that they become eligible.

Despite the encouraging news, the state Department of Health urges patience from the public. Demand for the state’s 19 million-plus residents still greatly exceeds the federal government’s supply.

For example, there are 20 million new doses of the Johnson & Johnson vaccine for the entire nation this week, and New York will be allocated its share.

The good news for local residents is that much of Westchester’s Johnson & Johnson vaccination allotment is to local pharmacies, said Deputy County Executive Ken Jenkins.

“There are many, many new pharmacies that have been added and they are using the Johnson & Johnson vaccine,” Jenkins said.

The Johnson & Johnson vaccine is preferred by many, particularly older residents, because it only requires one dose, instead of a booster three or four weeks later.

Through Sunday, nearly 30 percent of the state’s residents have received at least one dose of a vaccine and 16.8 percent are fully vaccinated. Those numbers are similar in Westchester County.

Although there are steadily increasing percentages of people who are now inoculated, the number of active cases in Westchester and across the state and nation have been on the rise once again.

On Monday, County Executive George Latimer reported that through the weekend, the number of active cases had spiked to 5,760, up more than 500 since the previous weekend and more than 400 since Mar. 23.

The number of COVID-19 hospitalizations remains stubbornly persistent, standing at 259 on Saturday, virtually unchanged over the past few weeks with only minor variations.

Latimer said it’s believed that the variants from the United Kingdom and possibly elsewhere around the globe may be playing a role in the active case increase because those COVID-19 strains are reported to be more communicable.

“The numbers are not as encouraging as we hoped they would have been,” Latimer said. “We thought we would have a downward direction and it’s flattened out.”

But the county executive said once a strong majority of the population is vaccinated, infections should be reduced.

“I believe we’re going to see a much better late spring this year than last year, a much better summer, a big fireworks show at the oval in Tuckahoe,” Latimer said. “We’re going to open up Playland – no fireworks at Playland this year – but we’ll see Playland back open and we’re going to have things that are helpful.”

The statewide positivity rate stood at 3.5 percent on Sunday with more than 267,000 tests administered. For the second week in a row, the Mid-Hudson Valley had the highest rate of the state’s 10 regions, standing at 4.8 percent. Westchester’s positivity rate was 4.1 percent and Putnam and Rockland each stood at 5.4 percent.

Glen Island Park in New Rochelle is reopening to the public on Tuesday for the first time in more than a year. It will be open only to county residents from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily. There will be no buses or boat docking. Parking capacity will be capped at 300 vehicles.

The park was closed in early March 2020 once New Rochelle became a hot spot. The site has been used as a drive-in COVID-19 testing facility.
Memorial Service for Late Croton Trustee Habib to Be Held April 11

By Anna Young

A memorial service will be held at Senasqua Park a week from Sunday following the sudden passing of Croton-on-Hudson Village Trustee John Habib.

The service, organized by Habib’s wife Tanya, invites those to gather at his favorite park along the Hudson River on Apr. 11 from 2 to 4 p.m. to share memories and stories and honor his life.

Habib died suddenly on Mar. 11 while on vacation with family and friends. He was 57. A cause of death has not been publicly released.

In the days following his death, those who knew him best and in the local political sector took to social media, sharing their condolences, love and memories. The civic and community leader was described as a positive and caring man who tirelessly advocated for his hometown.

“He was a very caring and passionate person, uniquely positive with a personality that could fill up a room or Zoom call,” Croton-on-Hudson Mayor Brian Pugh previously told The Examiner. “It’s really hard to imagine village government without him. He brought such compassion to his work."

Habib was sworn into office following his November 2019 victory. He was planning on running for re-election later this year. Officials attest Habib made a significant impact on the village.

“He cherished his memories of the village as a young boy but knew communities must grow and evolve to meet the challenges of today,” the officials’ statement read. “Its work will be a lasting tribute to John’s vision and dedication.”

Habib was always known for big ideas and unwavering ability to question conventional wisdom or how things could improve. Board members said they will remember his insistence to strive for excellence as they continue in the work he valued so much.

Senasqua Park is located at 2 Elliot Way in Croton-on-Hudson. The service is from 2 to 4 p.m. rain or shine. Attendees are encouraged to dress casually, with masks required.

There will be an Apr. 11 memorial service for the late Croton-on-Hudson village trustee John Habib, who passed away suddenly on Mar. 11. Habib was described as a citizen of the world but always called Croton home. After decades of accomplishment in the United States and overseas, he returned to home to help make his community the best village it could be.

“All of Croton should be grateful to John for this,” village officials said in a statement. During his 30-year professional career, Habib held several executive positions with the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and American Chamber of Commerce, as well as major law firms across the nation and overseas handling commercial litigation. Habib also operated his own law firm in Westchester.

Prior to his tenure on the Village Board, Habib served as chair of the Business Development Committee. While in office, he established the Croton Business Council, exercising his expertise to organize and energize the business community.

Habib was always known for big ideas and an ability to question conventional wisdom or how things could improve. Board members said they will remember his insistence to strive for excellence as they continue in the work he valued so much.

Senasqua Park is located at 2 Elliot Way in Croton-on-Hudson. The service is from 2 to 4 p.m. rain or shine. Attendees are encouraged to dress casually, with masks required.

Officials attest Habib made a significant impact on the village.

“He cherished his memories of the village as a young boy but knew communities must grow and evolve to meet the challenges of today,” the officials’ statement read. “Its work will be a lasting tribute to John’s vision and dedication.”

Mt. Kisco Planners May Make Cell Tower Determination Next Month

Martin Wilbur

The Mount Kisco Planning Board will prepare to make a determination on Homeland Towers’ proposed cell tower next month despite the applicant having failed to appear before the board for the past two months’ meetings.

In February, the Village Board and Homeland Towers agreed to a 60-day extension of the deadline for the board to make a decision under the federal government’s Telecommunications Act. That extension expires on Apr. 14, the day after the Planning Board’s next scheduled meeting.

The federal law requires municipalities to make a decision on cell tower applications within 150 days of their submission unless there is mutual consent to extend the time frame.

However, Homeland Towers, which has proposed a 145-foot monopole on less than 4,000 square feet of the 25-acre parcel at 180 S. Bedford Rd., has failed to replenish its escrow account for nearly two months, forcing the board to remove them from agendas since early February. The escrow account is used to reimburse professional consultants hired to assess the application on behalf of the village.

Currently, the issue facing the Planning Board is whether it can accurately assess whether a proposed alternate location being considered by the applicant at 21 Linden Lane on the Bedford side of the town line is less intrusive and can address the cell service coverage gaps along the Route 172 corridor more effectively than the South Bedford Road location.

“From my perspective and having done the site visit, the applicant has provided incomplete responses to our staff and consultants and that just doesn’t bode well for a full assessment of this application,” said Planning Bord Acting Chair Michael Bonforte.

Village Attorney Whitney Singleton said that Homeland Towers appears to be pursuing the alternate Bedford parcel with the property owner with some degree of urgency. However, Mount Kisco has failed to receive key pieces of information from the applicant, including answers to questions regarding emergency access, drive-by data and visual impacts at the alternate site, he said.

As a result, the Planning Board should list all information it is missing and be prepared to render a determination at its Apr. 13 meeting.

“Unfortunately, without them at least partially restoring the escrow account and without them providing us with information, it’s going to be very hard for your board to make a determination that addresses anything substantively, whether their proposed site is warranted and whether it’s the least intrusive location or whether this alternate site is,” Singleton said.

Two of the village’s experts, Simon Kates, associate principal at BFJ Planning, and consulting engineer Anthony Oliveri said the alternate site at Linden Lane is promising. Kates said it could be less intrusive and there are no steep slopes and wetlands to contend with. It is also a previously developed parcel. However, much more analysis is required, he said.

“The site looked like it was doable, quite promising. Kates said it could be less intrusive and there are no steep slopes and wetlands impacts,” Oliveri said.

“Unfortunately, without them at least partially restoring the escrow account and without them providing us with information, it’s going to be very hard for your board to make a determination that addresses anything substantively, whether their proposed site is warranted and whether it’s the least intrusive location or whether this alternate site is,” Singleton said.

Singleton said despite some sharp disagreements, the village is still prepared to work with Homeland Towers. “They’ve been advised that the village is willing to work with them and that in the event they were consenting to a 60-day extension of the shot clock and acknowledge they would be making payments toward their fees on a payment plan, that we would allow them on tonight’s agenda,” Singleton said. “They have declined those items.”

The public hearing on the proposed solar farm, that would be also be installed on a different portion of 180 S. Bedford Rd., was adjourned until Apr. 13.

Mt. Pleasant Schools Propose $66.8M Budget, 1.8% Tax Hike

By Martin Wilbur

Mount Pleasant school officials have proposed a $66.8 million budget for 2021-22 that adds minimal additional staff and narrowly complies with the tax cap.

Property owners are facing a 1.84 percent tax rate increase unless there are changes in the proposed spending plan, which carries a year-to-year spending increase of $1.34 million. The budget complies with the tax cap for the 10th consecutive year, this time by about $1,400, barely under the $1,176,998 increase that the district is allowed for the upcoming year. The increase is 2.05 percent, a fraction under the 2.06 percent ceiling.

“We know that there was financially a great amount of uncertainty as we made our way through the most difficult time of the pandemic,” said Superintendent of Schools Dr. Kurtis Kotes. “We knew we wanted this to be a responsible and tax cap compliant budget as well.”

The instructional portion of the budget will see a total increase in full-time equivalent staff of 1.25 positions with a series of additions and reductions. Many of the additions are related to a continued emphasis on literacy, Kotes said.

Additions are a .6 senior office assistant in the office of the director of technology; a .5 literacy staff developer at Hawthorne and Columbus elementary schools; a .5 reading teacher at Hawthorne Elementary School; a .2 Language Other Than English; a .55 speech teacher at Westlake High School; a full-time special education teacher at Westlake Middle School; and a full-time teacher’s aide at Hawthorne Elementary School.

The reductions are a .6 science teacher and a .5 special education at the high school; a secondary-level special education supervisor; and a full-time English as a New Language (ENL) teacher at Hawthorne Elementary.

Kotes said there are 2.66 full-time equivalent positions that are being transferred into the budget from having previously been funded through grants. Those include a special education teacher at Hawthorne Elementary School; a full-time teaching assistant at the high school; a .45 high school speech teacher and a .21 ENL teacher at Columbus Elementary School.

On the non-instructional end, in the upcoming year, the district will complete its five-year capital maintenance plan. It will also complete all work this summer associated with the $39.6 million referendum that was approved by voters in 2016, said Andrew Lennon, the district’s director of business administration.

Lennon said there will be a total increase of nearly $500,000 in benefits to staff districtwide. That includes about a $130,000 hike in contributions to the Teachers Retirement System, nearly $292,000 for the Employee Retirement System and $344,000 in health insurance costs and other benefits. Those three categories account for almost $14.5 million in spending.

Debt service is expected to decline next year by about $11,000, falling to $5,043,000, Lennon said.

The Board of Education is scheduled to adopt a final budget at its meeting on Apr. 20 with the statewide school board elections and budget vote slated for May 18.

Greenburgh Police Assist Woman Who Goes into Labor at Home

A Greenburgh detective sprang into action this week after a 27-year-old woman went into labor but was unable to make it to the hospital in time.

On Mar. 22 around 5:30 p.m., Greenburgh police officers and EMS units responded to a residence in the Fairview section of town for a person who was experiencing labor pains and contractions, according to Public Information Officer Lt. Kobie Powell.

Upon arrival, Detective Paramedic Dean Annichiarico quickly assessed the woman who was in active labor and determined that the contractions were close together and that birth was imminent. Annichiarico then set up his labor and delivery equipment and assisted the her as she gave birth to a healthy baby boy, Powell said.

Following the birth, both the mother and baby were safely transported to the hospital without incident.

White Plains Dems to Hold First Essay Contest for Local Students

By Martin Wilbur

If you’re a high school student who lives or attends school in White Plains, there’s a new essay contest that may be of interest.

The White Plains Democratic City Committee is sponsoring an inaugural competition asking students that if they were just elected president of the United States, what would their vision and the goals for the country be. The essay may also include any specific proposals that they would make.

“I thought it would be great to do this for the high school students because I think the topic is kinds of an interesting topic,” said Ellen Berger, the committee’s program chair. “We’d love to see what students think about and how they deal with this country going forward with all the things that we’ve been going through.”

Eligible contestants can either live within White Plains’ borders or go to school in the city, whether it’s White Plains High School, Stepinac or Solomon Schechter, Berger said.

The essay has a 1,000-word limit and must be submitted by the deadline at 11:59 p.m. on Apr. 26. It is expected that the first-, second- and third-place finishers will be contacted by mid-May, she said.

The top three essayists will receive a cash prize of $500, $250 and $100, respectively, and as an added bonus, will have lunch with Rep. Mondaire Jones.

Berger said the committee was hoping to involve the city’s youth and hope to get them to consider topics of importance.

What side they may take on an issue or what they would find important is irrelevant, she said. The judges will be evaluating the essays based on ideas and content, quality of reasoning, creativity and originality, quality of writing and structure and organization.

“Especially in a city like White Plains, which is so diverse, I think it’s great to have issues brought before our community and have good discussions about issues between all different parts of our community,” Berger said. “That’s what our goal is today.”

She said that they reached out to Jones to see if he would want to participate in meeting the top entrants for lunch at a future time. He agreed to do so, which is an added attraction for the eventual top finishers.

In addition to the word count and the strict deadline, the essays must be the student’s original work and must include their name, address, e-mail, school that they attend and telephone number.

Lawmakers Pass Stronger Ethics Code for County Government

By Rick Pezzullo

The Westchester County Board of Legislators last week approved a major overhaul of the county ethics law, designed to make the rules for good governance stronger and more transparent.

The new code explicitly covers items such as the use of county positions for personal gain, requirements related to contracts and the annual financial disclosure form that is required of elected officials and other county employees easier to understand and complete.

Legislator Kitley Covill (D-Katonah), chair of the board’s Legislation Committee and a member of the county’s Board of Ethics, was the measure’s lead sponsor when it was introduced last year. She said the legislation has revised the financial disclosure form for elected officials so it has more clarity and is less confusing.

“This new law takes several important steps to encourage ethical behavior in government and ensures that every Westchester County employee knows what is expected and where to turn for ethics guidance,” Covill said.

The new provisions also change the way members of the Board of Ethics are appointed. Previously all seven were appointees of the county executive; now, five will be appointed by the county executive, and two will be appointed by the chair of the Board of Legislators.

Because of that change, the code will require voters to approved a referendum this November.

“Good government starts with good employees and officials committed to the well-being of the people. We have that in Westchester County,” said Board Chairman Ben Boykin (D-White Plains).

“But having clear ethics regulations and procedures takes it a step farther and makes it a matter of law. This new ethics code is more thorough, more transparent and more complete than anything Westchester County has had before, clarifying standards, making it easier for employees to comply and enhancing the confidence of the people in their government.”

The subject of ethics reform has been something that has been discussed for most of my time on the Board of Legislators,” said Majority Leader MaryJane Shimsky (D-Dobbs Ferry). “It’s a complex thing not just regarding what is required but also how people are trained and how rules are enforced.”

Expanded Hours, More Products at P’ville Farmers Market

Along with spring flowers and warmer temperatures, April means the Pleasantville Farmers Market is back to its normal hours and a full vendor roster after a long, cold winter.

“Spring is an exciting season for growers and markets. It’ll be good to get back to sunny days in the market,” said Executive Director of Market Operations Steven Bates.

But first I want to thank our loyal customers for sticking with us through the winter months. We were gratified to see the enthusiastic response to our online ordering system, Pleasantville Farmers Market Online (PFM-O), and it was encouraging to see a strong turnout every week. I know how much our producers value the support, especially in a pandemic year.”

On Apr. 3, the market returns to 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. with its familiar summer layout.

The market will be welcoming four new vendors. Starting in April, Melissa’s Health Hub will be in weekly with delicious fresh juices made from regionally sourced produce, and Merchant’s Daughter will visit monthly to offer their premium hard ciders. Dobler Farms, a Long Island family farm, will come aboard in May.

“Wildcraft grows rare and heirloom varieties of grains and mills them fresh every week,” said Peter Rogovin, president of Foodchester, Inc., which runs the market.

“There are very few farmers doing this in New York State, and we’re proud to have them joining us, especially as more people are trying to raise their baking game these days.”

All winter vendors will continue, and many familiar ones will return from last year: Buddapesto (handmade pesto); Little Seed Gardens (organic produce); Head & Heal (certified organic CBD products); North Winds Lavender Farm (lavender products); Orwasher’s Bakery (European-style breads); SallyeAnder (handcrafted soaps); Simply Planted (flowers); and Wright’s Farm (jams and pies). Harper Keelin Knife & Tool Sharpening will be in on May 1 and 8.

Pleasantville Farmers Market remains committed to the health and safety of the entire community.

“We carefully limit the number of people in the marketplace,” Bates said. “And we encourage customers to move in and out of the market quickly by offering two modes of shopping – online preordering via PFM-O from Tuesday through Thursday each week, and well-designed lines and streamlined checkout processes for walk-up customers.”

Mask wearing and social distancing will be strictly enforced.

The Town of Mount Pleasant and members of the American Legion Post 112 in Hawthorne held a ceremony last Thursday afternoon for the nation’s 3,507 recipients of the Medal of Honor since the military decoration was signed into law by President Abraham Lincoln on Mar. 25, 1863. Since then, the President may award the Medal of Honor to those in the Army who have distinguished themselves through acts of valor. The date Mar. 25 was chosen to celebrate the men who participated in the Great Locomotive Chase during the Civil War. During the ceremony, Mount Pleasant officials and Legion members raised a Medal of Honor flag onto the flagpole in the traffic circle in front of Town Hall to commemorate the day.

A Plea to Dog Owners: Please Finish the Job With Your SOS

By Rick Wolff

Because of the pandemic shutting down my local gym, I’ve been doing a good amount of walking on a daily basis in my neighborhood. It’s a quiet area, and I rarely see anything out of the ordinary. But one curious activity has caught my eye.

Well-meaning dog walkers do something I don’t understand. That is, when their pooch poops, the loving dog walker will instinctively pull a colorful blue, yellow or green plastic bag from their pocket. Once the dog has finished its business, the dog owner will bend down and delicately maneuver the dog manure into the plastic bag.

When the poop is sufficiently bagged, the dog owner then secures it and its contents with a simple knot.

It all seems pretty straightforward, courteous, civilized and fairly sanitary. After all, what could be moreneighborly than to curb your dog, and then to be kind enough to remove their fecal waste in a handy bag, then take it home to dispose of the waste in a discreet, proper and safe manner?

Except I have noticed on more than a few of these colorful “Sacks of ----” are simply left in the street or, in some cases, casually abandoned on people’s front yards. Even more alarming is that all of these waste bags were deposited by the very same individual who had walked their dog and who then took the time to carefully place their dog’s poop in a disposable bag.

And so, instead of these kindly folks finishing the job of taking their dog-doo homes with them, they suddenly come to the sudden conclusion that this wasn’t a good idea. As a result, they then just ditch the bag of dog poop on the road or into somebody’s yard.

Mind you, we all know from our middle school earth science classes that it takes years and years for a plastic bag to gradually decompose and to be absorbed into our ecosystem. In contrast, in my own observational experience, a healthy dog dump – if left on its own in the wild and unbagged – will break down and decompose in a matter of a few days (and even shorter if a significant rainstorm washes it away). When you get down to it, to speak, dog-doo, while certainly not good to step in, dissolves and goes away rather quickly.

And please. Don’t be misled by the advertising on the colorful bags that they are “good for the environment” because they are “biodegradable.” A little online research reveals that it routinely takes several years for these “earth-friendly” bags to decompose.

In the interim, all I see dotted all over my neighborhood are green or blue or yellow bags which are still quite obvious for all to see – and most of these poop bags were left out on the streets last fall. In short, they made it through all the ice and snow of this past harsh winter, and these bags show very little sign of biodegrading and disappearing from the landscape anytime soon.

So, what am I missing here? If we agree that leaving a full SOS in the street, or in somebody’s yard, is not healthy for anyone or for the environment, why would you even make the effort in the first place of putting your dog’s excrement in a bag?

My sense is if you can train your dog to poop outside your home, then I’m also guessing you can probably train yourself to carry your SOS back home with you.

I urge you. If you feel compelled to pick up and place your dog’s fecal matter in a colorful satchel, please just carry your bag containing your dog’s dump back to your house and dispose of it there. Finish the job. Just leaving the bag out on the street is only getting half the job done.

Rick Wolff is a longtime Westchester resident.

Letters to the Editor

Slowly Returning to Normal Still Requires Diligence From Everyone

I continue to be excited as it relates to the reopening of our community, and looking into the not-too-distant future I can see a return to normalcy as we knew it prior to this dreadful pandemic that took so many of our loved ones and caused such disruption in everyone’s daily lives.

As such I wanted to share recent guidance from the Town of Cortlandt on specific guidelines that have changed.

Residential gathering guidelines have also changed. As of Mar. 22, outdoor gatherings are still restricted to 10 people, but outdoor gatherings have gone up to 25 people for social gatherings, like events and parties. As such I wanted to share a host of other types of businesses. On Apr. 9, outdoor amusement parks will return at 33 percent capacity.

To that end, there is also a new initiative called the New York Forward Rapid Test Program. Through a public-private partnership, it is intended to facilitate rapid testing “to support enhanced economic activity” for events and venues. How this will work is unclear and I look forward to further guidance.

Diversity is Welcome in Cortlandt, and Should be Everywhere Else

The Town of Cortlandt is diverse and we are proud of this fact. We are inclusive and everyone is important in our community. Everyone contributes, adds to the whole and we welcome all individuals and groups.

We do not tolerate any form of prejudice, bigotry nor bullying. We are also pleased that over this 30-year administration all groups have been represented in our workforce, on our committees, councils and planning and zoning boards as well. We welcome all heritages, ethnicities, cultures, races, generations and religions.

Let’s continue our efforts of embracing each other, learning from one another, loving each other and teaching our children and grandchildren the importance of these important practices. One of the most important reasons I’ve loved being town supervisor is that we all live in peace and harmony in our Cortlandt community.

Everyone is important. Everyone deserves respect and they receive it in our wonderful community.

The Evolution of the Dining Room Through the Ages

In my current home, as well as the one before that, I have enjoyed having large dining rooms. But in my first apartment in Manhattan, I had only a small eating area off the kitchen. I had purchased for $35 in the bargain basement of Macy’s (the price of which should give you some idea of how long ago I moved to New York).

That small dining accommodation saw a lot more action than my current commodious space due to the COVID-19 pandemic. I can’t remember the last time my family or friends have gathered around our large glass top dining table which comfortably accommodates six to eight people. My wife would remember, but I don’t. That’s just one of the ways men and women differ.

What were the origins of today’s formal dining room? In centuries past, dining rooms were something of a novelty. Only the wealthy had them.

The Greeks were among the first to recognize that eating in secluded comfort reinforced status and class distinction. Elite men – and not women – gathered in rooms especially designed for feasting. These rooms accommodated couches of stone or wood, each of which accommodated one or two men. Youths sat on the ground.

Ancient Romans similarly ate their meals in a special room called a triclinium, where couches had evolved to accommodate women as well as men. The Romans sometimes set up their dining rooms outdoors in order to enjoy delicacies al fresco. Triclinia in Pompeii featured fountains from which water splashed and streamed from each table.

Such vivid appointments obscured a reality that was very dark. A well-to-do Roman household could include as many as 400 slaves, who did everything from choosing menus to arranging and presenting parting gifts to guests. The slightest faux pas invited brutal punishment. If, writes historian Roy Strong, “game was underdone or the fish poorly seasoned, the cook (who actually ranked fairly high in the slave hierarchy) would be stripped and beaten.”

Strong relates an instance during a dinner given by a friend of the Emperor Augustus. A cupbearer broke a crystal goblet. For this offense he had his hands cut off and hung from the fish pond as food for lampreys. Quite severe, considering that today we would just leave a bad tip.

Eventually, the nobility began to favor more intimate gatherings in parlors off the main hall. This type of dining allowed greater comfort to the diners and was well-suited to the political intrigue of the times. As time went by, the dining room evolved along with the dining room table, and it was increasingly located farther from the Great Hall. Eventually, the Great Hall was reserved for special occasions.

In the Middle Ages, dining room tables were portable and long, made to seat everyone in the castle. Dining was done in the Great Hall, a large, multifunctional room that could accommodate the entire population of the castle. The family sat at the main table on a raised dias and the rest of the household was seated in order of rank. The dining room furniture consisted of long trestle tables with benches.

It’s hard to imagine a time when a dining room table wasn’t the focal point of the dining room. But throughout much of history, people dined on small tables or stone platforms rather than large dining room tables. Tables were used for writing and playing games, not for dining.

It wasn’t until the 16th century that dining room tables really became popular. The word itself is derived from the Latin tabula, which means plank, board or flat piece. Although many types of tables had been around since ancient times, they were not the dining room tables we know today.

In most homes you’ll find the dining room far from each other, on a different floor and sometimes even in a different building.

When I worked in Colonial Williamsburg (as a waiter at the King’s Arms Tavern), I found that kitchens were normally in a separate building from dining space, and the same is true with historic preservation sites we enjoy in the Hudson Valley. This makes sense, as kitchens tended to get extremely hot and were sometimes the cause of house fires.

Lighthouse Youth Theatre Ready to Relocate to Mount Kisco

By Martin Wilbur

Lighthouse Youth Theatre, one of Westchester’s preeminent creative programs for children, will be relocating from its Armonk studio to the Saw Mill Club in Mount Kisco this week.

John Fanelli, Lighthouse’s founder and artistic director, said as the year-long pandemic-induced closure dragged on, it became imperative to find an alternate arrangement rather than to try and hold on to the 6,300-square-foot Standing Ovation Studio. The program had operated out of the studio at 1 Labriola Court in Armonk for just over nine years.

“I just couldn’t support the types of losses over that period of time,” Fanelli explained. “A couple of months, maybe even six months, but a year is too much.”

He said over the winter he began inquiring about sharing any available space with another theater, dance or music company, martial arts operations and gyms and health clubs to cut expenses. Fanelli had been rebuffed numerous times when he approached the Saw Mill Club, which welcomed them to their facility.

The move into the space at the site of the original club at 77 Kensico Drive is expected to be finished by Thursday, with programs ready to resume next week after the spring recess, he said. They will also hold classes at Saw Mill East at 333 N. Bedford Rd. one day a week.

“They were really happy to have us and they operate the family type of business that we’re running,” Fanelli said of the Saw Mill Club.

Saw Mill will be Lighthouse’s fifth home since Fanelli founded the youth theater program in 2006. It originally operated out of Westchester Broadway Theatre, before moving to Memorial Plaza in Pleasantville and then to Thornwood before settling in Armonk.

It still has its arrangement with the Chappaqua Performing Arts Center and that will continue, Fanelli said.

Lighthouse will also be partnering with The Studio School of Dance and its owner and operator, Vanessa Gutierrez, not only to share instructional and rehearsal space at the health club but to provide youngsters from both programs the opportunity to cross over into dance or theater.

“Everything happens for a reason, and I get to team up with a great dance studio, called The Studio, so now my kids, the theater kids, will have a dance studio in house, and her kids, who are dance kids, will have a theater studio in house, so it makes for a full and local performing arts school under one roof at the Saw Mill Club,” Fanelli said.

Last week, Fanelli was emptying out the Standing Ovation Studios, conducting a sale of sets, ballet bars, equipment and his sprung professional dance floor. The departure from Armonk is bittersweet, but despite the disappointment of leaving a facility that Fanelli spent years cultivating, he looks forward to his company’s next chapter.

“It was literally a dream realized, this type of a studio, and to have this type of a facility for my operation, was something I worked on for 25 years,” he said.

The goal of Lighthouse Youth Theatre has always been to provide a creative outlet for kids and the self-confidence for them to perform with their peers.

“It’s not about making Broadway stars – and we have – it’s about people and it’s about kids having a place to come and express themselves,” Fanelli said. “It’s more necessary now than it’s ever been because these kids have been cooped up for a year and they haven’t had a chance to be around people and to express themselves.”
State Reps Seek to Infuse Non-Profit With $1M to Restart the Arts

By Martin Wilbur

A group of area state lawmakers pledged last week to provide ArtsWestchester with $1 million in COVID-19 recovery funds to reinvigorate the arts as society steadily reopens from the pandemic.

Legislators said the decision to boost local artists and arts venues, including 12 independent or small theaters that show movies, concerts or live stage productions along with historical sites and museums, is not only wise culturally but a smart economic move as well.

“Who wouldn’t give their right arm to sit in a theater tomorrow, to hear a poet, to hear a musician, to go to an exhibit to see paintings and sculpture and clay work and pottery,” said state Sen. Peter Harckham (D-Lewisboro). “We need to nurture the soul and we also need to stimulate the economy, and funding the arts is a way to start that.”

Harckham was one of five members of Westchester’s state legislative delegation to converge at ArtsWestchester’s White Plains office last Friday to voice their support for the ReStart the Arts initiative in Westchester and Rockland counties.

Janet Langsam, CEO of ArtsWestchester, the largest private nonprofit arts council in the state that promotes programs and advocates for artists, said a pre-COVID-19 study revealed that the arts directly employs more than 5,000 people in Westchester and brings $172 million of economic activity to the county. That includes impacts on ancillary businesses.

While money is needed to help sanitize and upgrade various facilities, it’s also recognizing the artists, Langsam said. It has been estimated that there is a 63 percent creative worker unemployment rate nationally because of the pandemic.

Those dire statistics seem to be consistent locally. A survey completed last year by ArtsWestchester found that 87 percent of responding arts groups were not faring well through the pandemic and about two-thirds of local artists were unemployed.

“So this is an important step,” she said. “We call it the creative economy and the fact of the matter is because we have 5 percent of our population employed in the sub-creative businesses, whether it’s photography or interior design, graphic design, we call it the creative economy, and it is Westchester that is one of the best places for people who are in these fields.”

Waddell Stillman, president and CEO of Historic Hudson Valley who also serves on the ArtsWestchester board, said it will take significant resources to get venues up and running again once they reopen.

Federal Paycheck Protection Program and Shuttered Venue Program funding helps address payroll, leases and utility costs but won’t revitalize the cultural sector programmatically. There are venues that will have to significantly revise their programming to be able to reopen, whether it’s because of ongoing social distancing and capacity issues or other factors.

“It’s an unusually good investment for the state of New York to value investing in the arts by investing in ArtsWestchester,” Stillman said. “They are superbly good at rebranding their affiliate organizations and artists who are ready, who are passionate, who are willing to get back to delivering the arts at a high level of quality in this community.”

Langsam said the arts also is outstanding at promoting racial equity. ArtsWestchester strives toward equality: using the arts as a vehicle to bring people together and to provide opportunities and resources in a fair and equitable manner.

“I can’t think of a better way to honor the traditions, the customs and backgrounds of our growing diverse populations and by bringing the arts to every corner of Westchester,” Langsam said.

The arts also give people enjoyment and a much-needed diversion from their daily lives, said Assemblywoman Amy Paulin (D-Scarsdale).

“It is critically important that we recognize that ArtsWestchester is so important to our communities and to individuals because of what it means to our everyday lives and what it means to get back to normalcy which we need to do after a year of this horrific pandemic,” she said.

Trattoria Vivolo Marks 20th Anniversary in Harrison

For nearly a generation, some of the most robust Italian regional flavors in our area have been emanating from a gleaming vintage diner across from the Harrison Metro-North station. Chef and owner Dean Vivolo of Trattoria Vivolo in Harrison is marking his 20th anniversary with a variety of tasty new specialties, dining options and enhanced al fresco. The 60-seat restaurant is housed in a gleaming diner with counter and booths in the front and an airy greenhouse in the rear. During warm weather, a newly-planted giant herb garden and shrubs flank a seasonal outdoor patio shaded by overhead umbrellas, decorative string lights and soft, soothing music creating a delightful atmosphere.

Al fresco dining will be expanded this year with a new outdoor bar and lounge area with sofas and firepits. It’s a perfect setting for socializing with friends and family. The entire restaurant has been refurbished, and in the evening the restaurant takes on a charming glow.

Vivolo, a graduate of the Culinary Institute of America (CIA), started his career training with his late father, Michael Vivolo, chef and proprietor of the former La Riserva Restaurant in Larchmont. Dean began busing tables and learning the ropes from his dad at age 14.

After his tenure at the CIA, Dean cooked at Il Montova Del Lago on the outskirts of Rome, under Chef Simone Cipriani. He also had an opportunity to work in the kitchens of the noted San Domenico in Manhattan under Chef Odette Fada and La Panetiere in Rye.

To kick off his anniversary season, Vivolo has premiered a new spring menu, updated the cocktail menus and wine list and expanded weekend hours. Customers are encouraged to lounge over a glass of wine or cup of espresso at the counter, share one of the tasty thin-crust pizzas in a booth or take after-dinner drinks.

To kick off his anniversary season, Vivolo has premiered a new spring menu, updated the cocktail menus and wine list and expanded weekend hours. Customers are encouraged to lounge over a glass of wine or cup of espresso at the counter, share one of the tasty thin-crust pizzas in a booth or take after-dinner drinks.

Save room for Vivolo’s desserts: There’s alfogoto (vanilla ice cream topped with double espresso); the Vivolissimo (vanilla ice cream, strawberries, cannoli cream, shaved dark chocolate, whipped cream and crushed biscotti); and Bomba Baci (chocolate ice cream, chopped hazelnuts, crumbled chocolate cookies, whipped cream, chocolate syrup, topped with hick kisses). A special Italian “digestive” amaro cart has been set up. Selections include 30 specialty after-dinner drinks.

Special Hint: While there, check out the black and white photos of Italy hanging throughout the restaurant. They were taken by the Vivolo family during visits to Dean’s paternal hometown of Accadia-Foggia in the Apulia region of Italy.

“Most importantly, Trattoria Vivolo would not be what it is today without the love and support of my amazing wife Odelya, three children, my mother, sister and late father,” Vivolo said.

Oddities of Orbits and Distance Can Help Connect Us to Our World

Back in the dark corners of your memory, behind the list of all the state capitals and the seven times table, you probably remember what you learned in grade school — about 93 million miles.

Like most things, the truth isn’t quite so simple.

In 1609, the German super-genius Johannes Kepler brought the world the first of his three laws of planetary motion. It says that the planets all travel in elliptical — not circular — orbits. This puts the sun off-center, and means that orbits are stretched out, and slightly egg-shaped.

I don’t much care for the terms, myself, but when you hear the words “supermoon” and “micromoon” from time to time, it’s an example of Kepler’s first law. Only, it’s the moon’s egg-shaped orbit, and Earth is what’s off to one side.

In a circular orbit, every point along the path is the same distance from the sun. Every day, the sun would be 93 million miles away. With an ellipse, from one moment to the next we’re a different distance away; some closer, some farther.

Earth’s aphelion, its most distant point, is about 94.5 million miles and happens in July. From there, we swing closer and closer until we reach our 91.5-million-mile perihelion in January. As Earth moves between those, there are two points where Earth is at that grade-school average distance: exactly 92.96 million miles away.

Astronomers call the average distance an astronomical unit (AU). It’s a handy way to measure distances to things that are, on the immense scale of the universe, nearby. It fits a nice gap between miles or kilometers, which are easy for measuring things about as far away as the moon or the solar system’s closest planets, and the distances to the farthest things from us.

Rather than saying Neptune is three billion miles away, we can say it’s 30 AU. It seems a little more manageable that way. On the other hand, we wouldn’t say the Andromeda Galaxy, the nearest big galaxy to our own, is 158,102,690,000 AU away. We don’t even bother with miles for things that far.

If you’re a fan of orbital geometry, this week’s for you. On Saturday, Apr. 3, we reach that magical 1-AU point. Then, through the summer, and clear out until October’s 1-AU day, you can say the distance from Earth to the sun is farther than the distance from the Earth to the sun. Trust me, no one will look at you funny.

It probably seems like just a trivial peculiarity, but maybe not. It’s fun to try to imagine all this as if you’re watching from some incredible distance away. Maybe you can think of all the planets looping around the sun, with their moons swirling around them, too.

As you pull your imagination out even farther, you can see our solar system traveling around the center of the Milky Way galaxy, making a complete orbit every 230 million years.

Things like these don’t directly affect our lives, but the way they can connect us to the world around us is incredible. I hope you have happy holidays, and your skies are clear tonight.

The Greater Influence on Our Palates: Taste or Smell?

By Nick Antonaccio

In previous columns, I’ve focused on the marvels of the human senses and their influence on our perception of wine.

It seems science has undertaken numerous studies to codify and standardize how we interface with wine. Of our five senses, recent scientific efforts have been focusing primarily on our senses of taste and smell. These studies attempt to explain in objective, finite terms how our physiology and, in certain instances, our psychology, play a role in enhancing our innate enjoyment of wines.

There have been studies of our sense of taste, isolating subregions of our cerebral cortex that imprint, and therefore, define the sensations of our taste buds. The taste senses of bitter, sweet, sour, salty and umami occupy specific regions of the olfactory sensors in our mouth and the membrane lining in our mouth.

For example, science has isolated the sense of sweetness to the tip of our tongue, of sourness to the rear. Understanding this process enables wine tasters to enhance their appreciation of wine.

However, therein lies the rub. There are insufficient descriptive terms to specifically identify and describe each of these aromas.

Here’s an experiment you can try at home to better understand the dominance of smell over taste. We all have tried one or more flavors of those gourmet jellybeans, the ones with laboratory-developed flavors such as buttered popcorn, pina colada and chili mango. The tastes are amazingly accurate. But are we experiencing taste or smell?

Hold your nose and then pop a jellybean in your mouth. What happens? Your sense of taste detects sweetness in your mouth, but no flavor. Release the grip on your nose. Bam, the vibrant essence of the jellybean flavor floods your brain’s olfactory sensors. So it is with wine. Taste provides the broad backdrop for your palate; aromas determine the core impressions in your perception of the wine.

The science of the role of taste and smell is most evident when we engage in the most basic of dining rituals — pairing food and wine.

The ritual begins with a sip of the wine to trigger specific elements of the wine in our mouth. The second level is tasting the food. The combination of compatible tastes and aromas is critical to the enjoyment of a meal. There is certainly an art, or at least a learned trait, in creating a new sensory state when we are at the table.

The ritual begins with a sip of the wine to be paired with a food. Our sensory receptors trigger specific elements of the wine in our mouth. The second level is tasting the food. A new set of tastes and aromas now coats our tongue and mouth, and penetrates our olfactory receptors. Our brain now has memorized two sets of distinct profiles.

After the bite of food, we sip the wine again. In the test laboratory of our mouth, we now create a third, unique taste and aroma profile. Here is where the greatest dining pleasure blossoms. A new experience is created on our palate, with a set of variables that may never be duplicated again.

Life is a series of experiments and outcomes. From each of them we learn and build the foundation of our interactive lives. With food and wine experiments, we bring to the table hundreds, perhaps thousands, of individual sensory experiences each time we drink and dine. Our learned sensory instincts hopefully guide us to an enjoyable outcome; science increasingly explains how we got there.

Indian Point will shut down by April 2021, and federal law allows for up to 60 years for it to be dismantled and removed.

But we don’t have to wait that long.

There’s a smarter plan for Indian Point currently under review. It calls for major work to be completed in just 12-15 years.

The plan will provide hundreds of local jobs. It means opportunity for redevelopment of the land decades sooner. And it results in predictable tax revenue for local schools and governments.

Indian Point will close soon after operating for nearly 60 years. We don’t have to wait another 60 years for it to be dismantled.

For United It’s Business.
For Us It’s Personal.

For nearly 130 years you have entrusted your care to us. Our doctors deliver your babies, mend your broken bones, treat your cancer, get you back on your feet after surgery, and keep your heart beating.

Our only mission is to care for you. As such, we care about you, because over the years and for many generations, we’ve built relationships with you and your family.

Unfortunately UnitedHealthcare is jeopardizing these relationships and making it financially difficult for our patients to see the doctors they trust. On January 1, 2021, UnitedHealthcare dropped the Montefiore Health System, including White Plains Hospital, White Plains Hospital Physician Associates and Scarsdale Medical Group, from its network.

As your hospital and your physicians, we want nothing more than to come to an agreement with UnitedHealthcare and are confident that we have done everything in our power to negotiate in good faith with them. On February 11, however, UnitedHealthcare rejected our proposal which would have immediately restored in-network access to our patients. While United has been unwilling to reach an agreement, we have been able to successfully renegotiate new, long-term contracts with the three other major insurers in Westchester: Aetna, Empire BlueCross BlueShield and Cigna.

As a community member and past, current or potential patient, you have every right to be frustrated. We are frustrated too. It devastates us to say that, at this moment, the only way for UnitedHealthcare customers like you to guarantee in-network access to White Plains Hospital and the doctors you trust is to switch to a different insurance provider. While your choice of coverage may be up to your employer, you do have options. Remember, you will always have in-network access to our Emergency Department in case of emergencies. For us, your health is our only business.
During times of crisis, crucial information about your community comes from local reporters.

Access to high quality information is essential. Especially local information. And especially now. What’s happening in our communities? What’s the impact? How are our local leaders responding? For answers to these questions, we rely on the hard work of our local reporters. As a result, readership of local news outlets has reached record highs.

But due to COVID-19, most local news publications are losing money, fast. Advertising has plummeted during the crisis and readers aren’t subscribing fast enough to fill the void. This has led to thousands of local reporters being laid off. Just as our society faces numerous, urgent challenges.

Millions of people are in danger of losing access to the authoritative local information they need to stay informed. That’s why the Local Media Association and the Local Media Consortium are working with local news providers to build a strong future for local journalism. And that’s why our long-time partner Google is purchasing ads like this in local publications across the country, as well as providing a Relief Fund to help struggling local news outlets. But those actions alone aren’t enough.

Please consider supporting the local news organizations you rely on. Subscribe to them. Donate to them. And if you have a business that’s able to, advertise with them. Your support is critical to sustaining the dedicated journalists serving your communities.
