Police Probe Possible Bias Crime with Black Lives Matter Sign

By Rick Pezzullo

The Greenburgh Police Department is actively investigating the criminal mischief of a newly installed Black Lives Matter sign in the area of 1150 Knollwood Road.

Police reported during the overnight hours of May 13, the sign reading “All Lives Can’t Matter Until Black Lives Matter” was uprooted from the ground, just hours after it was affixed to the “Welcome to Greenburgh” sign.

Police have labeled the incident a possible bias/hate incident and are working with the Westchester County District Attorney’s Office to identify who was responsible for the crime.

“The Town of Greenburgh and this department strongly condemns all acts of hate and bias,” Police Chief Chris McNerney stated. “We have a history of promoting diversity, unity and inclusion.”

The Greenburgh Human Rights group also condemned the act, stating “Who are we? We all need to show our support for our black neighbors! Now and forever! All lives won’t matter until Black Lives Matter!”

State Senate Majority Leader Andrea Stewart-Cousins also weighed in on the incident.

“The reality is racism still exists. This incident though does not reflect our community,” she stated. “I have gone to Black Lives Matter rallies in my district and seen people I never thought embrace this rallying cry. I saw residents of different races and backgrounds come together and say Black Lives Matter, and that gives me hope. I will continue to address police and criminal justice reforms and denounce such intolerant acts.”

The newly fixed signs are just the first part of a multi-tiered project the Greenburgh Town Board has undertaken to support the Black Lives Matter movement. The placards, which will be placed under various “Welcome to Greenburgh” signs, is the first phase of the project.

The second phase is a banner project. The idea is to have five different banners hung on five designated buildings throughout the town, with students from local school districts creating the posters. The Arts and Culture Committee will also sponsor an essay contest for the students to participate in while they create the banners.

The essay will have students answer a specific question relating to the Black Lives Matter movement. Officials said the current options is to have the students explain the meaning behind why society uses the phrase Black Lives Matter.

The last phase of the project is a mural that would feature on both sides of the overpass where I-287 stretches over Manhattan Avenue. The mural will illustrate Black history from 1619 to today, with the mural also highlighting Greenburgh residents and their contributions to the community.

White Plains Hospital Again Receives Highest Safety Grade

By Rick Pezzullo

White Plains Hospital has once again earned the highest safety rating from the healthcare watchdog The Leapfrog Group.

It is the fifth consecutive time White Plains Hospital has received the designation for its achievements in protecting patients from errors, injuries, accidents and infections. In addition, White Plains Hospital is the only healthcare facility in Westchester to receive the top rating.

“An ‘A’ safety grade is an elite designation that your community should be proud of,” said Leah Binder, president and CEO of The Leapfrog Group. “The past year has been extraordinarily difficult for hospitals, but White Plains Hospital shows us it is possible to keep a laser focus on patients and their safety, no matter what it takes.”

The Leapfrog Hospital Safety Grade is the only hospital rating focused exclusively on hospital safety. Developed under the guidance of a national expert panel, the Leapfrog Safety Grade uses as many as 27 measures of hospital safety data to assign grades to more than 2,700 U.S. acute-care hospitals twice a year.

White Plains Hospital is one of 906 hospitals in the U.S., and one of only 16 hospitals in New York, to earn an “A” rating. “Patient safety is always our top priority and it is gratifying when the hard work and efforts our staff are recognized on a national level,” said Dr. Rafael E. Torres, Chief Quality Officer at White Plains Hospital. “It is an honor to be consistently recognized by the Leapfrog Group as a top hospital in the region and is a testament to our commitment to providing the highest quality of care to our community.”

South County Trailway Construction Underway

Westchester County Executive George Latimer (right) gave an update last week on the restoration of the South County Trailway, which covers approximately six miles, stretching from Barney Street in Yonkers to Route 119 in Elmsford. The scope of work includes the restoration of the drainage system, which will keep the trailway dry, and the reconstruction of the asphalt, which will allow for a smoother ride. Construction is expected to be completed by next spring.

“We are thrilled to be in the final phase of this project,” Latimer said.

Statewide Abstract to Host Third St. Jude Scramble Charity Golf Outing

Statewide Abstract Corporation was forced to postpone its 2020 charity golf outing due to COVID restrictions but has rescheduled the St. Jude Scramble Charity Golf Outing for Monday, June 21 at the Westchester Hills Golf Club in White Plains. All activities, including meals and a silent auction, will take place outdoors; rain date will be Tuesday, June 22.

“Since our first event in 2018, we have raised more than $130,000 for St. Jude Children’s Research Hospital and are looking forward to raising an additional $60,000 this year,” said Ken Meccia, President of Statewide Abstract. “St. Jude is a wonderful organization that has done so much for so many children and their families. All money raised will be donated to support their ongoing mission of never charging families of sick children for treatment, travel, housing, or food. We are excited to do our part to support their efforts,” Meccia says, noting that individuals who cannot attend the event but wish to support St. Jude with a donation can visit https://www.stjudescramble.org or call 914-683-5900.

The scramble format outing will start at 9:30 am with breakfast and registration. Shotgun play will begin at 11:30 am. Attendees will be treated to lunch, snacks and beverages, followed by the 18 holes of golf. Cocktails and hors d’oeuvres will be served at 4 pm followed by a dinner party and silent auction. Prizes will be awarded for longest drive, closest to pin, hit the pro and a putting competition. The cost for the event including golf is $325 per person. Those who just want to attend the dinner can do so for $100 per person. A range of event sponsorship opportunities are available. For more information, please visit: https://www.stjudescramble.org/

Major sponsors for this year’s event include: First American Title Insurance, PFK O’Comor Davies LLP, Elissa Grayer Design, Brett Lando, Esq., Cross Country Mortgage by Shawn Conley, Dean Masonry Supply, Stewart Title Insurance and DataTrace.

White Plains Memorial Day Ceremony Slated at Delfino Park

White Plains Mayor Tom Roach, in cooperation with the Mayor’s Veterans Committee, has announced plans for the city’s annual Memorial Day Commemoration.

This year’s deceased honorees are Malcolm Baehr and Jack Collins. Both served on the Mayor’s Veterans Committee for many years. They were incredibly proud of their time served in the armed forces and dedicated themselves to honoring all veterans respectfully in our community.

Although it remains a challenge to safely host a parade, as has been the tradition in White Plains, the Veterans Committee has decided to host a Commemoration ceremony at Delfino Park, 104 Lake Street, on Memorial Day, Monday, May 31st at 11 a.m. At this location everyone can socially distance and be outdoors while honoring our veterans. Ebersole Ice Rink, which is a covered outdoor area at Delfino Park, will be utilized in case of inclement weather.

“Memorial Day remains as relevant today as when it was first enacted in memory of the soldiers who fought in the Civil War. Great sacrifices are made every day by the men and women of the U.S. Armed Services,” Roach said. “Their sacrifices remind us anew to be grateful for all that we have as a community and a country.”

The city will also remember the 12,000 recorded deaths of veterans from COVID-19.

White Plains Hospital Again Receives Highest Safety Grade

White Plains Hospital has received its highest safety grade for 2020, earned by few facilities across the state. The designation is based on the achievement of a perfect score on the Accreditation Commission for Healthcare Facilities Accreditation (ACHC) survey of the hospital’s Flanzer Emergency Department.

The ACHC survey is conducted every three years by independent surveyors. During this year’s survey, conducted on April 17, White Plains Hospital received a perfect score, the highest grade possible.

The surveyors noted that White Plains Hospital’s Flanzer Emergency Department ‘stands out as a model’ for how to provide high quality emergency care. The surveyors also noted that the hospital’s emergency department is a force multiplier for community health and safety, serving as a medical home for many of the county’s most vulnerable residents.

Petition for New Sidewalk in Greenburgh Gains Traction

An online petition calling on New York State to appropriate funds for a new sidewalk on West Hartsdale Avenue from Central Avenue to Secor Road in Greenburgh has drawn more than 1,000 signatures in less than two weeks.

The petition states many residents, including school-aged children, walk in the shoulder of the roadway daily, creating unsafe conditions.

“It would be a big boost for the local economy and for public safety since W. Hartsdale Ave is so dangerous to walk on or cycle on,” Greenburgh Supervisor Paul Feiner stated.

Feiner said he plans to share the petition with state lawmakers and organize a site visit in the near future to point out the dire need for the public improvements.

Police Probe Possible Bias Crime with Black Lives Matter Sign

Arkansas state police are investigating a possible bias crime involving the vandalism of a Black Lives Matter mural in Greenburgh.

The mural, located on the side of a convenience store at the intersection of Central and Parkways, was defaced on Wednesday evening.

Greenburgh Supervisor Paul Feiner said the mural was unfinished and that the defacement was done deliberately.

“This is a troubling event for the community, and I applaud the police for their swift action in investigating the case,” Feiner said. "We will work closely with the police to ensure justice is served and to make sure this type of behavior does not happen again.”

Further investigation revealed that the defacement of the mural was done by a single person, who was not affiliated with any known hate groups.

The investigation is ongoing and additional information will be released as it becomes available.

State to Follow CDC AllowingFully Vaccinated to Ditch Masks

By Martin Wilbur

New York State will adopt the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recent guidelines where fully vaccinated individuals will be able to shed their masks in most situations starting Wednesday.

Gov. Andrew Cuomo announced the change on Monday as the infection rate, hospitalizations and deaths from COVID-19 continue to drop. As of Sunday, the statewide infection rate was 1.26 percent, and 1.11 percent on a seven-day rolling average. Hospitalizations fell to 1,581 statewide, the lowest since Nov. 9.

The numbers were even more encouraging closer to home. The seven-county Mid-Hudson region, which includes Westchester and Putnam, clocked in with a 1.22 percent positivity rate on Sunday and stood at exactly 1 percent on the seven-day average. New York City and Long Island were at 0.91 and 0.98 percent, respectively, on the seven-day average through Sunday.

It also came a day after a group of county executives from downstate and the Hudson Valley urged the governor to follow and open up society as much as possible.

“New Yorkers have made great progress, all the arrows are now pointed in the right direction, so let’s get back to life,” Cuomo said.

Starting Wednesday, the mask mandate that was enacted in April 2020 will be lifted for all fully vaccinated people except for public transportation, nursing homes and health care facilities, schools, homeless shelters and prisons. The CDC guidance stated that vaccinated people may take off their masks outdoors.

Cuomo stressed that individual businesses and organizations are free to follow the new guidance or continue with more stringent rules depending on their situation.

The lifting of the mask requirement this week coincides with the continued easing of other restrictions of venues and businesses throughout the tristate area, which includes New Jersey and Connecticut, that had been announced shortly after the start of the month. As of Monday, the outdoor food and beverage curfew was lifted with the indoor curfew expiring at the end of the month.

Also, on Wednesday, capacity limits for restaurants, museums, retail and offices will sunset.

Already enacted were outdoor capacity limits of 500 people, indoor limits of 250 people and residential gatherings can have up to 50 people. The New York City subway system has been operating around-the-clock for several weeks.

The return to normalcy is also ongoing with some entertainment and sports venue.

Cuomo said the New York City Marathon, which was canceled last year, will return on Sunday, Nov. 7 for its 50th running with up to 33,000 runners, or 60 percent of capacity. He said that restriction can change as the event draws closer.

The Tribeca Film Festival will also return next month with functions in all five boroughs, including the opening night screening of “In the Heights” on the new Piers 76 public space on the Hudson River in Manhattan on June 9.

Radio City Music Hall will reopen on June 19, by hosting the closing night of the festival with a red-carpet event. That evening, the 5,500-seat auditorium will open to 100 percent capacity but only for fully vaccinated people, Cuomo said.

Cuomo said that society will continue to open throughout the spring and summer and the best way to take advantage of what the state has to offer will be to get vaccinated.

“Yes, there are health reasons, but we’re opening up with more opportunities to vaccinated people,” he said. “So it’s another reason to get vaccinated.”

Ticket-buying opportunities also will favor the fully vaccinated for Knicks, Nets and Islanders home playoff games that will begin being at the teams’ arenas later this week. At least 50 percent of the seating will be available for the vaccinated, but there are no restrictions in those areas. There will be sections for unvaccinated people, but for those sitting in those areas they must still maintain six feet of social distancing and wear masks, which reduces the chances of getting tickets, Cuomo said.

“The whole point of the CDC’s change, the whole point of our change is to say to people there are benefits to getting vaccinated,” Cuomo said.

This summer, county fairs across the state may open with the local health departments overseeing the operations unless a venue asks to have more than 5,000 people in attendance. In that event, the operator must receive state Department of Health clearance.

The MTA will continue its campaign to vaccinate commuters at key transportation hubs on the Metro-North, Long Island Rail Road and New York City subways through Saturday. Vaccinations will be available at Grand Central Station and at 125th Street in Harlem from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Last week, 5,701 vaccines were administered at the MTA sites.

With Mask Mandate to Be Lifted, Full Attention Focused on Vaccines

By Martin Wilbur

County Executive George Latimer said Monday that he supported Gov. Andrew Cuomo’s decision to follow the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention’s new (CDC) guidelines from last week as COVID-19 infections, hospitalizations and deaths continue to plummet.

When the CDC announced that fully vaccinated people can go without masks outside and only need to wear them in limited types of indoor venues, there had been some confusion as well as clamoring to follow the new directive.

“I think we’re ready to move to the next step of normalcy,” Latimer said.

Much of the continued movement to more normal activities is distribution of one of the COVID-19 vaccines. In Westchester, through last Thursday, 47 percent of the population, or 456,665 people, have been fully vaccinated, and 542,612 (56.1 percent) have received the first dose of either the Moderna or Pfizer vaccines. That represents 69.5 percent of the county’s population who are at least 18 years old.

On Sunday, six county executives – Ed Day (Rockland), MaryEllen Odell (Putnam), Marc Molinaro (Dutchess), Steven Neuhaus (Orange), Steve Bellone (Suffolk) and Pat Ryan (Ulster) – released a joint statement urging Cuomo to allow fully vaccinated residents to return to normalcy and discard masks and the need for social distancing outdoors and in most indoor settings.

“As we continue to see active cases, hospitalizations and deaths steadily dropping day by day and more people receiving vaccinations, the governor should implement the CDC’s common-sense guidance,” their joint statement read. “We also encourage residents who have not been vaccinated to make that a priority so efforts to stop the spread of COVID-19 can be successful.”

In Putnam County, the overall vaccination rate for those at least 16 years old was 61.5 percent.

On Monday Cuomo relented, saying the state would follow the CDC guidelines starting on Wednesday, although the public must continue to wear masks on public transportation, in health care facilities and nursing homes, jails and schools.

Cuomo said the state will continue to stress the need for people to get vaccinated as the rate of vaccinations has slowed. Statewide, there have been more than 17.6 million doses administered with nearly 10 million people having received at least one dose, which represents 61.8 percent of New York’s 18-and-over population, he said. More than 8.3 million state residents 18 and up have been fully vaccinated, which is 52.2 percent.

“The numbers on the vaccinations are the only numbers that is not doing as well as the others,” Cuomo said.

Latimer said it’s likely that Westchester will have to deal with how to handle the unvaccinated members of the population at county venues such as the parks, beaches and Playland in the weeks ahead.

“If you’re not vaccinated you are still subject to the disease and you’re still subject to getting the disease and transferring it to other people,” Latimer said.

The next challenge is to get as many 12- to 15-year-olds as possible vaccinated. Last week, the Food and Drug Administration announced that the Pfizer vaccine was safe for that age group to take. Those under 18 years old can only take the Pfizer shot since Moderna’s vaccine and the one-shot Johnson & Johnson have not been approved for anyone under that age threshold.

The County Center in White Plains is administering the Pfizer vaccine to those as young as 12 years old, although anyone under 18 must have permission from a parent or guardian.

Last week, Pelham and Westlake high schools partnered with neighboring districts to administer doses to the students at least 16 years old and staff members. This Thursday from 2 to 6:30 p.m., the Bedford School District will partner with Katonah-Lewisboro to make vaccines available at Fox Lane High School.

Meanwhile, vaccinations for the homebound population of any age who are eligible for the vaccine may call the county Department of Health at 914-813-6390 to call for an appointment where it will be administered at their home, said Deputy County Executive Ken Jenkins.

The good news for the county is the continued reduction in active cases and COVID-19 hospitalizations and deaths. The active caseload has dipped below 1,000 – to 922 through Sunday, Latimer said. Hospitalizations have fallen to 63, and there were four fatalities over the past week.

“It is a very good sign that all of these numbers that I told you, if they continue to decrease the way they seem to, if the vaccinations continue to increase, we’ll hopefully see the end of this pandemic,” Latimer said.

Mike Newman has officially been appointed as Pleasantville’s new superintendent of Parks and Recreation, filling the vacancy created last month by the departure of Matt Trainor.

Newman has worked for the department for the last eight years as recreation supervisor. Last week, the Village Board approved Newman to fill the department’s top position after Trainor resigned last month to return to the Town of North Castle.

“All of us were involved in the interview process and arrived at the decision to appoint Mike,” said Mayor Peter Scherer after the board unanimously approved Newman’s promotion.

Newman grew up in Somers and majored in kinesthesiology and physical education in college. He was a permanent substitute teacher at John Jay High School at Cross River for five years where he also taught physical education classes and various academic classes while coaching baseball.

Newman, who lives in Carmel with his wife, Marisa, and one-year old daughter Madeline, said he is ready for the task of running Pleasantville’s summer schedules for the pool and summer camp.

“It’s going to be challenging with rules and regulations changing with things like wearing masks and social distancing,” Newman said. “We’re doing everything as cautiously as we can.”

His appointment for the $105,000-a-year post was effective Monday. He is subject to a minimum 12-week probationary period, which can be extended up to 52 weeks.

“We are very excited to have Mike leading the department,” said Village Trustee Paul Alvarez.

“It’s the happiest news when someone like Mike joins us and grows in the job, and then when an opportunity arises, is there to fulfill it,” Scherer added.

Mike Newman was appointed last week to become Pleasantville’s new Parks & Recreation superintendent.
Mt. Kisco Planning Board to Be Lead Agency for Main St. Apartment Project

By Martin Wilbur

The Mount Kisco Planning Board last week declared its intent to be lead agency in its review of a 16-unit apartment building at 134 Main St. proposed by property owner and former village trustee Isi Albanese.

Board members last week directed Albanese and his representatives to meet with village staff in hopes of ironing out details of the submission, most notably to learn what elements of the proposal are zoning compliant. Staff would include Building Inspector Peter Miley, Village Engineer Anthony Oliveri and the municipality’s planning consultant Jan Johannessen.

A work session will also be scheduled in the near future to discuss details of the plan.

The applicant intends to opt into the downtown overlay district, which was created with the update of the Comprehensive Plan about three years ago, that would permit the development of the four-story structure with covered parking on the ground floor with 16 spaces, said architect Gregg DeAngelis.

“I think it’s a good idea to spend some time in a work session to kind of go through it, in part because we’re not sitting here scratching our heads asking the same questions and asking the same thing,” said Board Chairman John Bainlardi. “We need to get ourselves to a place that we have a reasonably firm understanding of what the zoning allows or doesn’t allow.”

Albanese’s current plan includes 12 one-bedroom apartments, a pair of two-bedroom units and two studio apartments. There would be a gym on the building’s first floor and the roof could contain solar panels on one portion of the roof along with a terrace for socializing.

It would be built directly behind the structure that contains Frannie’s Goodie Shop and an AT&T store and near the closed movie theater. DeAngelis said the plan includes a gathering area with seating for people to sit outside in the space between the theater and Frannie’s.

Board member Ralph Vigiotti said he needs to have a better understanding whether the passageway between those buildings is wide enough to accommodate the seating as well as pedestrians who currently use that area as a cut-through to get to the Blackeby parking lot.

Albanese said at its narrowest point there is about seven feet between the buildings but widens to 13 to 14 feet.

The gathering space will also be coordinated with the village’s streetscape project for downtown, which is expected to get underway this year, DeAngelis added.

There was no date given during last Tuesday’s Planning Board meeting when the work session might take place or when the item will appear again on a regular agenda.

Cell Tower Review Still on Hold

The board once again adjourned the public hearing on Homeland Towers’ application for a cell tower at 180 S. Bedford Rd. near Sarles Street, on a portion of the same parcel as a proposed solar farm.

Village Attorney Whitney Singleton said Homeland Towers has requested a meeting with village officials for further discussions. The applicant has been looking at alternate sites after a series of contentious public hearings and meetings where a torrent of criticisms was raised by neighbors and opponents of the plan.

Singleton said Homeland could request another extension of the tolling agreement until there is greater clarity about whether the company will pursue the South Bedford Road site or one of the alternate locations.

Two main alternatives are on Linden Lane and at Guard Hill preserve, both in the Town of Bedford.

Under federal telecommunications law, a municipality has 150 days from the time of a formal submission of a cell tower application until it decides to make a determination on the project unless there is a mutual agreement to extend that period. There have been two extensions, one from February until mid-April and another from mid-April to May 28.

“I don’t know if that’s going to result in a further tolling of the shot clock,” Singleton said, “but in any event, if it does not your board would be posed to act on the application at the next meeting.”

He said it is incumbent on Homeland Towers to provide significant data about the alternate locations. Without that date it would be difficult to make a determination.

The board’s next scheduled meeting is May 25.

Rivera Toyota in Mount Kisco has proposed shutting down its current service location and moving it to the site of a former burger restaurant within the village near the Bedford border.

Representatives for the car dealership last month submitted plans to move most of the vehicle service operation from Kisco Avenue to 353 N. Bedford Rd., which had formerly been home to the Westchester Burger Company.

It also plans to renovate the 21,745-square-foot building that serves as the showroom at 325 N. Bedford Rd., including updating the 12 existing service bays on the lower level and adding another two bays at the front of the building for customer vehicle pickup, said Daniel Patrick, an attorney for the applicant.

The dealership building, which opened in 2015, will also feature a new customer entry portal, signage, façade, interior floor plan and a new showroom with sales areas. The work will not increase the size of the building.

Patrick said at 353 N. Bedford Rd. the existing restaurant building would be demolished and redeveloped with a new 12,000-square-foot service-only location containing eight bays in the rear. The facility would also include a customer drop-off where vehicles will be left for repairs and an indoor customer waiting area.

The new location would be mainly for routine repairs and servicing while the staff would drive the cars requiring more extensive work to the main dealership with its 12 renovated bays, he said.

Board members expressed some concern about traffic entering and exiting the site on the very congested North Bedford Road.

“It’s a busy roadway and we want to make sure that the queuing and the site traffic is all throughout,” said board member Michael Bonforte.
Police Blotter

Croton-on-Hudson Police Department

May 3: Caller reported at 10:59 a.m. that a bear was walking on the aqueduct trail near Croton Gorge Park and near the top of the Croton Dam at the trailhead at Croton Dam Road. Other police agencies were contacted and advised.

May 3: Caller reported a suspicious black “body bag” with tape wrappings binding it together in the shape and size of a human body that washed up on the beach between the Croton Sailing School and the Croton Yacht Club at 7:14 p.m. Patrols discovered the bag in question was foam wrapped in a black plastic bag.

May 8: Patrol responded to an area on Old Post Road South at 4:53 a.m. after a resident called to report a neighbor going through their garbage. The caller originally thought there were animals rummaging through their garbage. The caller originally contacted and advised.

North Castle Police Department

May 7: A caller reported at noon that his 14-year-old son lost his wallet at Wampus Brook Park on May 5 and is requesting to be contacted if anyone returns it to this department.

May 8: Parties walked into headquarters at 5:04 p.m. to report a missing bicycle last seen in the area of Maple Avenue, where the complainant’s daughter left it unattended earlier this afternoon. The party did not wish to complete witness and owner depositions, but wanted to be contacted if the bicycle is found. The bicycle is described as a red and gray Trek with a phone holder on the handle bars. The report was made as a matter of record.

May 11: A complainant reported receiving a letter at 10:22 a.m. from a colleague which he said defames his character and practice as a physical therapist.

Putnam Sheriff’s Department

May 8: At about midnight while on patrol in the Town of Carmel, Deputy Robert Weinberg observed a 1999 Toyota 4Runner commit a traffic infraction on Route 6 in the area of Route 6N. The driver pulled into the gas station and Weinberg initiated a traffic stop. The driver was identified as Salomon O. Aguirre of Carmel. While interviewing Aguirre, Weinberg detected the odor of an alcoholic beverage on his breath. It was determined that Aguirre was driving while intoxicated and placed him under arrest without incident.

A criminal history search showed Aguirre, 25, of Carmel, had two DWI convictions in 2005 and 2008, as well as an unlicensed arrest for DWI in 2007. He was charged with DWI with a previous conviction within 10 years and DWI with a blood-alcohol content of at least .08, both felonies.

State Police/Cortlandt

May 8: Police arrested Jean T. Donatien, 64, of Peekskill, for first-degree endangering the welfare of an incompetent or physically disabled person, a Class E felony. At about 2:50 p.m., troopers were dispatched to the Cortlandt Town Center, where callers had reported a male striking another man with special needs in a van.

An investigation, with the help of good Samaritans, found Donatien, an employee of Opengate, slapped and knocked the victim’s head against the van window. The victim was not injured. Donatien was arraigned before Judge Fugaro-Norton in Town of Cortlandt Court and released on his own recognizance.

White Plains Police Department

May 12: Report of a 2006 Jeep Cherokee stolen from 28 Mitchell Place between 6 p.m. on May 11 and the early morning hours of May 12. The incident remains under investigation.

Yorktown Police Department

May 12: A 15-year-old Peekskill boy was arrested at 5:30 p.m. and charged with juvenile delinquency in connection with a fight on Mar. 23 at 359 Downing Drive. Following an investigation, it is alleged the juvenile threw a chair at a vehicle, causing damage. The juvenile left the scene prior to police arrival, but was later identified. He was arrested after responding to Yorktown Police headquarters with a parent.

Obituary

Ralph Nardone

Ralph M. Nardone, a lifelong Peekskill resident, died May 13. He was 94.

He was born June 2, 1926, to Michealangelo and Antoinetta (Chiavelli) Nardone. He proudly served in the U.S. Navy during World War II. He enjoyed playing baseball, boxing and football and bowling as a young adult.

Along with his father and uncle, Nardone was the proprietor of Nardone Brothers Furniture Store where he served the community for many years. He was proud to have the business passed down to his nephews, a third generation, and continue to run for more than 100 years. He was also a member of the Rotary Club of Peekskill, the Knights of Columbus, the Christopher Columbus Club and the Elks Club. He also volunteered at local fire departments.

Nardone was a dedicated parishioner at The Assumption Church all his life and was a devout Roman Catholic. He served as an usher at mass every Sunday and enjoyed attending church functions throughout the years. After retiring, he spent his time golging, going to casinos, taking trips and, most importantly, spending time with his family and friends. He was a dedicated son, brother and uncle. He was always there to lend a hand or give advice.

He was predeceased by his parents; eldest brother and sister-in-law Joseph and Ann Nardone; his sister and brother-in-law, Angelina and Fred Plaviak; his younger brother, Michealangelo (“Mike”) Nardone Jr.; and nephews Michael Nardone, Joseph (“Jay”) Anstett and Daniel Veglia Jr.

He is survived by his brother and uncle. He was predeceased by his parents; eldest brother and sister-in-law Joseph and Ann Nardone; his sister and brother-in-law, Angelina and Fred Plaviak; his younger brother, Michealangelo (“Mike”) Nardone Jr.; and nephews Michael Nardone, Joseph (“Jay”) Anstett and Daniel Veglia Jr. He was survived by his sister and brother-in-law, Marie and Stephen Anstett; his sister-in-law, Trudy Nardone; his nieces and nephews, Judy Veglia, Stephen and Anna Marie Anstett, Edward and Nicole Anstett, Laura and Keith Palmer, Jamie and Jay Gullo and Michael and Caroline Nardone; 24 great-nieces and great-nephews; and 10 great-great nieces and great-great nephews.

Nardone lived his life to the fullest, thanked the good Lord for every day and was the definition of a true family man.

Yorktown Summer Movies to Return

Yorktown’s summer mobile movie nights will return this year with three films at two locations.

The mobile movies will be held on June 10 at the Jefferson Valley Mall parking lot and on July 8 and August 12 at Veterans Field. The events are sponsored by NewYork-Presbyterian Hudson Valley and the Yorktown Lions Club.

Admission is $5 per vehicle for residents and $20 per vehicle for non-residents. Registration for the films will open a week before at https://register.capturepoint.com/Yorktown.

The films will be projected on an inflatable 23- by 16-foot screen that will be set up by the Peekskill-based Fun Time Amusements, which runs the Play Connection store inside the mall.
Levenberg, Feldman Compete for Dems’ Support in Ossining Primary

By Rick Pezzullo

The June 22 Democratic primary in the Town of Ossining will determine who will be supervisor for the next two years as incumbent Dana Levenberg faces a challenge from Councilwoman Elizabeth Feldman.

With no Republican in the November race and no minor party lines to fall back on, the primary is essentially a winner-take-all contest. Feldman, who joined the board the same year Levenberg was first elected supervisor six years ago, likes her chances.

“I would say I have a 50-50 chance,” Feldman said. “I am a very well-known entity. I would almost say I know more people than she does. She has a much bigger political machine behind her. I have a grassroots campaign that’s doing well. I am really doing this for the good of Ossining.”

Feldman, a dental hygienist for 26 years, fell short in her bid to win the Democratic nomination and has nothing to lose in the primary. Feldman challenged her for the party’s nomination. The two will square off in the June 22 primary.

Ossining Supervisor Dana Levenberg, above, received a surprise this spring when fellow Democratic Town Board member Elizabeth Feldman challenged her for the party’s nomination. The two will square off in the June 22 primary.

Feldman said one of the main issues that compelled her to seek the supervisor’s office was an intermunicipal agreement that had been discussed between Ossining and New Castle that could have supplied the Village of Ossining with up to 600,000 gallons a day, a decision Feldman said could lead to overdevelopment.

There were insinuations that the proposal to create a district through the IMA was to bring water needed for the expansion of the Sunshine Children’s Home & Rehabilitation Center, a pediatric nursing home on Spring Valley Road. Former New Castle supervisor Robert Greenstein maintained five years ago the IMA would improve fire protection in the area.

“I’m very in favor of trying to protect our remaining green space,” Feldman said. “I don’t want us to become Yonkers with overdevelopment. I feel I am standing up for our resources. I don’t want to build beyond our rivertown and become a city.”

Levenberg stressed the Town of Ossining has no authority to decide what happens with Sunshine Children’s Home.

“The Town of New Castle has authority over land use, and the Village of Ossining has authority over the Ossining Water System,” Levenberg explained. “Only if the Village of Ossining ever decided to sell water to Sunshine might the town play a role in deciding whether to allow access to a pipe in Cedar Lane Park.”

“The future of land use and the development of the Town of Ossining is being decided right now through the Comprehensive Plan process,” she continued. “There are many factors to consider as we develop a new Comprehensive Plan with a focus on sustainability that was grant funded, as well as looking at zoning with the help of Pace Land Use Law Center and the Planners4Health Toolbox to improve North State Road.”

Levenberg and Feldman encouraged residents to be actively involved in the future planning of Ossining.

“It’s time for all voices to be heard,” Feldman said. “I just feel I can do a better job. I think it’s time for a change.”

New Castle Fire District Retains Consultant in Advance of Possible Bond

By Martin Wilbur

Commissioners in New Castle Fire District No. 1 last week voted to retain a consultant to assist in communicating with residents about the need for an expanded firehouse as district officials eye a potential December referendum.

By a 4-1 margin, the Board of Commissioners approved spending $35,250 to hire Wise Oak Strategies of Bedford, the same outfit that helped the Bedford Village Fire District comfortably pass a referendum in January 2020 to build a new $14.8 million firehouse after a larger proposal had been defeated.

Board Chairman Terence Hoey said given the job that Wise Oak did to help get the Bedford firehouse vote through, it seems like a wise investment.

“We will increase our chances of answering all the questions of the community, and let’s just say presenting a good case for moving forward with this project,” Hoey said.

Commissioner Dwight Smith said before the vote that the firm has experience in relaying information to the public on the need to improve fire department facilities and was something the board should pursue. Furthermore, the district has the right to back out within 30 days, according to the agreement, if commissioners have a change of heart, he said.

The dissenting vote came from Commissioner Chris Weddle, who questioned why the board didn’t consider contacting other firms that could provide this type of service. Weddle mentioned that there is the possibility that the state comptroller’s office could question the board why it would spend $35,000 on professional services without having contacted other consultants.

However, Hoey said given Wise Oak’s track record in Bedford and the need for the commissioners to act swiftly to hold a vote before the end of the year to expand the King Street firehouse is essential. The board also discussed the matter at a recent work session, he said.

Hoey added that he felt it was unnecessary to search for another firm at this time.

“[It’s] a surprise to me that now we’re going to look for another professional services company after the one that was engaged literally assisted the Board of Fire Commissioners in Bedford Hills to bring home that building project, and looking at how they did it, they had a strategy, they had plans, they opened up communication throughout the town, they were very, very successful,” Hoey said.

The board agreed to approve the agreement with Wise Oak Strategies, although Commissioner Ed Frank said he would contact another consultant that had been provided to him by project architect Bob Mitchell. In the event that consultant or firm would be a better fit, the 30-day opt-out period in the agreement would allow the board flexibility, he said.

Part of the pre-vote strategy, which had been raised early this year, was to create a Community Liaison Committee. The committee would include district residents who hold a variety of opinions on what should be done with the firehouse to help hash out issues related to a bond.

Last fall, the board met with Mitchell to review preliminary designs. At that time, it was mentioned that a March 2020 estimate for the project was just over $12 million. No other cost estimates have been mentioned publicly since last October.

Last year, the expansion called for a two-story addition. In previous discussions, health and safety issues were slated to be addressed that were lacking in the current facility, including the ability to clean equipment after firefighters return from a blaze to quickly eliminate carcinogens, having uncluttered access to the trucks and equipment that must be stored in safe and logical spaces.

The district’s 2016 firehouse expansion referendum was defeated by a wide margin, but another proposition to acquire the neighboring parcel that had once been owned by Chappaqua Animal Hospital was approved by voters about a year later.

The 800-Pound Ghost in Your Doctor’s Office

By Michael Gold

Every time you go to a doctor, you have an unwanted 800-pound ghost in the office, always injecting itself into every conversation about your treatment.

That ghost is, of course, your insurance company.

The doctor’s goal is to use his or her medical training to restore you to good health, while the insurance company, despite all their demonstrative protestations, seems to care primarily about profits, creating a fundamental tension.

That tension requires both the patient and the doctor to do a delicate dance to make sure the treatment you need to get better will be covered by your insurer.

The insurance company stands as the ultimate authority judging whether you can get the care you need.

The vast majority of Americans jealous guard their freedoms, but they also willingly allow countless restrictions on their ability to get decent health care by powerful, faceless private organizations that are rarely held accountable by government or anyone else.

I’m a retired teacher and I have relatively good health insurance. And yet, the conflict between the doctor and the insurance company is always there whenever I have a problem requiring treatment more serious than a prescription, physical therapy or vaccine.

For instance, I currently need minor dental surgery, or I’m going to lose some teeth. My insurance company is giving my dental surgeon and me a really hard time.

The surgeon submitted the pre-approval submission for the procedure.

The insurance company responded by sending me a letter stating: “A claim on the above referenced patient is delayed pending receipt of additional information... If we don’t receive it, we will have to deny the claim.”

I made an urgent call to the dentist to provide the information, which he did.

A week later, I got a second letter stating that the dentist did not use “a valid procedure code” in submitting the pre-approval for part of the procedure, so the company could not cover the claim.

I made a second, urgent phone call to the dentist’s office to make sure they used the correct code in submitting the pre-approval a second time.

Now here I will make the jump to sheer speculation, but I confess it’s crossed my mind. I question whether the delay in approving the procedure is part of a deliberate strategy by the insurance company to slow down the processing of the ultimate payout to the dentist.

On a far more critical level, several years ago, while trying to shovel my car out from under two feet of snow that had piled up after a storm, so I could get to work, I experienced severe chest pain.

I called my doctor. He said get to the hospital, fast.

The emergency room personnel gave me nitroglycerine. The attending physician decided I needed to be admitted.

This created a dilemma many patients must face. If I stay in the hospital, will the insurance company cover it?

With up to 10 years of rigorous medical training, doctors have far more knowledge about your condition than you do. Should you disregard their judgment and possibly face a worsening of your health?

The hospital will require you to sign a waiver clearing them of liability if you decide to walk out. That’s an additional, powerful reason to trust the doctor’s conclusions.

But insurance companies contradict doctors’ judgments all the time, often after the fact.

On the doctor’s authority, I stayed in the hospital, took a stress test, got treated and was discharged two days later.

Weeks after that, the insurance company sent me a letter denying the claim, because in their words, my stay was not medically necessary. How could they possibly know?

The insurer can come up with all kinds of jargon to justify their decisions, that ordinary people like me usually don’t understand.

Thankfully, after this scare, the hospital and insurance company worked it out and I didn’t have to pay much for the cost of my stay. But there are many other people who don’t enjoy that experience.

It seems to come down to one thing. The insurance companies don’t seem as interested as your doctor in helping you heal.

Not incidentally, CEO pay at a health insurance company is extremely rewarding. The CEO of my hospital insurer received $17 million in compensation in 2020.

The CEO of my dental insurer received $13 million in compensation in 2019 and $79 million in 2020.

This system is terribly broken. Pleasantville resident Michael Gold has written op-ed articles for The New York Daily News, the Albany Times-Union and other newspapers.

Future Growth in Yorktown is Dependent on Improving its Infrastructure

By Lanny Gilbert

In order for Yorktown to thrive, we need to grow. Our population in 2010 was 36,095 and in 2019 it was 36,269 – virtually unchanged, according to the census and town data.

We need to continue growing the population and the businesses that support our residents. When you have defined borders and limited open space, growth requires revitalization, especially when you recognize that the core infrastructure was put in place in the 1960s when the population was around 16,000.

To revitalize Yorktown and make it a thriving community relies on repairing or replacing the visible and invisible infrastructure. This includes the roads, communications, water towers and power above ground, along with the water, sewer, communications, power and drainage systems underground.

To do it right, we need to make wise decisions now as we consider significant changes to our zoning that is meant to facilitate our growth.

Infrastructure on the federal, state and local levels is the watchword of our times.

During my term as Yorktown supervisor, I led the effort to make much-needed infrastructure improvements in the town, including repaving, new generators for our public works buildings (Town Hall and the highway garage) for emergency storm strengthening and new roofs on the badly-aged Town Hall, police department and courthouse complex and Water Department buildings.

Additionally, I improved playgrounds, completed the Granite Knolls Sports Complex and repaired our tennis courts. I secured the grant money for revitalizing Railroad Depot and Park, and we began critical work on the failing Mohican Lake retaining wall. Various culverts on Veterans Road and Hill Boulevard were identified for repair, and grants were sought to pay for them.

But these infrastructure projects were intended just to catch up, to keep us current and operational. I gained invaluable knowledge and experience about our existing infrastructure, and I understand the need to continue critical maintenance but to also execute a needs assessment.

As former town supervisor I know that much more work is needed going forward, especially if the town intends to expand businesses and increase rental apartments and other housing to move out of stagnation.

It’s time to properly study our infrastructure needs. Where are the traffic bottlenecks and dangerous intersections? How much additional capacity will our sewer and water supply systems require? How much additional power and bandwidth must the utilities provide? How do they improve availability? Which roads need more than patching?

There are proposals to permit more flexible zoning for developers, but we need the supporting studies completed on our future infrastructure needs, before we even consider those proposals.

Since leaving the supervisor’s office, I have been named a commissioner on the New York State Bridge Authority, which oversees five bridges, from the Bear Mountain Bridge north to the Rip Van Winkle Bridge, along with the Walkway Over the Hudson. Bridge infrastructure maintenance and growth are continuously monitored and future needs are considered to determine future actions. Being a bridge commissioner has increased my appreciation for proper maintenance and planning.

All state and local infrastructure require maintenance and/or replacement, in order to support growth and ensure safety due to wear and tear.

The key to Yorktown’s growth and revitalization projects is effectively balancing the needs for vital development with the residents’ quality of life. With our knowledge of the infrastructure, zoning and permitting processes and the needs of all hamlets considered, we can proceed with projects that will help our town grow appropriately.

I look forward to using our significant fund surplus and the newly committed federal funds to improve our current infrastructure and to properly plan and budget for our future needs.

Lanny Gilbert is a former Yorktown supervisor and is a candidate for Town Board this year.

A New Direction for the Proposed Form Based Code in New Castle

By Holly McCall, Lori Morton, Michael Weinberg and Jennifer Bounds

Although there are many issues facing New Castle, the Form Based Code (FBC) is rightfully one of the most prominent. More than a mere zoning code, the FBC can enable the revitalization that the Chappaqua hamlet has lacked to date and in a manner consistent with 2017’s Comprehensive Plan.

We, like many residents, had concerns and questions about the implementation of the code to the original 72-acre study area. We are reassured by the Town Board’s new direction:

• Limiting the FBC solely to the six-acre North Greeley corridor (a more than 90 percent reduction);
• Restoration of oversight by the Planning Board and Architectural Review Board;
• No five-story buildings; and
• Excluding public spaces, such as the train station parking lot.

We believe that this new plan is both reasonable and the right path forward to create a vibrant and healthy community.

But to be clear this is a zoning change, not a development or construction plan. Only if and when property owners decide to build, within the code, would anything be built.

Although there is much to be done beyond the FBC to achieve our collective goals, there is a pathway forward not merely for the sake of development but in a manner that meets community needs in both of scale and size.

Each member of the Democrats 4 New Castle slate is deeply vested in our town. Before stepping up to serve the community as candidates for the Town Board and long after we hopefully have the honor to do so, we were and will remain residents first.

We and many fellow community members cite the exceptional Chappaqua Central School District as a reason for choosing New Castle as our home. We understand that the due diligence applied by the district and Board of Education was to the premise of a full build-out scenario, but believe many of these concerns are now mitigated by the limited scope of rezoning currently under consideration.

The potential of a few hundred new students is now reduced to a few dozen spread over multiple schools. We believe we can create communities in that footprint without diminishing educational quality.

We support the opportunity for multiple entry points into the New Castle housing market. We believe that there are several advantages offered by stimulating housing development in the hamlet: revitalization, economic and business development for New Castle, lowered carbon footprint of downtown buildings and the inclusion of residents currently unable to live or stay in our community.

We support the addition of affordable workforce housing, and appreciate that the housing need extends beyond it. New and varied housing options are needed in New Castle to support young adults, empty-nesters, two-household families and middle-income families.

In order for Chappaqua to retain its quaint charm while incentivizing development that will create a flourishing and vibrant hamlet, there is much work to be done. We are ready to roll up our sleeves and do that work. Implementing the NYSERDA building code that mandates higher energy efficiency standards for new construction can lower our footprint.

Increasing housing options helps us do our part to mitigate some of the housing crisis in our county.

Policy experts and local leaders like the Interfaith Council and the Council for Race and Equity (CRE) recommend implementing the FBC as part of a plan to move toward racial equity. In fact, the CRE’s Housing & Planning Committee conducted exhaustive research and due diligence and concluded that the best practice for New Castle is an FBC to create a more diverse and inclusive community. North Greeley Avenue can, and we believe will, be a shining example of smart growth and green building construction.

Whatever the path forward may be, have no misgivings. The Democrats 4 New Castle slate will not implement any future zoning change in the hamlet without robust public engagement. Any consideration to expand the FBC would not only be contingent upon the outcome and success of the North Greeley corridor but require that such zoning be specifically tailored to the location in which it would be implemented.

Most importantly, we will listen to all voices, remain open to opposing ideas and demonstrate with our actions that before anything else, you, the residents that make our community a place we are proud to call home, always – always – come first.

We look forward to continued dialogue, working together, and your support on June 22.

Holly McCall is a Democratic candidate for New Castle town supervisor. Lori Morton, Michael Weinberg and Jennifer Bounds are Democratic candidates for Town Board. They will also all appear on the independent 4 New Castle line.
Sisters Return With Lemonade Stand to Raise Funds for Cancer Research

By Martin Wilbur

Not even a pandemic can deter Jenna and Rebecca Blum from their annual fundraising efforts to help find a cure for childhood cancer.

For the eighth year, the Chappaqua sisters will be selling their freshly squeezed lemonade at the hamlet’s Saturday morning farmers market to raise money so perhaps one day children and families who must face childhood cancer will see the day when there is a cure.

During the previous seven years, they have raised more than $15,000 for Alex’s Lemonade Stand Foundation for Childhood Cancer.

“It’s good to know that even though there’s not a cure we’re making a small difference and that it’s still something,” said Jenna Blum, 13, who is three years younger than Rebecca.

On Friday night, the sisters will be freshly squeezing hundreds of lemons to make about 10 gallons of lemonade. They plan to rise shortly after 6 a.m. on Saturday and mix the lemonade. They plan to rise shortly after 6 a.m. on Saturday and mix the lemonade. The sisters will again have a jar filled with lemonheads, and for the person who comes closest to correctly guessing the number will win half the pot. Each guess costs $1.

A new wrinkle this year will be trying to help other families who have been touched by cancer is also personal for Jenna and Rebecca. About four-and-a-half years ago, the lost their grandfather, Papa Neal, to cancer. It is a way for them to honor his legacy by operating the stand in his honor.

For the eighth consecutive year, they have also found a way to raise money by hosting a fundraising event. Last year, during the depths of the pandemic, they held a pizza pop-up party when they were able to arrange for a local pizza truck to spend two hours on their block. The proprietor donated 15 percent of the proceeds to the Alex’s Lemonade Stand.

Jenna Blum said the operators of the Chappaqua Farmers Market have always been generous by allowing them to set up a stand for their Saturday each year. Once again that is the case this year.

So far, they have raised about $1,100 in advance of Saturday’s sales.

“We’re helping in some way to fund research to hopefully help find a cure, which is a really great thing to know because even though it’s not like there’s been a cure yet, it’s always good to know that you’re helping take steps toward that,” Rebecca Blum said.

The Chappaqua Farmers Market is open from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. For more information on Alex’s Lemonade Stand and the Blum sisters’ effort, visit www.alexslemonade.org/

Putnam Valley’s Lone Food Pantry Fills Void in the Community

By Martin Wilbur

In 2004, about a half-dozen local houses of worship and organizations partnered to create Putnam Valley’s only food pantry.

Now, 17 years later, the Putnam Valley Community Food Pantry continues to be the town’s one place where local residents who face food insecurity can visit each week to help sustain them and their families through difficult times.

Although the need for food assistance has returned almost to pre-pandemic levels at the pantry, said its director Roni Rodman, it fills a significant void in the communities that it serves in northern Westchester and southern Putnam County.

Roughly 75 to 100 clients arrive at the back of the Grace Methodist Church at 337 Peakskill Hollow Rd. every Saturday morning from 9 until 11 or 11:30 a.m. when the pantry is open. About 20 local residents who serve as volunteers give up their Saturday morning each week to help.

“We’re here, and if families or an individual needs us, we want to provide them with the necessary means to survive,” Rodman said.

Not only are there the pantry staples of nonperishable food for families to choose from, but the Putnam Valley Community Food Pantry also has a variety of meats, dairy, eggs, cheese, butter and milk in its walk-in refrigerator located outside the entrance, Rodman said.

The pantry receives most of its food, at least 5,000 pounds each week, from the Food Bank of the Hudson Valley in Cornwall, Orange County. It buys the food with money received from the federal Hunger Prevention and Nutrition Assistance Program (HPNAP) grant that it has received each year.

Rodman said the pantry works off that grant and places its order for pickup every Friday morning.

About seven to 10 volunteers gather early every Friday morning, a few of whom make the drive to Cornwall in the pantry’s new 2021 Mitsubishi Fuso box truck that was acquired in February. The remainder wait at the pantry waiting for it to arrive at about 9 a.m. to help unload.

One of the volunteers, Bobby Sellazzo, who works for a private sanitation company, said there is a client of the company in Pleasantville who did work for the Bob and Dolores Hope Foundation, which supports nonprofit organizations that help others in need.

As the pantry’s previous truck continued to deteriorate, Sellazzo innocently inquired about whether the foundation could help buy a newer truck for the weekly food runs.

The foundation provided the pantry with half of the money for the $50,000 truck, and if the pantry can raise $12,500 from its fundraising efforts, it has pledged to pick up the remaining expense to pay off the truck as part of a dollar-for-dollar match, he said.

Sellazzo said the new truck is not only more reliable but it reduces the amount of time to load and unload the food with its mechanical platform.

“I come out once in a while, but good for these people,” he said of many of the other volunteers. “They are out here for 10 to 12 hours every week to do this.”

Another volunteer, Mark Perez, said the truck’s platform is greatly appreciated in inclement weather.

“It’s been a blessing. It really has, and for them to match whatever we raised, it’s a blessing, too, it really is,” Perez said of the Bob and Dolores Hope Foundation. “And it’s all volunteers. Nobody makes a nickel.”

Rodman said in the spring of 2004, congregants at the Grace Methodist Church in Cortlandt and the Putnam Valley Rotary Club because they saw the need for it in the community. The pantry is an interfaith and community-based venture, she said.

Clients are asked to fill out a simple registration form and provide proof with a photo identification that they are local residents, Rodman said.

For more information on the Putnam Valley Community Food pantry, visit www.putnamvalleyfoodpantry.org or visit its Facebook page.

“Putnam Valley Community Food Pantry volunteers unload the weekly shipment of more than 5,000 pounds of food every Friday morning to stock the shelves for its clients who arrive on Saturday.”

Dean Pialtos, President and CEO

The Pialtos family has been in business as Pascal Coffee Roasters for four generations—that’s more than 100 years providing high quality coffee and service in the Hudson Valley. When they needed a loan for more trucks and equipment, they chose a local bank that shares their commitment to customer service: Tompkins Mahopac Bank.

Visit MahopacBank.com
This week, I visited a very nice home in Croton-on-Hudson, which I will be listing for sale very shortly. In surveying the outside property, I spied a row of plants with buds of flowers that for many years were my favorite: peonies.

When I first moved to Westchester, I was delighted that I would once again be able to grow a flower garden like the one I had when I was a young boy living in the South.

Originally, I also had a vegetable garden, including a hardy couple of rows of corn, but I was more desirous of having a flower garden that looked pretty from spring to fall. Besides, vegetables are so easy to buy with none of the sweat to grow them.

Marigolds were my favorite choice to start with, because they were so easy to grow, but I was even going so far as to plant annuals from seed for my garden, including a hardy couple of rows, but I was more desirous of having a flower garden that looked pretty from spring to fall. Besides, vegetables are so easy to buy with none of the sweat to grow them.

Peonies grow from tubers, bulb-like structures that store the nutrients the plant needs to regrow each year. It is a gorgeous perennial that boasts breathtaking, fragrant blooms and a long lifespan. Some varieties have been known to live for as long as 100 years. Peonies are Hardy in our area, and there are many different cultivars within the main types of these plants (tree peonies and herbaceous peonies, or Paeonia suffruticosa and Paeonia officinalis). In spring, peonies produce large, multicolored blossoms that make for excellent cut flowers. Then, after its bloom, the peony’s shiny green foliage lasts all summer.

Caring for peonies is relatively simple, since they require little maintenance so long as they are planted properly. In terms of feeding peonies, great soil plus just the right amount of plant food is the perfect combination for healthy-looking blooms. Whether fertilizing peonies in containers or the ground, it’s important to give them the right kind of nutrition at the right time.

When deciding on a location, keep in mind that peonies thrive in fertile, rich, well-drained soil in full sun to partial shade. Spacing is important; peonies should be three to four feet apart to allow for decent air circulation. When planting, dig a generous hole (about two feet deep and two feet across) and set the root so that the eyes face upward on top of a mound of soil in the hole, placing the roots two inches below the soil surface. Then, fill the hole back up, burying the root deeper than two inches. If growing a container peony, take care to cover it no deeper than it grew.

The best way to fertilize peonies is by using a tulip fertilizer. You should work the soil well before you plant, mixing in compost or another organic material like bone meal or well-rotted manure and a small amount of fertilizer.

In the spring, when the plants begin to grow and the shoots are three to four inches high, you can apply a complete, dry, synthetic fertilizer such as 5-10-5 or 10-10-10 or organic fertilizer such as 5-5-5. One application of fertilizer per year is usually sufficient to promote plant growth.

Using a low-nitrogen fertilizer for peonies is important, as a fertilizer with too much nitrogen could hinder the plant’s growth. Be careful to not overfertilize. Always add the fertilizer around the drip line of the plant; if you add it directly on the crown, it could burn the plant. Once established, peonies require very little water, though they should be watered thoroughly upon first being planted and during their first year of growth.

Blossoms should be deadheaded when they begin to fade to promote flower production. Peonies should not be covered with too much mulch; otherwise, they’ll be smothered. If temperatures fall below freezing, peonies can be mulched with shredded bark or pine needles. But mulch must be removed in the spring.

Support peony stems with wire tomato cages or another form of support, as stems tend to be weak, and their massive blooms can easily overpower the peony’s stem. But the flower’s beauty is worth the trouble to support them.

Peony tubers are easily purchased at a variety of sites online and at local garden centers. When cutting peony flowers for the home, don’t cut more than one-third to one-half of the flowers and leaves as much foliage as possible.

Then, just be grateful that God creates such floral beauty for our enjoyment.

Mt. Kisco Sculptor Makes Statements About the World Through Art

By Gloria Raskin

Speaking to Howard Menken is a journey into his head, heart and hands that have all worked together throughout his life to produce his photography, then his furniture designs and now sculptures.

Menken, 87, a 20-year Mount Kisco resident, is a true Renaissance man who expresses himself in many mediums. Today, the foremost are his sculptures of which he has amassed between 40 and 50 over the past few years. Jokingly, he said he doesn’t have any more room in his home to build and house them.

This month, the Katonah Museum of Art has taken one of Menken’s sculptures that is being exhibited in its virtual show titled “Ricochet,” which opened last Saturday and will run through June 13.

His abstract sculptures are comments on multiple problems facing the world, he said. “Why haven’t we (America) learned from our past? Why do atrocities like the Holocaust and the genocide in Ethiopia keep happening?” Menken asked.

To highlight one of the national problems the nation has grappled with over the past year, Menken has a sculpture planned related to the killing of George Floyd. He doesn’t quite know what shape or form that will take, but it is important for Menken to relate his feelings and emotions into his work.

“What happens is when certain events take place, and I think this was a very important event, that fits into, let’s say, the pieces that I’ve done under the theme of why,” Menken explained.

Menken was born and raised in Brooklyn. He fondly recalls playing in the streets with a pink “Spaldeen,” the high-bounce ball that was a staple of a city childhood for decades, and making up games with other children.

From a young age, Menken loved working with his hands, starting with block building when he was in kindergarten.

His love for graphic design eventually led him to a photography career.

While in the Army, Menken was stationed in South Carolina and became involved at the Town Theatre, a venue in nearby Columbia, S.C. He designed Playbills, produced and developed stage sets, all of which helped him develop his creative side.

After serving two years in the Army, Menken worked for art studios and advertising agencies using the evening hours for his freelance work. But he had a strong desire to work on his own and over the years ignored multiple job offers.

Menken opened his own photography studio in Chelsea while continuing to work as a fashion photographer for more than 40 years, capturing fashion and lifestyle images for advertising agencies throughout the United States and Europe.

When he hung up his camera, he turned his creative mind to furniture, and began designing pieces he called “transformable” - furniture that can be reconfigured in different ways and only limited by the imagination of the consumer. His line of furniture was typically aimed for young families, able to

Over 16,000 Chicken Wings Consumed During White Plains Wing Weeks

White Plains Mayor Tom Roach and the White Plains Business Improvement District (BID) congratulate Alex Lounge Bar & Grill for winning best tasting wing in the 2021 Downtown White Plains Wing Weeks.

More than 16,300 wings were consumed over four weeks from downtown White Plains restaurants.

Every Wing Weeks ticket provided four wing passes that could each be redeemed for a dozen wings each at any of the participating restaurants between Apr. 11 and May 8. The event featured 15 participating restaurants, each with a different flavor of wings. There were 531 Wing Weeks tickets that were distributed and 1,362 passes were redeemed. After redeeming their wing passes, participants were prompted to rate their wings from one to five.

With so many different flavors and restaurants to choose from, competition for the title of Best Wings in Downtown White Plains was steep. However, when the ratings were counted last Monday morning it became clear that with an average rating of 4.76 out of 5, the Cilantro Lime wings from Alex Lounge Bar & Grill emerged as the crowd favorite.

Downtown White Plains Wing Weeks was a safer alternative during the COVID-19 pandemic to the Downtown White Plains Wing Walk event organized in 2019. The inaugural Wing Walk was a one-day event in 2019, in which Lazy Boy Saloon & Ale House won with their Tequila Citrus wings.

The 2020 Wing Walk event was canceled due to COVID-19 shutdowns. This year’s event allowed for social distancing through digital voting, spreading the event over four weeks and providing takeout options.

“Congratulations to Alex Lounge Bar & Grill for taking the 2021 title,” said Roach, who brought the idea of Wing Walk to White Plains. “We have a lot of great food options in our city and Wing Walk – or, for this year, Wing Weeks – is a great way to showcase our local restaurants. Kudos to the BID, which worked to adapt the event this year due to COVID. I believe that Wing Walk is on its way to becoming a much-anticipated annual tradition in White Plains.”

“There was a demand to bring back one of our most exciting events, but knew it was not an option to do so in the same way we had done it in the past right now,” said BID Executive Director Brittany Brandwein. “Our creative staff implemented a way to engage the community and promote White Plains restaurants at the same time.”

A proclamation and plaque will be delivered to Alex Lounge Bar & Grill in the coming weeks.

Mt. Kisco Chamber of Commerce to Hold Inaugural Mutt Mile

The first-ever Mount Kisco Chamber of Commerce Mutt Mile, a stroll around Mount Kisco’s downtown hub for dog owners to showcase their canines, is planned for this Saturday, May 22.

“We are celebrating the playful nature of dogs, which was so comforting to many during the shuttered times of the pandemic,” explained Amanda Zuckerman Powers, owner of Reining Cats & Dogs located in downtown Mount Kisco.

Starting at 11 a.m. dogs and their owners are invited to gather for a leisurely stroll along a route planned in Mount Kisco’s downtown hub for a breath of fresh air and in honor of our loyal pets.

Supporting the event are chamber members Reining Cats & Dogs, No Place Like Home Vet Care, D’Errico Jewelry and the Saw Mill Club.

There is no cost to participate in the Mutt Mile, but advance registration is required along with proof of your pet’s vaccination record.

To register for the Mount Kisco Chamber of Commerce inaugural Mutt Mile, visit the chamber’s website at www.mtkiscochamber.com or its Facebook page for more information.

Longtime Mahopac Library Staff Member Perillo to Retire Next Week

Gail Perillo, also known to hundreds of community members as Miss Gail, will officially retire from the Mahopac Public Library on May 27.

Miss Kitty, Gail’s puppet companion, was heartbroken when she heard the news that her dearest story time friend would be leaving the library. “It will be hard to fill Gail’s shoes,” said Library Director Michele Capozzella. “Her energy and enthusiasm is so engaging, and her love for our young patrons brings out the best in them.”

Patrons of all ages are welcome to stop in at the library on Wednesday, May 26 and Thursday, May 27, between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m., to say goodbye to Perillo and wish her a successful retirement.

adapt his pieces to their lifestyle and living environment.

From there it was a short leap to sculptures, which he has been doing in earnest the last few years. Menken’s first sculpture was titled “Birth,” his interpretation of what it must feel like when a woman brings a child into the world.

“So you can see that there’s, obviously, there’s a connection between all of these creative expressions, so this one, as far as sculpture goes and my furniture design as creative expressions, so this one, as far as I can presently,” Menken said.

His works tell a story created from his background and experiences. Menken said he comes up with an idea for a sculpture, and the sculpture becomes a statement of the idea, a sort of three-dimensional portrait of his thoughts. Each of his sculptures tells a story.

Of the works Menken has completed, there are three that stand out. “From Sea to Toxic Sea” dramatizes the pollution problem facing fish and the nation’s watercourses. Refuse is dumped into the waterways, the fish ingest the garbage and later the fish are caught and eaten. The sculpture shows a large, colorful fish leaping out of the water in an effort to dramatize the problem.

“Summer Memories – Stickball, Stickball, Stickball!” reminds Menken of his years growing up with his and his friends’ playground was the streets of Brooklyn, and stickball, played with the pink Spaldeen, kept them occupied for hours.

“Shame,” which is the sculpture currently on display at the Katonah Museum of Art, is Menken’s powerful Holocaust sculpture. It holds two meanings – one interpretation is the shame that genocide brought to the world and the other is the shame of the victim that is depicted as he’s led to the gas chamber with his hands clasped in front of him.

Front Nine Opens

The new Summit Club at Armonk last Wednesday opened the first nine holes of its highly anticipated renovated golf course by acclaimed architect Rees Jones. The transformation of the former Brynwood Golf & Country Club gives area golfers the opportunity to play a first-class Jones design by joining this new brand of club that has been styled as “the private club experience reimagined.”

All 18 holes will be ready for member play in mid-June, as will the upgraded practice facilities. The Summit Club at Armonk course presents a good test for golfers and will play to 6,700 yards from the back tees to a par of 71. The par-5 14th hole already has been recognized by Westchester magazine as one of the great new golf holes among the county’s recently improved or renovated courses.

“The extensive golf course improvements will make The Summit Club at Armonk a place that all levels of golfers can enjoy in a natural landscape that offers dramatic elevation changes and stunning panoramic views of the New York countryside,” Jones said.

“The Summit Club is being designed as a 21st century lifestyle community with a focus on golf, tennis, fitness and wellness within a resort-like environment,” said Jeffrey B. Mendell, Managing Partner. “Our orientation is to make golf more fun and less stuffy.”

In addition to the renovated golf course, The Summit Club at Armonk will provide exceptional amenities that will open in phases over the next few years. A temporary reception center, pro shop, food truck and covered outdoor dining terrace are now operational. An amenities pavilion that will include a pool, fitness center and casual dining breaks ground later this year. The new clubhouse and tennis courts are expected to commence construction in 2023. Also planned for the site are 73 luxury condominium residences.

LGPA legend Jan Stephenson will appear at The Summit Club at Armonk this weekend to participate in a clinic and Q&A.

Ronald McDonald House of the Greater Hudson Valley has announced that JPMorgan Chase is increasing its strong commitment to the organization and is once again serving as a corporate Program Partner for the third year in a row.

JPMorgan Chase and its Westchester and Hudson Valley employees are leading supporters of the Ronald McDonald House of the Greater Hudson Valley, providing funding for the COVID Relief Plan and Overflow Housing Programs as well as volunteers for the organization’s meal program.

The COVID Relief Plan was developed to continue providing critical services to families experiencing medical crises during this global pandemic. Ongoing COVID protocols led to limited occupancy of families as well as restricted numbers of volunteers permitted at the Ronald McDonald House.

The immediate needs that have been supported by the COVID Relief Plan include ongoing programs such as Meals that Heal, which provides daily meals to families both in Ronald McDonald House as well as at their child’s hospital bedside while volunteer meal preparation is restricted. The relief plan also includes overflow housing that provides hotel accommodations for families due to occupancy restraints in Ronald McDonald House.

Other necessary resources include providing personal protective equipment for staff and families and initiatives necessary to provide families support during these times. Remote education resources for young students and their parents staying at the house are critical as is providing mental health support for staff and families.

The Overflow Housing Program, initially funded by JPMorgan Chase, was created to help support funding for families to stay close when Ronald McDonald House is at full capacity. These funds were utilized during the last year to provide alternate accommodations as a result of occupancy restrictions due to COVID.

Anthony Trimarchi, executive director, JPMorgan Private Bank and a co-leader of the firm’s Westchester and Hudson Valley Market Leadership Team, also serves as an active member of the Ronald McDonald House Board of Directors and was instrumental in developing the COVID Relief Plan.

Trimarchi knows firsthand the importance of keeping families close to their children during their medical crises, especially during the ongoing pandemic.

“As a parent of a child who battled a chronic disease, I know how important it is for families to focus on what’s most important – the health of their children,” said Trimarchi.

“The stress and uncertainty that we all experienced this year reminds us of what families with critically ill children face every day, and through the COVID Relief Plan, JPMorgan Chase is so proud to continue our support of the Ronald McDonald House of the Greater Hudson Valley and invest in their mission to help as many families as possible throughout our community.”

A Spiritual View

By Cantor Lilah Sugarman

Early in the year, I sprained my ankle. To help strengthen my ankles, the doctor suggested I balance on one foot throughout the day. She said that the balance receptors are in the ligaments of your ankle, so when those are injured, your balance is affected.

The first thing I thought was how neat our bodies are, and then I instantly thought of a story in our Jewish tradition about a person who went to the first century Rabbi Hillel and asked, “Teach me the Torah, the Jewish Bible, while I stand on one foot.” In response Hillel taught him: “That which is hateful to you, do not do to your fellow. That is the whole Torah, all the rest is commentary. Now, go and learn it.”

I am always struck by this story. It teaches the value that everyone is created b’zelem elohim – in God’s image, and each life inherently has value and is worthy of honor and respect. It is also significant that it does not say, do to others what you want to be done to yourself. What we want is not necessarily what others want or need.

Sunday, May 16 at sundown was the holiday of Shavuot, the holiday in which the Jewish people commemorate receiving the Torah on Sinai.

I am now able to balance for quite a long time, and even so, I know I will never be able to learn the whole Torah standing on one foot. The beauty of this sacred book is that there is always more to learn.

As a travel writer with my wings still clipped, just like most folks, I’ve desperately missed getting away. So recently I’ve had my first great escape since the onset of COVID-19. Crabtree’s Kittle House Restaurant & Inn in Chappaqua, one of the most heralded restaurants and inns in Westchester, was perhaps my most enjoyable 24-hour getaway.

Yes, this charming, old-world, romantic restaurant nestled in the woods has 13 gorgeous, antique-decorated guest rooms. More than 200 years ago, this was a family farm. It has also served as a Prohibition-era Roadhouse, a private girl’s school, a country playhouse where Tallulah Bankhead starred and a bed and breakfast during Hollywood’s Golden Era.

The classic white structure was built in 1879. You’re sure to be overwhelmed when you feast your eyes upon your romantic room. Ask for suite 2F if available, with its huge antique wooden sleigh bed. The other rooms are just as beautiful with stunning four-poster beds.

Come down before dinner to their lovely tap room for a cocktail at 6 p.m. Dinner’s a half-hour later in either their spectacular dining room or outside in the sprawling, spectacular garden terrace. Be sure to reserve a window table with a lovely view if dining inside.

Owner John Crabtree and his award-winning chefs have assembled an amazing, gastronomic menu, filled with so many enticing appetizers and entrees you’ll have a hard time deciding what to order. Their freshly-baked sourdough bread they place on the table will blow you away.

Two of the most renowned dishes are their just-jumped-out-of-the-ocean bluefin tuna pizzetta (crispy sushi rice cake, tobiko, jalapeños and Japanese aioli) and their mouthwatering pan roasted Hudson Valley pork belly with baked apple, prunes and port wine sauce.

Two of their best main dishes is the to-die-for slow-braised, grass-fed short ribs with root vegetable velouté, glazed heirloom carrots, Swiss chard and crispy parsnips, and the striped bass with shiitake mushrooms, bok choy and Israeli couscous.

Every dish in this one-of-a-kind gourmet restaurant is incredibly prepared and served like a beautiful painting. You absolutely can’t miss, no matter what you order. You can even choose your dishes blindfolded. Be sure to include a couple of their decadent side dishes in your order. I loved the parmesan truffle fries and cider-roasted brussels sprouts.

Leave all your wine selections up to their knowledgeable sommelier. Crabtree, the owner, has one of the country’s most envied wine cellars. Wine Spectator magazine gave his eclectic wine selection a standing ovation.

The incredible, creative desserts are not to be missed. I went gaga over their Valrhona Chocolate Gift, which is filled with molten dark chocolate and surrounded by creme anglaise.

The attentive waiter staff is old-world, serving every dish artfully while explaining how each was prepared and how each ingredient was locally and sustainably sourced.

In the morning, after a restful night’s sleep, perhaps your first away from home since COVID-19, head downstairs for a lovely continental breakfast buffet spread with lots of delicious goodies and the best coffee you’ve ever had.

After breakfast, consider returning to your room to celebrate your first night away with a romantic farewell. After all, life is short. Carpe diem.

So don’t wait, make plans now and surprise your significant other with a nearby overnight getaway.

Doctors Answer Patient Questions About COVID-19 Vaccination

The American Medical Association (AMA) is urging Americans to get vaccinated and continue precautions against COVID-19 infection. But patients have many questions.

“For more than a year, physicians and public health officials have asked us to mask up, physically distance and do all we can to stop the spread of COVID-19 in an effort to save lives while scientists developed vaccines to help bring us back to normal,” said AMA President Dr. Susan R. Bailey. “With vaccines here and available to all Americans over 12, it’s your turn.”

Here are the AMA’s answers to top patient questions.

1. How do we know COVID-19 vaccines are safe? COVID-19 vaccines were tested in large clinical trials with participants of different races, ages, ethnicities and medical conditions to ensure they meet safety standards. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) reviewed all trial safety data before authorizing vaccines for emergency use and are continuing to monitor their safety to ensure even very rare side effects are identified.

2. Which vaccine should I get? Three vaccines are now available in the United States: those made by Pfizer-BioNTech, Moderna and Johnson & Johnson/Janssen Pharmaceuticals. All are safe and highly effective at preventing severe COVID-19 and are continuing to monitor their safety standards. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) reviewed all trial safety data before authorizing vaccines for emergency use and are continuing to monitor their safety to ensure even very rare side effects are identified.

3. Should I get the vaccine if pregnant or breastfeeding? There isn’t definitive data on the safety of COVID-19 vaccines for pregnant women, but no untoward effects have been reported. Data suggest when pregnant individuals contract COVID-19, they have increased risk of severe illness, hospitalization and death, along with risk of adverse pregnancy outcomes. All pregnant individuals should have an opportunity to receive a vaccination. If you have questions, speak with your physician and make decisions based on risk of exposure to COVID-19.

4. How do I know when I’m eligible for the COVID-19 vaccine? All people age 12 and up in every state are now eligible for the COVID-19 vaccine. For people from 12 to 17 years old, only the Pfizer vaccine has been approved for those ages. Additional information about eligibility and timeline can be found at your local public health department website found at www.cdc.gov/publichealthgateway/healthdirectories/. Vaccination information changes quickly, so check back frequently.

5. Will COVID-19 vaccines be available for young children? Vaccines aren’t currently authorized for anyone under 12. As trials are completed in younger populations, vaccines may become available.

6. Once I’m vaccinated, can I stop wearing masks and practicing physical distancing? The CDC has phased out certain prevention measures for fully vaccinated people allowing them to resume some lower-risk activities. The CDC guidance allows fully vaccinated people in non-health care settings to visit other fully vaccinated people indoors without masks or physical distancing. They no longer need to wear a mask outdoors while walking, running, hiking or biking alone, or when in small gatherings, including with members of their own households.

However, masks are still necessary in some crowded outdoor venues like sports stadiums, according to the CDC. Additionally, fully vaccinated people should continue taking precautions – wearing masks, physical distancing and adhering to other prevention measures – when in public and when visiting unvaccinated people at increased risk for severe disease or who have an unvaccinated household member at increased risk.

Student-Run Clinic Opens, Expands Services to Care in Westchester

On May 6, La Casita de la Salud, the New York Medical College (NYMC) student-run clinic operating since 2005 in East Harlem, opened a new location at NYMC’s Family Health Center in Valhalla, in conjunction with Touro Dental Health, the state-of-the-art dental health facility of the Touro College of Dental Medicine (TCDM).

The new location will offer free medical and dental care to uninsured adults in the surrounding community. Initially, the clinic will operate one Thursday a month from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m., with plans for expanded operations in the future.

Since 2005, the original La Casita de la Salud student-run clinic in East Harlem has bridged the gap in health care disparities by providing quality, culturally competent care regardless of race, ethnicity, gender, nationality or ability to pay.

“We are so pleased to open a new La Casita location as the clinic truly encompasses the shared values that NYMC and Touro seek to embody,” said Dr. Lori Solomon, clinical associate professor and chair of the Department of Family and Community Medicine and director of the Family Health Center, who serves as a faculty advisor for the clinic.

“Our goal is to train students to deliver skilled and compassionate care, as well as prioritize always giving back to the community. We hope that expanding the clinic to a new location and offering additional accessible care will make a positive impact on those who need it and the community as a whole.”

A typical patient visit will begin with a physical exam at the Family Health Center, followed by a warm handoff to Touro Dental Health and a dental exam and care. This model exemplifies a true interdisciplinary clinic and showcases the interprofessional education that NYMC and TCDM students receive.

La Casita will offer exams and laboratory testing for free and will help patients apply for free or reduced-fee pharmaceuticals, advanced diagnostic testing and referrals for specialty care if necessary.

Patients will receive longitudinal care, while students will get valuable clinical experience under the supervision of faculty advisors. Patient care will be delivered by a pre-clinical and clinical student pair in both settings. More than 100 students, each from NYMC and TCDM, have applied to volunteer at La Casita. In addition to clinical experience, student volunteers will also gain valuable operational and management experience.

La Casita will operate under strict COVID-19 protocols including reduced capacity, screening practices, use of personal protective equipment and enhanced cleaning practices.

To confirm eligibility and schedule an appointment, patients may call La Casita de la Salud at 845-519-7119 or Touro Dental Health at 914-594-2700.
Land Conservation a Key Strategy in Limiting Impacts of Climate Change

By Lori Ensinger

As part of a global push to avoid the harshest impacts of climate change and to slow species extinctions, President Joe Biden has committed his administration to an ambitious conservation goal – to protect 30 percent of U.S. land and coastal seas by 2030.

The science behind the plan demonstrates that 30 percent is needed to sustain and protect roughly 75 percent of the species on Earth, slow climate change by sequestering carbon in soil and plants and protect communities from climate change-related extreme weather events.

The plan is referred to as “30x30,” and as a country we have a lot of work to do to reach these targets. Here in Westchester County, we have a strong history of conservation to build upon, and the 30x30 plan offers a bold call for us to act to protect the land before it is too late.

According to the United States Geological Survey, the U.S. has conserved about 26 percent of its coastal waters but only about 12 percent of its land. In Westchester, it is estimated that just under 20 percent of our land is protected, although this protected land is not evenly distributed throughout the county.

This statistic may seem surprising because parts of Westchester feel very open and free from development. But it is important to realize that the land that is undeveloped today is not necessarily conserved or protected in perpetuity. And the areas most in need of open space tend to have the least undeveloped land available to protect.

Who will drive the massive conservation efforts behind the 30x30 plan? To reach the plan’s targets, we cannot rely solely on our state and local governments to do the heavy lifting. Nonprofit conservation groups, such as land trusts, will play an important role.

Collectively land trusts have already preserved an astonishing 60 million acres across the U.S. To put this in perspective, that is an area larger than the entire National Park System, or the states of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Vermont, Rhode Island and New Hampshire combined.

Land trusts typically protect land in two ways. They can acquire the title to a property by either purchasing it or accepting it as a donation from a landowner. Another method is through the use of a conservation easement, which allows landowners to keep their land while ensuring it is protected. A conservation easement runs with the property and is a voluntary, perpetual legal agreement between a property owner and a land trust or government agency, which permanently restricts certain land uses (such as development) that would damage important ecological characteristics of the property.

With limited funds available to purchase properties, land trusts adopt conservation plans to guide them in prioritizing which lands to protect for the greatest positive impact on the surrounding ecosystems and community. Properties that expand corridors by connecting existing protected parcels are often a high priority for protection.

Land is also evaluated for its climate resiliency: Does it buffer communities from coastal flooding? Provide shade trees in densely populated areas? Have wetlands or woodlands that can filter pollutants? To ensure adequate access to the many benefits of living near nature, land that is in communities that have been historically excluded from the conservation movement are of high priority and will be a key part of the 30x30 success stories of our future.

Land conservation looks different in Westchester than it does in other parts of the country. The size of parcels here are much smaller than the thousand-acre

Social Security Releases the Most Popular Baby Names for 2020

The Social Security Administration announced last Thursday the most popular baby names in New York for 2020 were Liam and Olivia.

Rounding out the top five boys’ names in the state were Noah, Lucas, Jacob and Ethan. For girls, following Olivia, it was Emma, Sophia, Ava and Isabella.

The agency also announced last week that Olivia and Liam were the most popular baby names in the U.S. last year. How does New York compare to the rest of the country? Check out Social Security’s website – www.socialsecurity.gov – to see the top national baby names for 2020.

Social Security encourages everyone to enjoy the baby names list and, while online, create a my Social Security account at www.socialsecurity.gov/myaccount. It is a personalized online account that people can use beginning in their working years and continuing while receiving Social Security benefits.

Preserving land strategically, including protecting key vistas and natural resources, are essential for Westchester and the United States. For example, Westchester Land Trust has protected nearly 9,000 acres in our 32 years, but that is comprised of 260 separate projects.

Our region’s land protection achievements might be accomplished on a smaller scale, but they will be no less important to the overall goal, and they will rely heavily on private landowners taking action to piece together a mosaic of protected land.

Westchester Land Trust and other conservation organizations stand ready to guide and assist these landowners in being part of the 30x30 solution.

There is no doubt that the 30x30 plan is one of the boldest conservation commitments we have seen in recent decades. For many in the conservation sector, President Biden’s pledge offers overwhelming validation of the importance of our mission. His administration’s announcement confirms that we are at a conservation crossroad and it is time to take bold and strategic steps to protect our natural resources for the residents of Westchester today, and all who will come after us.

Lori Ensinger is president of the Westchester Land Trust, a regional conservation organization based in Bedford Hills that has preserved nearly 9,000 acres since its founding in 1988. For more information on conservation options for your property, visit www.westchesterlandtrust.org.

The Changing Landscape of Alternative Wine Containers

In last week’s column I focused on the carbon footprint of shipping wine. This week my focus is on reducing the carbon footprint further, by changing the wine container. Slowly, but inexorably, the wine industry is moving to alternatives.

How might this foreshadow an environment impact? To ensuring the quality of wine? To the sensibilities of consumers?

Bottles have been the preferred containers for centuries and, until recently, never questioned. But now we’re at a crossroad of being environmentally conscious (which we all support) while possibly perilng the quality of our wines (which we all resist).

We’ve been through this before. Remember Almaden Hearty Burgundy in the ‘80s and ‘90s that was sold in boxes? Remember the – ugh – wines in those boxes? As it turns out, those rudimentary containers may have been ahead of their time.

Now that the entire planet has become eco-conscious, the wine industry has been studying the ecological impact of their current packaging and, in the true spirit of American entrepreneurialism, a marketing angle to exploit.

In the last few years, the wine industry has increasingly embraced a radical change that initially met with pessimism and snobbery: screw caps. Winemakers – and marketing companies – have been exploring new ways to change their packaging.

This outside-the-box thinking has resulted in an inside-the-box answer. Quality wines are slowly becoming “green.”

The capability of packaging quality wines at a reduced cost is having a major impact on traditional winemakers. I believe this will usher in a brave new world of improved packaging for quality wines (but not high-end wines). Consumers are becoming more demanding in their pursuit of ecologically sustainable purchases, including wine.

The weight of a case of wine in glass bottles is 40 pounds (or more) and is typically distributed 50-50 between the wine and the packaging, compared to paper and plastic containers, which are nearly half the weight with a distribution of 95-5 between the wine and the packaging. This results in a significant reduction in the raw materials utilized, the environmental impact and the transportation costs of wine.

So, what innovative packaging has hit the market over the last few years?

1. Flat Bottles. Garçon Wines of Great Britain produces a slimmer-down version of a plastic wine bottle. No wider than a traditional screwcap (less volume footprint) and much lighter than a glass bottle, it addresses two carbon footprint issues (notwithstanding the ecological issues of plastic recyclability).

2. Tetra Paks. This is the “Frugal bottle” is composed of 94 percent recycled paperboard around a food grade liner, similar to the bag inside boxed wine. According to the manufacturer it is up to five times lighter than a typical glass bottle and has a carbon footprint up to six times lower.

3. Single-serving Containers. The wine in a box, which comes in many shapes and sizes. The plastic “bag” in a cardboard, recyclable box preserves wine better than a bottle. It collapses around the wine, eliminating oxygen and thereby delaying oxidation and spoilage. Wines in opened boxes have a shelf life of 30 to 60 days, compared to 12 to 24 hours for bottles. Recently, a number of mass-market wine companies have embraced this technology and are producing much higher quality wines than in the past.

4. Single-serving Containers. The wine in a box has typically been marketed in one- to three-liter sizes for convenience. For today’s typical on-the-go consumer, a number of wines are available in single-serving pouches, the equivalent of kids’ juice boxes (replete with straw if you so desire).

The single-serving container trend has evolved into several alternatives. When hiking or picnicking, glass bottles can be cumbersome and even dangerous. Why not pack your wine in an aluminum can? Or an esthetically more pleasing aluminum bottle shape?

The hurdle facing winemakers and it’s huge – is the psychological image of an other-than-glass vessel containing an inferior drink for the masses. As more and more winemakers introduce quality wines in boxes, I think this image will change. How many of you turned up your noses when screw caps first came on the market?
